A BACKBONE SERVICE

With a Cumulative Value

Short subject producers are turning out several recognized brands of comedies. A release reaches a theatre every four or five weeks. To us this constitutes a backbone service which the alert showman can use to his advantage. There is a cumulative value in brand names.

—FILM DAILY.

There IS a cumulative value in comedy brand names. And Showmen ARE cashing in on it.

Prove it for yourself. Take the "BIG BOY"-JUVENILE COMEDIES, for example. See the latest picture made by this marvelous little youngster, "SHE'S A BOY". When you've seen it you'll know what a real drawing card this kid can be for you.

Then start a campaign to cash in on "Big Boy's" big popularity by arranging a Juvenile Comedies-Harmonica Playing Contest. Your Educational Exchange will tell you all about it. The accessories, the prizes, all the help you need, are FREE.

You'll do a big business during the contest. But—better still—every time during the rest of the season that you book and advertise a "BIG BOY"-JUVENILE COMEDY, that cumulative value will come back to you, bigger than ever.

and "jesse james"

¶ The alert, thrill-loving public of today is keen for Fred Thomson and his clean, dashing action pictures. They demanded a bigger field for their idol. Thomson longed for just such an opportunity. His affiliation with Paramount—and "Jesse James"—is the answer. ¶ First run theatres everywhere are proud to book and play "Jesse James." The leading long run houses of the country have it set. A big special in every sense of the word. Produced on "Covered Wagon" scale. With all the hair-trigger action, romance and thrilling stunts for which Thomson is beloved. Portraying a dare-devil, sympathetic hero more sinned against than sinning. ¶ And with, of course, "Silver King"—Thomson's fiery steed. Directed by Lloyd Ingraham. Story by Frank M. Clifton. Jesse E. James, biographer and technical advisor. Then another great special. And two super-Thomson features. ¶ Fred Thomson joins Harold Lloyd, Clara Bow, Richard Dix, Bebe Daniels, Beery and Hatton, Fields and Conklin, Adolphe Menjou, Thomas Meighan, Pola Negri, Emil Jannings, Esther Ralston, Florence Vidor, George Bancroft, Zane Grey and others in the brilliant galaxy of Paramount 100% stars!

The Spirit of the Motion Picture

Public Is With Screen, But Is the Screen With the Public?

By William A. Johnston

THE Roxy Theatre shows, for its first six months' period just recently ended, average receipts of over $105,000 a week.

Since this period covered the lean months of the year, it is now prophesied that the future average will run up to $120,000 a week. Certainly it should exceed $110,000.

Without going into further figures—which are unnecessary to prove the point—the Roxy Theatre today is without doubt the world's most successful theatre enterprise.

All of which is of exceeding interest and decidedly to the point—outside of the astounding fact that a year ago, and even seven months ago, the opinion was practically unanimous that this theatre was doomed to dire failure.

* * * *

When the Roxy Theatre days were darkest—about the time the steel was going up—this paper ventured the opinion that the theatre would succeed and be a great credit to the motion picture business. Evidently we were alone in our belief, for I find in my files a letter from Roxy, beginning with a fervent "God Bless You" and stating that our voice of encouragement was one in a wilderness of distrust.

Also, we had a lengthy and almost violent argument about this time with a banker who advanced many arguments against the success of such an enterprise, but chiefly the one that no theatre of such size and location could succeed without certain picture tie-ins.

* * * *

Well, the guesses were all wrong—just as they were when the Strand was opened; just as they were when the Capitol was opened; just as they always are when this business takes, in any form, a long stride forward and into the unexplored.

In the case of the Roxy we are not patting ourselves on the back because we happened to be right. We bring it up as an example, to introduce a most important question, namely: just how much do pictures count today in the present-day movie palace of the big cities?

And if not, why not?

* * * *

Perhaps the Roxy is not comparable to the other big city theatres. It has Roxy; it has unprecedented size; it runs under a tremendous budget (much larger than originally planned). All in all it is a big show in itself.

But out in Los Angeles, Harold Franklin has made a pronounced success with Al Jolson in person and is now out after John Barrymore and other celebrities at figures away above picture rental prices.

And in many a city today the warfare between rival theatres is devoted to performers' names, to bands and flash acts, rather than to pictures, excepting only the big ones.

Evidently, picture tie-ins are far from necessary to theatres these days.

And—what is more to the point—evidently the punch is not in the pictures.

* * * *

Now we all know that this is wrong, that things are off tangent—somewhere.

We do know that the populace of the world today is more interested than ever in motion pictures.

We know that "What Price Glory" sent

"Sunrise" and Movietone

AN extraordinary program is being offered at the Times Square Theatre, New York. It is filled with prophecy about the future of the industry; it foreshadows, more clearly than ever before, the way the perfect union of sound and silence will be brought about on the screen.

The preliminaries to "Sunrise" are a glorified news reel. Movietone brings Mussolini face to face with Americans as he speaks through the agency of the Fox-Case mechanism. Lifelike it is; amazingly lifelike. A set speech, of course, but the illusion brings the Dictator right into the theatre.

Building up to this, Movietone goes into the gardens of St. Peter's in Rome and brings over the Vatican choir; then turns to a graphic sound and sight glimpse of Italy's military power. Bands play and soldiers march; commands ring out; there is the clatter of cavalry hoofs on the pavement; on the Appian Way troops swing along in double time, singing as they approach you. Songs on battleships; songs in the shadow of the Coliseum.

All these revelations are grouped, with fine showmanship, under the title "Voices of Italy." A theme runs through the whole thing; admirably handled; pleasing and impressive; and mightily prophetic of the coming greater destiny of the motion picture.

There is an intermission. Then "Sunrise" follows. Murnau, director and camera magician, calls it "a song of two humans." You accept his description, because you are already in the mood of music. The first part of the program is carried over into the second because song and music have already been established as the dominating force of this night in the theatre.

Murnau tries the boldest of all screen experiments. He wishes to photograph the thoughts of his characters. To do this, the camera must, and does, become one of the players. It moves about as the characters move, in a thin story. But here the way the thing is done, not the thing itself, is everything.

At first, there is sombre tragedy, as the husband, under the power of the other woman, plans to drown his wife. That is all the "story" there is in the first sequences. He turns away from the crime. Presently, husband and wife realize their love again, after they are hurled into the city on a jolting trolley car down a mountainside. In a flash, and just at the right moment, Murnau switches from tragedy to comedy. Two peasants in the big city, so deeply interested in themselves that they get into all sorts of comic difficulties, including a complete traffic tie-up, as they stand in the middle of the street.

Meanwhile, Movietone, scored to the picture, has gone right along with Murnau's camera journey. In the traffic tie-up you hear the honks of horns from irate motorists; a touch of realism which brings you up with a sudden start as you realize that these, and similar sound effects, seem perfectly natural in a motion picture. Another prophetic glimpse of the coming greater destiny of the screen.

The march of the camera is taken up again; Movietone goes along, keeping time with drum-beat or love theme or comic note or tragic interlude as occasion requires.

"Sunrise" is an amazing picture. It is totally unlike anything ever done before. Nobody knows what its commercial fate will be. Thrown cold at an audience, it may falter at the box office. But in such a setting as that given it at the Times Square, it may well prove a success. In any event, it is a sincere, wholly artistic film, filled with touches of genius. It challenges showmanship of a new order, because the picture itself belongs to the new world of the screen.

And that new world, upon which the Fox forces have opened a huge window with their program at the Times Square, will be keyed to the perfect union of sound and silence in the motion picture.— Oscar Cooper.

Montford Steele Rejoins United Artists

Montford S. Steele, for five years associated with United Artists, has rejoined the company after a temporary severance of connection and sails for Paris on the S. S. Ile de France, September 30th, it was announced by Arthur W. Kelly, United Artists' Vice-President and General Manager of Foreign Distribution.

The recent filing of a claim against Steele, was due to a misunderstanding, said Mr. Kelly, and the suit accordingly has been withdrawn, the matter having been explained to the mutual satisfaction of both Mr. Steele and executives of United Artists. Mr. Kelly said that after an extended trip through South America, Mr. Steele went to Europe and from Paris cabled United Artists in New York his resignation from the post of foreign sales manager. Pending receipt of acceptance of his resignation, Mr. Steele did not forward his expense account; and as United Artists' cable accepting his resignation was mislaid and never received by Steele, the company, naturally, did not hear from him. Hence United Artists instituted the suit demanding an account.

Mr. Kelly said that when Mr. Steele learned of this action he returned to New York immediately, settled his accounts, and was invited to rejoin United Artists. He accepted and his departure for Paris on the S. S. Ile De France is made in continuance of his work in the distribution of United Artists' pictures in the foreign field.

"In fairness to Montford Steele," said Mr. Kelly, "I want it understood that not only has the suit, instituted after the unfortunate misunderstanding, been withdrawn, but that United Artists has given concrete evidence of its regret in the whole matter by re-engaging Mr. Steele."

Lee Shubert Purchases Plymouth Theatre, Boston

Sale of the Plymouth Theatre on Stuart street, Boston, together with two adjoining parcels of land, from the estate of Alexander Cochrane to Lee Shubert of New York City, was completed this week and the deeds recorded. The purchase makes Mr. Shubert one of the largest property owners in Boston, he having bought the Copley Theatre and seven other parcels of business property in Boston during the past year. The Plymouth Theatre parcel is assessed at $485,500, of which $327,800 is on 15,679 feet of land. Although Mr. Shubert has made no announcement of his plans, it has been rumored that he plans to build two theatres on the 11 parcels of property he now owns on Stuart street, one of which theatres will be a de luxe motion picture theatre.

Associated Theatres of O. Ceasing Operation

The office of Associated Theatres of Ohio, Film Exchange Bldg. is closed. Although no definite information has been secured, it is stated that Associated Theatres of Ohio has ceased operations. This was the company formed more than a year ago by Charles L. Casanave for the purpose of doing combined booking for independently owned theatres. He was booking for about thirty houses in northern Ohio when he closed the office.

Straight to the Newspapers

LAST week we called your attention to what we believe will be the most useful book ever put out in this field:

Motion Picture News Booking Guide and Studio Directory, to be published in October.

It will go to our complete exhibitor circulation, of course: it will also go to every newspaper with a photoplay department.

The newspaper is the place where the public gets in most convenient form its information about pictures and picture personalities, at the time when the public is in an entertainment buying mood. The newspaper tells the public what pictures are showing, when and where.

It is therefore the most important publication avenue from the theatre to the public.

What the exhibitor wants is definite, practical material of a service type to help him sell entertainment to the public: and, most importantly, to help him sell through the newspaper.

Some film companies don't seem to be able to grasp this fact. It is, nevertheless, a fact and a very important one. It is also a fact that the trade paper is, or should be, the service avenue from the distributor to the public, via the exhibitor.

That's exactly the mission of Motion Picture News Booking Guide and Studio Directory in its broadest usefulness.

It will contain picture information and personality information, in one book, indexed and arranged in such manner that both the exhibitor and the photoplay editor can make use of it speedily and effectively.

It will be an ever ready, every week Publicity Encyclopedia on current motion pictures.

It will be the constant press agent of pictures and people.

It will furnish practical information on pictures and personalities for newspaper use.

And if that is not constructive service by the trade paper in helping merchandise pictures to the public, what would be?

Colin A. Hollister

Maybe Norma Shearer (now Mrs. Irving Thalberg) is waiting for hubby. Besides getting married she's been busy in "The Student Prince" for M-G-M.

Beautiful, but dumb. Keen Thompson, comedy constructor discovers this of Louise Brooks between scenes of Paramount's "Now We're in the Air."

Sally O'Neil looks Western, and then, again, she doesn't. She's starred in "The Lovelorn," a Cosmopolitan production and M-G-M release.

Art Goebel, Universal and International Newsreel flyer welcomed to Universal City following Dole flight success.

Gloria Swanson gets the lowdown from a native. United Artists star is acquiring all the necessary atmosphere for "Sadie Thompson," her newest vehicle.

June Collyer has won stardom with Fox and will be featured in several forthcoming pictures.

Mervyn Le Roy, First National's youngest director in pictures, receives a gift from Jack Dempsey. They are the gloves Jack used in his successful comeback with Jack Sharkey.

Audrey Ferris is said to inject a lot of Jazz with Al Jolson in "The Jazz Singer" for Warner Bros.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

"THE STUDENT PRINCE," as brought to the screen by Ernst Lubitsch, captures almost perfectly the Heidelberg atmosphere as background for a romantic love story, very thin in itself, but charming.

The achievement of Director Lubitsch, considering the material with which he worked, is noteworthy. The acting honors are not captured by the two leading players—Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer—but by Jean Hersholt as the Prince's old tutor.

The box-office vitality of the picture is yet to be tested. It has many points in its favor, but, on the whole, it does not impress us as one of the biggest pictures of the year.

THE hunt for new faces finds a sturdy opponent in Chester B. Bahn, dramatic critic of The Syracuse Herald, whose comments on screen matters are always vigorous and pointed whether you agree with him or not.

He declares that many a stellar discard is worth a dozen movie "finds" or a dozen sleek foreign importations. Says Mr. Bahn:

"If you are familiar with the trend of things cinematic, you hardly need be told that the producing organizations, both large and small, have been industriously reaching out o' late for fresh faces as substitutes for the screen's veterans.

"Seek an explanation in producing circles, and you will be met with glib chatter about the insatiable demand for youth. You will be reminded that fans and critics, wearied by the unceasing stram of pictures starring Mary Blah, Tom Whoozit and Bill Oshkosh, have been crying loudly and long for a change of facial fare. You will be told, oh, so very seriously, that the public is fickle, and that it behooves the wary producer to prepare for, if not to anticipate, a change in box office fancy.

"That these various reasons are plausible goes without saying; that they may play some part in the matter, I am willing to admit. But by the same token, I am convinced that a more honest explanation would be a simple statement to the effect that a financial hand is wielding the Hollywood axe. Meaning, brethren and sisters, that fresh faces are being introduced chiefly because they can be purchased more economically in the cinematic market.

"I am more than half convinced that the critical revolt, and fan rebellion, too, may be safely attributed not to familiar screen faces but to formula plots, stereotyped characterizations and bromidic story treatments. Mentally befogged by the screen fare they have been fed, picture patrons have singled out the player as their target, permitting the real menace to slip by.

"Coming down to cases, isn't it a fact that the fall of a favorite is due, nine times out of ten, to his or her appearance in a string of poor pictures? Few players, mighty few, are blessed with sufficient art to emerge triumphant, by virtue of their performance, from a faulty story."

THE radio broadcast of the Dempsey-Tunney fight on the night of September 22 cost one of Broadway's picture palaces the neat sum of $3,000 in ticket admission losses. What it cost all the picture theatres of he country will never actually be known, but it must have run into a large sum.

The Broadway house in question could tell almost to the second when the patronage took a sharp drop; there was nobody in the lobby and seats were vacant all over the theatre.

People, in the majority, stay home to hear fight broadcasts or go to somebody else's home. Thus, radio on special occasions is definitely a competitor of the picture theatre.

IN general, however, radio has not cut into picture theatre grosses, as the alarmists thought it would. People seek entertainment in crowds; and the motion picture appears to have a firmer hold than ever—that is, the good picture, properly presented.

By a curious irony, the Dempsey-Tunney boxing show itself was deprived of a lot of cash customers because of radio, according to Tex Rickard, who plaintively informed one of the newspapers that he feared the day would come when the only persons present at a boxing bout would be the fighters, the officials, and the reporters.

WE have heard a great deal about economy, but much of it seems to assume the form of gestures or false moves which have to be taken back later.

One specific example of real economy has, however, come to our notice recently. It is the record of Universal's department of Westerns, under the supervision of William Lord Wright.

OUR authority for the Wright achievement is Hollywood Filmograph, which says:

"Listen to this, ye Economists!

"Two years ago the U spent thousands of dollars for serial stories. This year there was no story cost—the Department 'building 'em better than they can be bought.' Every serial was built by William Lord Wright, supervisor of Westerns, with his staff of writers. The record for the past two years are ten serials. Every serial has come under estimate. This, in spite of the fact that serials are the trickiest of products, as they continue indefinitely in production, have few 'cover' sets, have bad weather to fight and costs to combat.

"Besides the serials, the Western Department has turned out fifty-two two-reel thrillers—all of which were built in the Department by Mr. Wright and his staff of writers—and these were in continuity ready to shoot before production actually started. Every two-reeler has been made under estimate!

"To the above program of serials and two-reelers can be added twenty-six one-reel comedies—tough product to make—all built in the Department by Mr. Wright and staff writers. There were no gag men, no story conferences, no delay of production because of lack of script, and these were made under estimate!

"Last, but not least, twenty-five five-reel thrillers, featuring two or three western stars, were turned out by Mr. Wright and his writers. These though started in the rainy season and being types of stories ninety per cent exteriors, were brought in under estimate and were made 'fast and fancy.'

"What is the secret that makes possible such a schedule? Ask Mr. Wright and he will tell you 'Personal contact with directors and writers.' In other words, have the director work with the supervisor and the writers on his stories, which prevents handing the megaphone wielder a cold script. Also, he adds: 'Prepare commercial scripts with proper footage; the utilization of standing sets, and a strict absence of crowded 'story conferences' and varied 'treatments'; and, above all, having sure-fire stories in advance of continuities, thus overcoming time and expense between stories while the director is waiting for material."

"This year's serial program, five of them, were put into continuity simultaneously, which meant one hundred reels of business was ready to shoot before a crank was turned. Every script is carefully estimated and the directors shoot per script.

"Among other things turned out by the Western Department were the first series of 'Collegians'—all Junior Jewels—and all made under estimate!

"This is the way to practice Economy. Anybody can do it—it's just knowing how!

FOR abolishing the time-killing and picture-killing conference nuisance, Mr. Wright deserves a permanent place in the Movie Hall of Fame.

THE theatre owners of the Northwest are looking forward to a period of good business as a direct result of the general prosperity which is evident in that part of the country. In Minnesota one sign of this prosperity is the fact that the state has now entered the billion dollar class in industrial output. Minnesota is now in twelfth place among the states in industry, owing to the valuation of $1,101,855,641 which has been placed on the products of 105 industrial plants in the state. This increased valuation of industrial products, combined with increased valuation of farm products, will, of course, cause an increase in ticket window receipts in the state.

In North Dakota the theatre owners are looking forward to a good season also and are preparing by installing new equipment, building new theatres and remodeling old ones. The big increase in farm output in North Dakota this year is reflected in greater bank deposits, in good business for the merchants and consequently in increasing patronage even the redoubtable Roxy up to $144,000 a week.

Sit in any theatre today, even those with the most pretentious presentations, and you will note the unmistakable surge of interest when the featured picture goes on. Unfortunately, it is probably the interest of anticipation rather than a surety of realization.

And, all in all, we are forced to the belief that the spirit of the public is with the motion picture, but the spirit of the motion picture is not with the public.

Why?

That's a hefty question.

Whoever answers it will be quite some pumpkins in the business of picture theatre entertainment.

Perhaps the new era of picture entertainment will be a combination of motion photography and sound. Please note and ponder over our review, in this issue, of the remarkable offering of "Sunrise" and the Movietone.

Perhaps pictures are badly advertised.

Perhaps the quality of the picture simply isn't there.

There is one thing we do know, that Hollywood spends enough money to put a punch into its pictures.

It must be a pretty puzzle to a banker when he tries to balance these two facts: (1) that Hollywood is spending over $120,000,000 a year making pictures and (2) that it is necessary to employ eminent stage personalities, bands, revues—all the best the stage affords at a price the stage cannot afford—to put the picture over.

It would seem to be a good deal of a business paradox.

Hollywood has a big responsibility, these days.

Where does the $120,000,000 go? Certainly not into the pictures.

And where will the $120,000,000 a year continue to come from? Certainly not from the earnings of the pictures—if most of the gate receipts are spent for other attractions.

It's about time to write the truth about Hollywood.

"My Best Girl"

Reviewed by Edwin Schallert

Editor of The Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 24.—If Mary Pickford set out to produce a popular type of picture with "My Best Girl," it would seem that star of long consistent favor has aptly succeeded. This light-hearted Cinderella tale of a little stock-room girl, employed in a five-and-ten-cent store, will renew and perhaps even augment the appeal that she has rather persistently held at the box-office. There have been rumors, to be sure, that Mary's pictures have been lagging somewhat in their magnetic attraction, and that she suffered an especial reversal with the rather heavy, though worthy, "Sparrows." But quite evidently, "My Best Girl" is designed with the aim to invite and to please the large coterie of fans who have always been devoted to her adventures along the bypaths of comedy and sentiment.

"My Best Girl" is not on this account a pattern Pickford feature. It is not one of those films in which she mothers a huge flock of youngsters, and gives a superabundant place to slapstick.

Primarily, a Love Story

Primarily this is a love story, and if it is the improbable love story of the poor little maiden who fell in love with the rich man's son it is done in a high vein of entertainment. The cast, too, with Charles Rogers, the juvenile particularly prominent, is meritoriously selected, and there is much rich humor afforded by Lucien Littlefield and Sunshine Hart in the roles of Mary's father and mother.

The direction of "My Best Girl" is credited to Sam Taylor. For several years he was associated with Harold Lloyd, and the comedy points in Mary Pickford's film are amazingly well put over. The story itself was written by Kathleen Norris. Through the "best girl" campaign conducted in various large cities the picture has received considerable exploitation.

Virtually Every Foot Diverting

Virtually every foot of the film is in some wise diverting. A few of the more hokumish scenes are trying on one's intellectual fibre, and particularly strained seems the dinner partaken of by the girl at the rich man's home, even though every effort has been expended in treating this deftly to enhance its conviction.

There is great fun in Mary's attempts to manage her family and keep her wayward sister out of trouble. This is all very human. There is one scene in the night police court where the sister is on trial that is a high spot of merriment, blended with feeling, when Mary pleads fiercely for her sister's freedom while her father and mother gaze on amazed but with dawning admiration, and Mack Swain as a baffled but affected judge succumbs to her entreaties.

Mary's "Pa" and "Ma" contribute liberally to the fun on every occasion—"Pa" with his ingenious attempts to keep his spouse from her habitual fainting spells with diligent application of smelling salts, and "Ma" with her inevitable tearfulness, and custom of going to funerals as a social pastime.

The opening scenes are very clever, with high lights on customers trading in the five-and-ten. The finish is an auto chase through downtown streets to catch the honeymoon boat to Honolulu, interspersed with humor for which Littlefield is again chiefly responsible. Certainly this picture should do much to give him a place as "comedy relief," while the sympathy of Rogers' portrayal will endear him to nearly all audiences. It can be assumed that most audiences will greatly enjoy this picture.

British M. P. Advertisers Hear Address by Author

Following the customary lull of the summer months, the British Motion Picture Advertisers resumed their monthly meetings Wednesday, September 7. A large gathering of advertising and press men attended the meeting, which probed deeply into the question of the book tie-up, and listened to an address by Jeffreys Farnol, novelist and speaker of the occasion.

A particularly aggressive program is said to be contemplated by the B. M. P. A. and a number of social entertainments will be launched, as in the past. A Grand Open Bump, which has been fixed for early December at the Hotel Cecil, London, will be included in these get-together affairs.

The retirement of W. A. Northam, vice-chairman of the body, upon the resumption of his associations with "The Cinema," led to his office becoming vacant. W. F. Husband, the London press and advertising manager of Tiffany, who was recently elected secretary, was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy. H. Burgess of Ideal will take over secretarial duties.

Sees Films of Missing Brother's Take-Off

What may be termed an epitaph by the movies way witnessed by a mean and his wife down in Florida. The subject of the film was the take-off of the lamented Old Glory and it was witnessed by W. R. Hill, Florida fruit grower and brother to J. D. Hill, who has been chalked up as missing following the disappearance of the plane, which also contained Lloyd Bertraud and Philip Payne. Missing the showing of the reel at the Williamson Theatre in Winter Haven, Florida, Mr. Hill sought out F. E. Williamson, the proprietor of the house, and saw the last glimpses of his brother in the theatre the following morning, his wife being the only other spectator in the theatre at the time. There was no organ to play a requiem during the unreeling of the news reel in the silent halls of the Williamson, but perhaps the audience of two were affected by what they saw as no audience has ever been before.

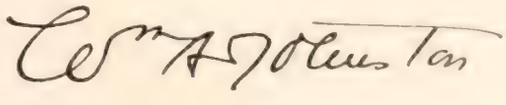
THE atmospheric theatre, its place in modern showmanship and the principles upon which its creator, John Eberson, evolved this unique style of architecture, is the subject of one of our feature articles for the month. In connection with the atmospheric theatre an interesting question has arisen. This is concerned with future developments in many cities, including New York.



In view of the place which the atmospheric theatre now holds as an attraction for the public, and the fact that every other element of showmanship has been exploited in New York, has given rise to the opinion, expressed in many quarters, that the next picture theatre to be built on Broadway will be of the atmospheric type. To which our reaction is, "And why not?" Few are the ideas that have "caught on" with experienced showmen as the atmospheric theatre has, particularly after its first comprehensive introduction to the trade in this country and abroad—which, by the way, was done under the auspices of this publication in an issue of THE BUYERS' GUIDE.

THE latest move of the First National advertising department, the introduction of a new accessory in the form of block one-sheets designed for display in panels and frames used in the modern theatres, will be watched with considerable interest. If these posters realize the ambition which has prompted their introduction, and thus effect a saving for the theatre by replacing the specially made and somewhat expensive block posters now so generally used, an extension of the practice is likely to follow, either as a voluntary move on the part of distributors or in response to demand.

WE present a new periodical service with the Theatre Building Business Map and analysis of new construction and theatre attendance with the issue now in your hands. New building projects continue to live up to the forecast for 1927 published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last December. And theatre attendance, as shown on the map, continues to provide the most convincing argument in the world against fears of over-seating.

THE MAYFAIR THEATRE

A rarely advantageous location for a theatre designed along modern lines with respect to exterior as well as interior architecture. Above a view of the Mayfair theatre, Asbury Park.

IT is rarely the case that a theatre with a beautiful exterior is so fortunate as to have a setting so harmonious to its design and enhancing to its effect and beauty as the Mayfair Theatre at Asbury Park. Built on a street that skirts the "gondola lake" at this Jersey coast resort, the Mayfair finds full expression for the old world charm which distinguishes the exterior as well as the interior of this picturesque playhouse, a modern American adaptation from the Hispano-Mexican architecture.

The Mayfair was built by Walter Reade, and is one of the chain of theatres in New Jersey which he operates. Thomas W. Lamb, architect of New York, designed this exceptionally attractive playhouse.

The façades of the theatre, facing St. James Place and Lake Avenue, abound in richly sculptured polychromed terra cotta embellishments set against a background of Spanish stucco. The gracefully rising tower of the old Spanish castles gives added interest and beauty to the ensemble.

The gondola lake provides a foreground to the picture, with reflected images of the interesting outline and decorative features of the architecture. The color blending of the edifice is enhanced by the constant glow of electric flood lights so arranged as to conceal the source of the brightness, which emphasizes the beauty of design and craftsmanship. At the mezzanine level there is an elaborate portico promenade with richly ornamented colonnettes and arches, a feature which enhances the exterior and provides an open air lounge, overlooking the lake.

But the beauty and charm of the exterior is matched in its picturesque appeal to the eye and surpassed in atmospheric quality by the interior of the Mayfair.

Greeted by a massive stone marquee one enters the lavishly appointed lobby. The interior is faced with imported marble of warm color blends. It is highly attractive in its dignified stateliness. Passing the lobby one finds himself in the grand foyer.

Here is revealed the majestic splendor embodying every known device of the decorative arts of Spanish palaces of the 17th Century. Spacious, of pleasing proportions, attractive in every detail of artistry, it arrests attention by bejeweled, hand-wrought iron fixtures of exquisite design, floor carpet with entertaining figures and softly blended colors. A feature of special attraction is the replica of an old Spanish well. It is finely executed and essentially a utility serving as a drinking fountain.

From the Foyer access is obtained to the main auditorium orchestra floor through decorated iron doors enriched with cast iron ornaments of Spanish design, and to the mezzanine and balcony by the aid of a grand stairway, which is terminated with lighting console, radiating soft hues of all colors in the spectrum. The vista of columns, vaulted ceiling arches, screens depicting motives of artistic tendencies of the renowned period, escutcheons with coat-of-arms, rare tapestries and silk embroidered hangings gracefully draping from balustraded balconies on the mezzanine promenade, occasional pieces of furniture set against a background of architectural environments complete the composition of mastery attained in presentation of the most alluring Grand Foyer.

The auditorium and balcony, accommodating more than 2,000 patrons, are treated as an open patio with a skyline ceiling high above the floors.

Facing the audience is the splendor of the proscenium arch. Generous in decorative features of Spanish art, rising to the height of the ceiling in graceful formation, it is resplendent with a silk gold embroidered curtain, and illumination by concealed lighting effects.

Immediately adjoining at the side of the proscenium arch are the proscenium stage boxes, enriched with appointments of 17th century castles. Flanked on both sides of the auditorium are numerous features of patio reproductions arranged in harmony with the attractions at the proscenium. The entire auditorium is treated in old walnut, and gold leaf high lights applied to decorative features. The skyline ceiling is painted in silvre. It is on the ceiling that one can see moving clouds and piercing lights.

The theatre is equipped with all devices conducive to artistic presentations. All devices are electricallly-operated and safeguarded with fire-preventing appliances.

Description of the theatre will not be complete without mention of the mezzanine promenade and the comfort rooms arranged on this floor.

At one extreme end of the promenade is the Ladies' Lounge room decorated in the style of Louis XV with furnishings for the comfort of patrons. Adjoining this room is the cosmetic parlor of brilliancy and lavishness in accessories for the use of present-day make-up.

The men's smoking room of conservative and dignified treatment is at the other end of the promenade.

The mezzanine promenade, being the upper part of the Grand Foyer, is furnished along same lines as the latter, except that rich furnishings of period design as more numerous.

Nor have the performers been overlooked in provisions of comfort and pleasant surroundings. The conventional green room is there for reception and recreation.

Every modern convenience is included in the appointments and furnishings of the Mayfair. In this regard it lives up to the best standards of the de luxe theatre of today, wherein the comfort and welfare of the patrons are of paramount importance.

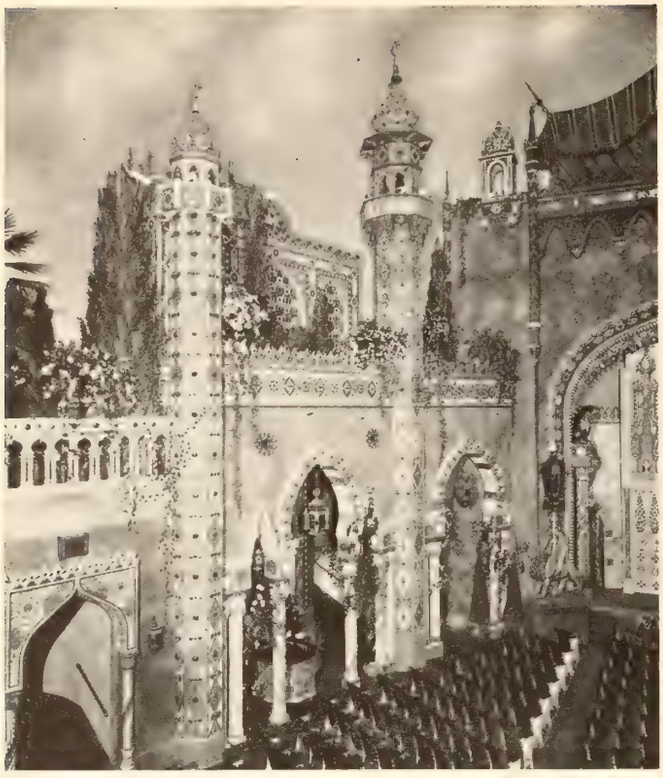
The splendidly finished quality which features every phase covered in the design, execution and equipment of the playhouse is carried to such details as the projection room. Here are contained the latest model projectors with such accessory equipment as is necessary to the lighting effects and presentation features of the high class cinema programs. The projection machines and the other apparatus in the booth have been enameled in grey, and the arrangement has its appeal from the viewpoint of the casual observer as well as the engineer. The booth is open to inspection of the public by means of windows, through which the interior is disclosed to public view at specified times.

Modern heating and ventilation apparatus has been installed. Auditorium chairs, and the furniture with which all of the public rooms and lounges are equipped, are of the finest materials and of a design which harmonize with the general plan and color scheme of the Mayfair.

Thus, in every detail of architecture, decoration, equipment and service facilities, the Mayfair takes its place among the outstanding motion picture theatres of this country.



The policy under which it is operated calls for straight picture presentations with musical acompaniments and special features.

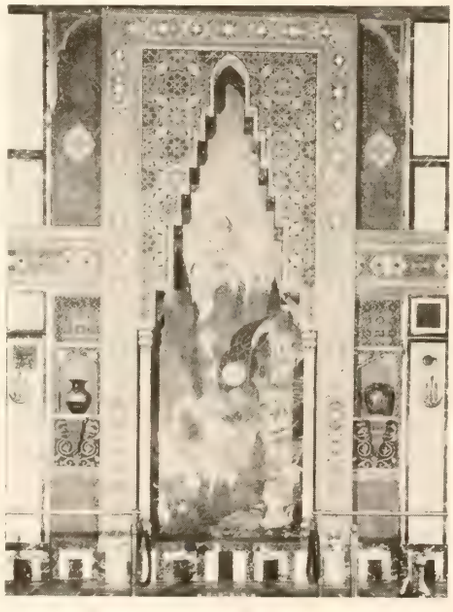
BLENDING ART AND SHOWMANSHIP



The Atmospheric Theatre Originated by John Eberson an Outgrowth of a New Industrial Development

THAT the atmospheric theatre is answering a rapidly growing demand in present theatrical needs would seem to be evidenced by the continued success of many playhouses constructed in accordance with the principles of the original conception in this unique architectural style.

Indeed, it has been remarked by many observers that the atmospheric type of theatre has establised itself as a popular attraction, an element of showmanship which eventually will find its place in the theatrical scheme of a majority of our American cities. No less important theatrical center than Broadway itself is singled out as one of the examples cited by those arguing this view. They ask a ponderable question somewhat in this manner:

"Can the expenditure of large sums of money, showmanship ingenuity or architectural idea other than the atmospheric theatre, accomplish the contrast and fundamental distinction needed to capture and sustain the interest of a public regaled as is the Broadway populace by sheer lavishness, excellent specimens of architectural achievements along formal lines, and varied types of elaborate entertainments?"

The question is an intriguing one for the theatre man. For within the comparatively small area comprising the Broadway theatrical district there are picture theatres which reach for distinction in every conceivable direction —size, style, design, decoration, lavish appointments, service features and entertainment policies have been exploited vigorously and in an infinite variety of combinations.

On the right—one of the mosaics designed by Charles Morgan, and a feature of the inner foyer of the Avalon theatre.

It is only in a general adherence to the formal method of architectural execution that the Broadway theatres thus far have failed to break through all boundaries in the effort to be different one from the other, and excel one another in features calculated to compel the interest and patronage of theatregoers. Thus it would appear that the only course open to the builder of the next theatre for Broadway lies in the direction of the atmospheric playhouse.

The first expression of the atmospheric idea in theatre architecture came with the completion of the Majestic theatre in Houston, Texas. This playhouse, which still flourishes as one of the best patronized theatres in that town, was built ten years ago. It provided the first practical demonstration of the unique principle evolved by John Eberson.

With the building of the Capitol theatre in Chicago, in which Eberson brought his original design to a high point of perfection, the atmospheric theatre first attracted the widespread attention and interest which it now

Eberson's latest production, the Avalon theatre located in Chicago's South Side district, is perhaps the most compelling of any he has designed. Certainly it reveals in a striking manner the method which distinguishes his productions.

In the Avalon he has departed from the Italian and Spanish styles which he used almost exclusively in his previous works, and created a Persian garden as the auditorium setting. This style as well as the Italian and Spanish lends itself to the fundamental principles upon which the architect's idea is based.

There are two factors underlying the atmospheric conception developed by Eberson. First is the thought that the theatre building itself cannot be considered as something apart from the show. Secondly is the very practical consideration, the economic, which is the factor of cost.

Seeking an answer to the first problem, Eberson concluded that since it is the search for brightness and illusion that draws the public to the theatre, the theatre itself should take a definite part in accomplishing this end. Thus he decided to emulate the stage in creating illusion by means of atmosphere that stimulates the emotions—but p l e a s a n t emotions only. With a natural flair for color he was equipped with a natural resource and talent to accomplish his purpose in this direction.

Color is the first thing to be noticed and the first to attract attention. It is the avenue through which the artist arrests the interest and leads the spectator to a study and appreciation of other details of a composition. This factor induced the architect to seek his inspiration among the productions of the Mediterranean countries and the Orient. To further the illusion he created an atmosphere of restfulness and pleasurable relaxation by designing auditoriums of a garden or outdoor effect, using the façades and walls of ancient castles and gardens for side-wall treatments, and a domed ceiling, artistically illuminated, to simulate the blue sky above them.

To accomplish these effects at a minimum cost it was necessary to adapt architectural styles which depended for their color and attractiveness upon the modeling and texturing of surfaces rather than the employment of decorative detail requiring materials obtainable only at a great expense today.

A critical examination of these Eberson theatres reveals a strict adherence to the original conception of the atmospheric idea. This is emphasized by the fact that many imitative works, naturally further removed from the original inspiration, branch off in directions which have, in many instances, carried them far afield not only from the true atmospheric form developed by Eberson but from sound practices of theatre design. It is significant that these imitative works have produced the only failures artistically and commercially charged against the atmospheric theatre.

In creating the atmosphere of romance richly flavored with a playful spirit, Eberson reaches deep into the resources of detail. To the most minute detail of color, form, texture and decoration he imparts elements which contribute to the illusion sought in his designs.

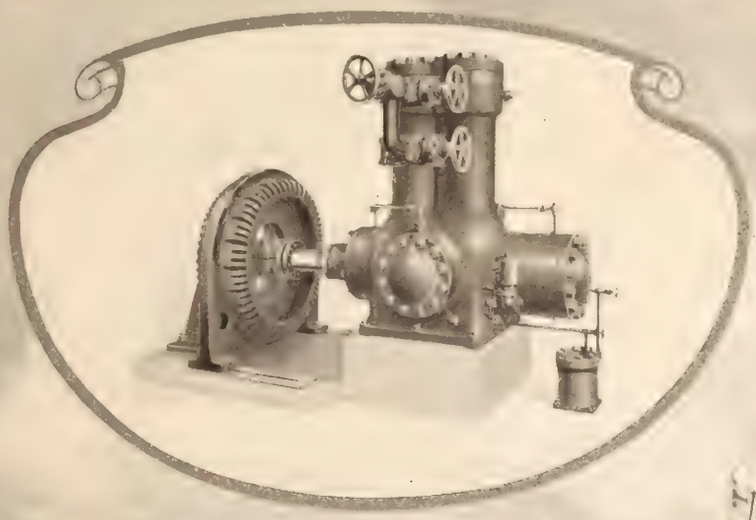
The liberties he takes with his original models are all in the interest of the atmosphere and illusion necessary to give the theatre a broad appeal. The complete works are like mosaics constructed according to a well conceived and carefully executed plan based upon a formula blending showmanship with art. In this are the elements of color, form, decoration, lighting and variety. The use of so much color and so much detail can achieve a happy issue only when to the smallest item as well as the largest there is imparted an affinity based upon harmony of style, character and color.

There is an endless parade of variety of detail and decoration in one of these Eberson theatres. Even in the "baby atmospheric theatre" which he built in Grand Island, Mich., there is a wealth of detail and a changing scene that holds new surprises and sustained interest for the spectator. He is the arch enemy of repetition. Duplication he probably regards a sin. His passion for a changing scene capable of holding the interest of the casual observer led him to design what amounts to a panorama as an enclosure for his auditorium.

The right sidewall presents a different view from that of the left one, but there is balance just the same, owing to an ingenious application of harmony to dissymmetry. This treatment supplies a happy vehicle for his achievements in lighting, particularly side lighting, of which he is an acknowledged master.

Possibly it is the variety of scene coupled with the accuracy of the ensemble in recreating the spirit of the original models which accounts for the permanency of these atmospheric theatres—at first regarded by some as something of a novelty with the inherent weakness of all novelties, which is a short life, but now proved to be as enduring in their appeal to theatregoers as the formal styles.

Critics who make a searching study of the Avalon theatre would hesitate to contest the viewpoint that in this glittering example of the atmospheric style the architect has produced one of the richest examples of Oriental architecture and decoration to be found in any building standing today. The theatre is steeped in the artistic traditions and productions of the Orient. Its motives and the many elaborate details of decoration tell an interesting story of the ancient desert peoples.



There is the "flirtation window," located at the end of the inner foyer at the mezzanine level—a replica of the stone grilles through which the harem women gazed upon fragmentary events of life outside the seraglio.

The most resplendent decorative feature—the sacred Persian rug, done in rich colors and studded with jewels, as was the model from which it was copied—has a bit of amusing history.

This rug is reproduced on the ceiling in the main foyer. Eberson elected to put it there after reading an anecdote which told about a sacred rug housed in a temple of worship. Those who came to worship gave emphasis to their religious fervor by kissing this rug, studded with many gems. The rug was kissed until many worn spots appeared on its surface and the custodian of the temple in the course of examining it discovered to his astonishment and dismay that many of the jewels were missing. It appeared that some of the alleged worshipful while kissing the rug saw to it that their teeth closed over a jewel and thus removed it from its setting, eventually salaaming their way out of the temple with the gems in their mouths. Then it was decided to display the rug in a frame protected by glass. So Eberson decided to put his jeweled rug up on the ceiling out of reach and at a safe distance from any who might be tempted as were worshippers at the temple of the sacred rug in Persia.

The lighting fixtures are of Persian design, crescents suspended from metal chains and bearing three candles, while

Proper Carpeting a Requisite of Effective Decoration

Design, Color and Wearing Qualities are Main Factors to be Considered in Selecting Floor Coverings for Theatres

ARCHITECTS generally will agree to the logic of the statement—although all may not actually practice the principle that it embodies—that character is given to the design of a building by the purpose which that particular building is to serve. In this way, and in this way only, can individuality find expression in architectural design. It is, however, the custom in this country to choose at the very outset, without regard to reason, that particular one of the old historic styles or periods our design is to be fashioned after. Individuality is thus entirely eliminated and originality or creative ability finds no opportunity for expression.

Some may offer as an excuse the fact that the purpose of a building is not always sharply defined, especially at that stage when it is still on the draughting board. As regards the theatre, however, with which we are here especially concerned, there is no such excuse to offer. It is, ever and always, a house of entertainment. Generally speaking, we understand the purpose of the theatre is to allow its patrons to live for an hour or two in the land of make believe and romance. And yet we must not overlook the distinction between the stage and the theatre. Actually, the entertainment is entirely a stage affair. So it may better be said of the theatre that it is a house in which one is entertained, rather than a house that entertains. This eliminates the theatrical quality from the design of the theatre proper immediately. Theatrical is a word that means something that apepars to be what it is not, "effects," "something unreal." Those are all qualities that have no place in architecture.

The theatre really bears no direct relaton to the entertainment on the stage, but it can and should, by its architectural and decorative design, instill in its patrons the spirit of romance so that they may enjoy to the utmost the performance depicted on the stage. It is the problem of the architect to determine what manner of design will arouse that spirit of romance. Theatre owners have put a somewhat different interpretation on the problem. Considering it from a psychological viewpoint, they claim that the favorite picture house of the "movie fan" is the one which gives him the greatest thrill. Twenty-five years ago, when it was considered a luxury to attend the theatre, which the average person could, only, once in six months or so, the theatre-goer was thrilled by the luxuriousness of the theatre, just as he is thrilled today. Our idea of luxury has somewhat changed during this last quarter century. Thus has the element of luxury entered into the design of the theatre. In fact, the idea of thrilling the public by luxurious splendor has taken such a hold of theatre architects generally that simple principles have been discarded or relegated to an insignificant position.

On the left, a stairway landing in the Paramount theatre, New York, showing a "Hartford-Saxony" carpet in a Conventionalized Akanthos design colored in gol dand blue on a red ground.

As in the design of other types of building, the old styles and periods are frequently called upon for ideas and inspiration. In order to distinguish the design of the theatre from other buildings, as if to give, finally, individuality to the design, those styles are most frequently employed for the theatre which are sel-

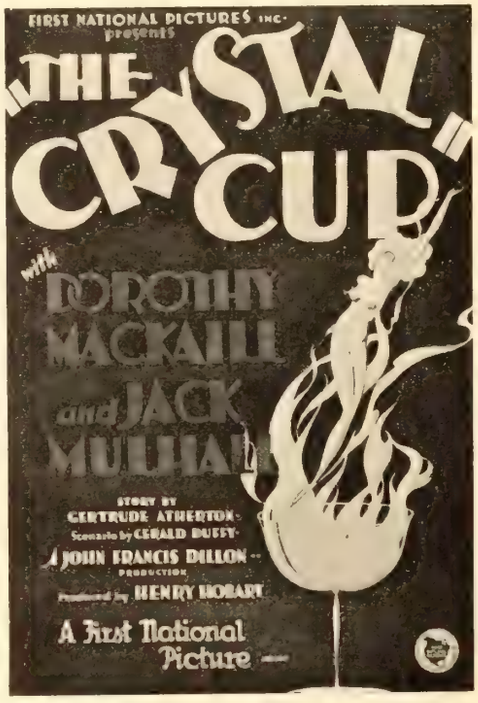
Block One-Sheets a New Theatre Accessory

First National Will Include Special De Luxe Posters for Lobby Display Frames on All Forthcoming Productions

OF all the motion picture advertising accessories the poster is the most used and most abused. And there is good reason for this condition, which on the surface seems to belong among the strange and baffling situations which exist in the business. It is because the poster is much used for a great variety of purposes that it is the subject of so many kicks. There is demanded of it a versatility not expected of any other accessory, not even the cuts and mats for newspaper layouts.



One of the problems of the poster has been solved by the First National advertising department. The problem attacked is that concerned with the use—or lack of use—of the stock one-sheet in lobby display panels and frames. Since the regular type of one-sheet, widely used for outside billing, has been conspicuous by its absence from the lobbies of the better theatres—most of which are put to the expense of making their own block one-sheets—there was a problem here which intrigued the First National advertising chiefs. The solution has been accomplished by the simple process of adding a special one-sheet to the regular line of accessories on all pictures distributed by the company.

These block one sheets, designed primarily for exhibition in the theatre lobby, seem certain of providing a money-saving service for the theatre man.

Judging by all that has been said for and against posters in the past, the new First National accessory should meet with widespread approval, and possibly result in an extension of the practice.

Since the aim was to produce one-sheets that would be suitable for lobby display, a study was made of the type of poster most extensively used in panels and frames at theatres in various cities of the country. This check showed that special theatre posters had a marked similarity of style and fundamental idea as to lettering, layout and illustration. With this as a model, the First National advertising department called in artists specializing in this style of commercial art and thus laid down the fundamentals upon which all of the special one-sheets are to be produced.

These posters are all to follow along the lines of simplicity and suppression of detail in their illustration and lettering. They are of the modern type so generally popular, striving for concentrated display of title and stars' names, and having the de luxe appearance sought in display material for the lobby panels of the modern theatre.

Such treatment, of course, excludes photographic reproduction of scenes or portraits. These one-sheets are in flats, flat colors on flat grounds with little or no use of stipple. The illustrations are drawings, of strong outline and devoid of any detail unnecessary to an impressionistic scene or portrait. Vivid and strongly contrasting colors are used to give the posters attraction and interest values.

The lettering is kept down to a minimum. The title and the star's name are stressed in large letters of contrasting color values. Supplemental billing is carried in hues that are complements of the ground color.

The block sheets thus far prepared—these are for the pictures "No Place to Go," "The Crystal Cup" and a new picture starring Ken Maynard—set a standard which, if matched in later productions, will enable many theatres which now make their own block posters at considerable expense to effect a saving on this item.

The "No Place to Go" and "The Crystal Cup" block one-sheets reproduced on this page give an idea of the style of art work First National is incorporating in this new accessory. Naturally the black and white reproduction fails to give the posters the full value of their appeal and display qualities when seen in full size and color.

The "No Place to Go" sheet has a vivid blue ground, with title in yellow with red outline; stars' names in blue of a brighter value than the ground; highlights struck by the beam from the automobile headlights are in bright yellow, with the credits in a blue that does not contrast strongly with the ground.

The ground of the poster for "The Crystal Cup" is in a rich purple shade, with title and illustration in bright yellow, stars' names in light shade of purple, and the credits in complementary tones.

Properly mounted on bristol or beaver board, the block one-sheets First National has prepared under this extended service will make them available for lobby display in theatres which hitherto have not been able to make use of stock material for this purpose.

Owing to the economic consideration involved in mass production the company is in a position to obtain the services of high-priced artists to do the work and still furnish the sheets at a commercial rate for prepared posters. Under these circumstances it is only natural that the productions are bound to be superior to many of the individually made block posters produced especially for a theatre by staff or local artists.

Of course, care must be exercised in mounting sheets for this type of display. But a one-sheet is not difficult to handle in this process and the extra care needed to get a perfectly flat adhesion between the sheet and its supporting board is a very quick and inexpensive operation in comparison to the time and money involved in having special one-sheets made for the lobby frames and panels.

Guarantee of Results

THE highly satisfactory operation of all Carrier Conditioned Theatres, during the summer of 1927, has fully demonstrated the value of the thorough and competent air conditioning engineering and the guarantee of results which are binding clauses in every Carrier contract.

Each Carrier Conditioned Theatre in cities and towns from Los Angeles to Broadway has operated to the full satisfaction and comfort of the theatre owners and the patrons. Each new installation of a Carrier System has been set into operation according to the scheduled time.

These accomplishments are the result of the Carrier acceptance of complete responsibility for all the details of design and installation of air conditioning, refrigeration and control equipment.

THE Roxy in all its magnificence and The Eastern, small neighborhood theatre in Columbus, Ohio, each belongs to the enlarging group of Carrier Conditioned Theatres. Each is completely equipped to maintain a cool, non-humid atmosphere in Summer; temperate healthfully humidified air in Winter; a constant supply of cleansed fresh air perfectly distributed without the slightest draught.

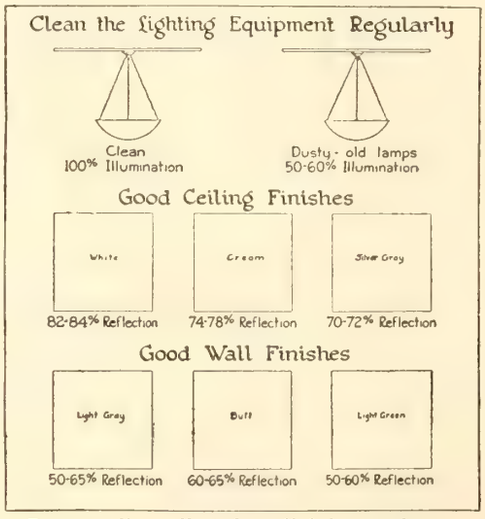
Effective Lighting at a Minimum Cost

By F. S. Hutter

Engineering Dept. Edison Lamp Works.

YOU have heard of the Efficiency Engineer. He is the chap that stepped into American business and industry a few years ago and proclaimed a revolution. He investigated everything, made special studies of anything, and literally defied inefficiency. He broke into old established firms and attacked old established customs, instituted new methods, proclaimed that no factor of busines was too minute to be neglected. And was he heralded and acclaimed by the great American working class? He was not. He was parodied on stage and screen, portrayed in comic sheets and generally hated as a disturber, a crier, a changer of old established methods. His strict orders were obeyed with reluctance, and the cooperation he forced in one channel was defeated with fiendish delight in some other field by the very person he was forcing to his will. That, then, seems to be the fate of a reformer. Better by far to have said, "Here, I will outline some efficiency programs which will help you. If you care to try them, you will be surprised at your increased returns, but I will not enforce any rules. You alone are the autocrat of your business policy." And then, present the ways and means, outline the changes, and leave the scene.



In contrast to the perhaps over-energetic method in which some of these efficiency engineers attempted to carry out their programs, an article of this nature presents salient data in the preferable manner last described, pointing out the comparatively easy way in which maximum efficiency of lighting equipment may be obtained. It is applicable to any field where illumination is used. There is no attempt here to enforce theory, but a plain discussion of lighting operation with some helpful hints accumulated from practical experience.

We have, in light, a problem of cause and effect. The Mazda lamp, the source of light, is the cause, which produces illumination, the effect. We are interested in illuminating areas, in throwing sufficient incident light on a surface. But we can never attain efficiency with an imperfect condition at a source. Therefore, let us consider the lamp itself.

A Mazda lamp emits light in all directions; it is the center of a sphere of light. When this light strikes an opaque object we have illumination of a surface. When light is desired on the floor plane, providing we are not considering indirect or semi-indirect lighting, it is essential that we re-direct most of the upward component of this sphere of light, downward. Hence we have the development of a lamp reflector. (See THE SHOWMAN, May, 1927, p. 1551.)

Neither in spread of light nor intensity of illumination on a plane below the unit, can th bare lamp compete with a lamp and reflector.

From that we draw the first rule of lighting efficiency; use reflectors to gather each stray particle of light and throw it to the area you wish illuminated. A bare unreflected lamp is about 50 per cent efficient in directing light toward one plane. The other half of the emitted light, which is being duly paid for on the power bill, is wasted.

Dust or dirt collected on lighting equipment cause depreciation. The color of walls and ceilings will also affect the amount of light. The above colors are recommended for their light reflecting properties.

An installation of lamps without reflectors indicates a system of lighting at least 20 years antiquated, except in some special forms of decorative lighting. No alert business man would allow any factor of his business to be 20 years behind the times. A more pertinent matter is the consideration of the proper lamp to use.

The manufacturers of Mazda lamps, realizing the conditions existing in the power field, try to help the consumer in his choice of lamps. The manufacture of an incandescent lamp is a problem in design, requiring a specific voltage specification. Thus lamps are designed for 110, 115, 120 and 125 volt operation. The reason for this variation in design lies in the available voltage supply in certain districts. Some sections of the country provide 110 volts, other 120, etc. Just as a shoe must fit the wearer's foot, so a lamp designed for 110 volt operations should be run at that voltage. To insure this condition, the manufacturers control the distribution and keep accurate data on available voltages in all sections of the country.

However, it is often found that improper voltage lamps are procured and used in some localities. There are two phases to such misuse. If a lamp designed for 115 volts is operated at 110, the light output is noticeably reduced. For every volt operated under rating, there is about 3 per cent of the normal light output sacrificed. A lamp giving 1300 lumens at normal voltage will give only about 1100 lumens if operated 6 volts under rating, or a decrease in light output of over 15 per cent. This certainly is not using lamps at their highest

Marr and Colton Supremacy!

This new $3,000,000 Theatre "The Rochester" seating 4,000 people is ranked among the great motion picture houses of America.

Matched with its beauty of construction is an organ of equal beauty in tone and workmanship. The Marr and Colton Organ lends that added charm neccessary to the realization of maximum appeal to eye and ear---appeal that has box office value. This five manual organ is one of the largest theatre organs ever built. It is capable of expressing the tone of any musical instrument or a whole orchestra in a manner so expressive that the casual listener wonders at times whether he really is listening to an organ, so matchless is its tone quality---so marvelous its volume---so perfect the rendition.

She is Manager of a Theatre on Broadway

And Knows Show Business From the Ground Up

An Interview by Thomas C. Kennedy
With

Miss Grace Niles

Manager Embassy Theatre

Instructions to members of the staff. Miss Niles and ushers of the Embassy, where Metro-Goldwyn's "The Garden of Allah" is now playing an extended engagement.

ABOVE and beyond the distinction which automatically attaches to Miss Grace Niles as the only woman manger of a theatre in the White Way district, is the more remarkable fact that this alert and charming young woman started her career in the theatre at the bottom—her first job was in a cashier's booth—just as most of the successful managers of the male sex began their lessons in "show business."

Miss Niles became a full-fledged manager when the Embassy Theatre, on Broadway near 47th Street, opened its doors to a swanky first night audience for Rex Ingram's screen production of "The Garden of Allah." This took place Friday evening, September 2. Miss Niles had participated in other first nights at this same theatre—the first first night, as a matter of fact, when Mae Murray, in "The Merry Widow," opened the then brand new house on Broadway. Only at that time Miss Niles was in the ticket booth, handing out "reserves" and making advance sales. At that time Gloria Gould was Managing Directress of the Embassy and a man of long experience in the theatre was executing the duties falling to the house manger.

For ten years Miss Niles has been preparing herself for this job of manging a theatre—she started as a cashier that long ago in one of the Loew combination vaudeville and picture theatres. During most of the engagement of "The Big Parade" at the Astor, Miss Niles served as treasurer there.

That she has learned the craft there can be no doubt in the mind of any careful observer going into the Embassy—always a distinguished little playhouse, dignified and very intimate, but at present even more strikingly imbued with an atmosphere perfctly suited to its character; its size, style of decoration and policy, that is.

Miss Niles was not unsympathetic—perhaps she was indulgent—to the viewpoint of your correspondent that it was somewhat surprising to find a woman managing a Broadway theatre. At any rate, she registered—most politely, to be sure, but registered nevertheless — the fact that she did not consider the situation one calling for surprise.

"I think you will see many women occupying positions as theatre managers in the future. It is not without precedent, by any means, now; but it will become a more commonplace thing as time goes on and more women enter the theatre with a view of making a career there," Miss Niles said.

We asked the most obvious question—and got a most interesting answer.

"I think women have many natural qualifications for the work," she replied. "I don't think there is much doubt that the average woman is quicker than the average man to notice any disorderliness or uncleanliness in the appearance of a room, be it in a public place or a home. Women also are superior to men in the handling of details—and there are many details connected with theatre management. They have fewer interests outside their work than a man, since a man usually has a home and family as well as a job to occupy his attention, while women usually have either a home and family to think about or a business or professional career, but seldom do they have both at one and the same time.

"Patience, too, is another trait in which women are generally rated above men, and patience, the retention of good humor in the face of the numerous and conflicting complaints, admonitions and criticisms which patrons bring to a manager, is one of the qualifications for success in this work."

Surely there is no room for bickering or hair splitting here—at any rate not on the ground that Miss Niles was putting the least important factors first, because theatre executives and managers have long been in agreement over the fact that a theatre, first of all, must present a scrupulously clean and orderly appearance and that a manager must listen patiently to the complaints of patrons and handle such situations with diplomacy.

The Embassy has very few men connected with it. Outside of the orchestra there are only about four males in its personnel—these being operators and porters. However, Miss Niles seemed confident that the job would not be more difficult for a women even if there were men under her direction. A woman, she said, often can get better results in directing men than a male manager. She asked if it might not be that situations calling for the harsh language and belligerent attitude of a theatre manager often are the perfectly natural method which one man takes in bringing another around to his way of thinking or doing. In other words, Miss Niles was reciting the old adage "it takes two to fight," and at the same time she was saying that women don't fight that way. However, the main point here is that Miss Niles feels quite capable of managing a theatre whether the job entails supervision over men or women.

ALL of her experience in the theatre has been in pictures and vaudeville or picture theatres. She declared she is not so much interested in the stage as the pictures. "The photoplay seems so much more finished than the stage plays. The stage, in comparison, seems very limited as to resources for producing the desired scenic effects and illusions," she says.

Miss Niles believes that girls make better ushers than boys. The girls she says, are more quiet, and for another thing they are less liable to be on the lookout for opportunities to court gratuities in return for the performance of their duties in serving patrons.

Jet Black Screen Borders Not Necessary to Effective Projection

Extreme Contrast It Aims to Accomplish Causes Eyestrain

THE matter of theatre illumination is one of ever-increasing importance. Important not only from the standpoint of presenting a problem which yet remains to be solved in a thoroughly satisfactory fashion, but also because of the relation it bears to other factors which go to make up a show; projection, as a concrete example.

There was a time, but a few years distant, in fact, when this problem was non-existent—not non-existent for it was always there, but rather unrecognized. The ideal condition then was agreed upon as being an utterly dark house in order to better obtain the extreme contrast between the projected picture and its surroundings, and also to secure greater contrast between the blacks and whites within the picture itself.

To this end special precautions were taken to "frame" the screen picture in a jet black border for the double purpose of obtaining a sharp line of demarcation between the picture and its surrounding field and for strengthening the contrast between the two.

Whatever may be the merits of such practice (it is still common today), it can be taken as an indication of the trend of thought toward this matter of extreme contrast.

The matter of an utterly dark house, however, is an altogether different matter in that it bears a direct relation to the general safety and comfort of the patrons and its effects are more quickly felt.

The principal argument against the jet black border is that it is conducive to eyestrain. The reason for this, in turn, is that the lighted screen represents a bright spot in an otherwise dark field—in other words, it is in the nature of a glare spot.

While the effects of such practice tended toward eyestrain, they were not of a permanent nature, so that the net result was primarily one of discomfort.

In a way, the adverse projection conditions of a few years ago were largely responsible for the extreme contrast conditions then found. An inefficient optical system which utilized but a maximum of 3 per cent of the total light generated by the source, coupled with what is now generally considered to be a comparatively weak light source, made it necessary to devise ways and means for employing the available screen light to the very best advantage.

Screen intensities (with blank screen and shutter stationary) of 7 or 8 foot-candles were considered to be fairly high and consistent with de luxe results. Such intensities today are available to every hamlet in the country at a cost far below that paid but a few years back.

But even these screen intensities, low as they may seem now, were obtained only by using extremely high electrical currents which were proportionately costly, so that the average theatre was prone to use arcs of smaller capacity for projection purposes in an effort to reduce the cost of operation.

There is a well known rule of illuminating engineering, especially as applied to the general lighting of interiors, which is to the effect that a small field of brightness (such as lighted motion picture screen) of even a few apparent foot-candles, in the center of an otherwise dark field, will prove to be glaring if attention is centered upon it for any length of time.

In an effort to guard against such an adverse visual condition, it is considered absolutely necessary to surround this comparatively bright central field with a larger one of lower brightness for relieving the strong contrast.

The brightness of this larger secondary field need not be great—on the contrary it can be quite small in relation to the central field, the commonly specified rates between the two being of the order of 10 to 1.

Thus, for a motion picture screen lighted to an intensity of, say, 10 foot-candles, the background intensity need only be about 1 foot-candle. But these figures are given on the basis of a blank screen and stationary shutter and, since the comon viewing condition is that with a picture being projected and shutter in operation, it is safe to say that the average screen brightness under these conditions would be about 2 or 3 foot-candles. The field intensity, therefore, would need to be but 0.2 to 0.3 foot-candle. Which, as far as illumination intensities go, is nothing to brag about, since this is roughly equivalent to ten times bright moonlight intensity.

SOME time ago, the Eastman Kodak Company, through its Research Department, made recommendations covering the interior illumination of motion picture theatres in which general illumination intensities ranging from 0.1 foot-candle for the seating area near the screen, to 0.5 foot-candle, for the back of the house were proposed as representing good visual conditions in harmony with satisfactory projection.

This seems entirely reasonable although it appears that the recommendations were advanced primarily from the standpoint of lighting the seating area and so affecting more the comfort of the patrons when occupying or leaving seats rather than assisting visual conditions in connection with prolonged viewing of the screen picture.

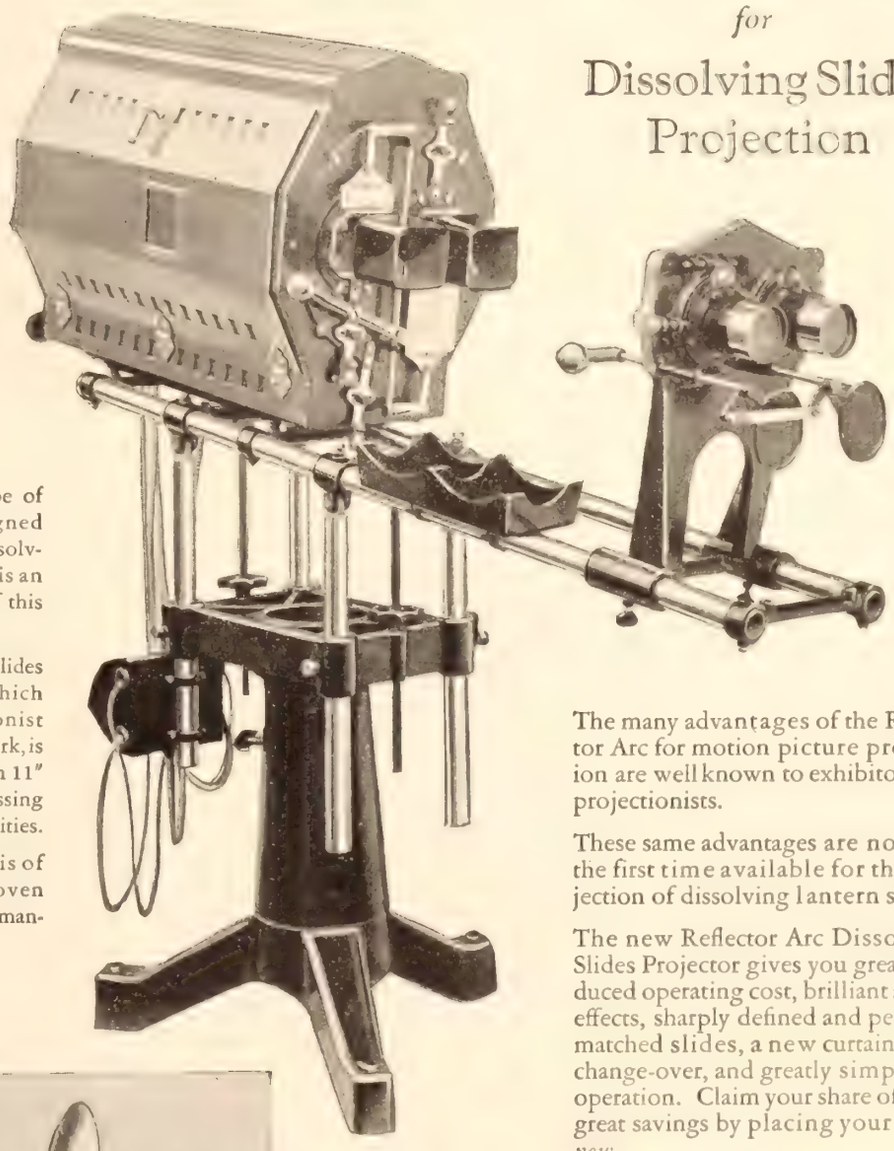
It is true that for persons occupying rear seats, the seating area in front of them forms a part of their field of vision, and so can be considered as a part of the general field surrounding the screen. For those people near the front of the house, however, the illuminated seating area exerts less effect with relation to the screen so that for these persons, the walls of the theatre, to a large extent, make up the visual field.

It is essential, therefore, that these sidewalls, and even the front of the house space, be lighted to a low intensity in order to relieve the screen brightness.

This is now rapidly being made a general practice through the colored lighting of panels and grill work in the larger de luxe theatres. Colored lamps in wall brackets or any other form of primary light source, however, should be strictly avoided, since it is necessary to keep this secondary field brightness down to a low value, and also have it cover an appreciable area.

With an optic system which has been greatly improved in point of efficiency (the reflector arc system) and the availability of the high intensity arc with its three-fold brightness over that of the old arc, there is nothing to prevent the abolition of the extreme contrast conditions as characterized by the dark house type of theatre.

Screen intensities three and four times those formerly obtainable are now easily available so that at least some degree of general illumination is in order.



J. C. Brown New National Mgr. at Cleveland

J. C. Brown has been appointed manager of the Cleveland, Ohio, branch office of the National Theatre Supply Company, succeeding Geo. W. Armstrong who, on account of ill health, will take a vacation of two months, after which he will return to the organization in another capacity, probably in the National One-Contract Division.

Mr. Brown will prove a most able successor to Mr. Armstrong in the management of the Cleveland office, owing to his long and varied experience in the theatre equipment field, having been at one time manager of the Southern Theatre Equipment Company office in Atlanta, Ga., and and the equipment business on his own account in the Southern states. Immediately before being transferred to the Cleveland office, Mr. Brown held an executive position in the General Offices.

PROJECTORS & EFFECTIVE LIGHTING ~ DEVICES

New and Improved Equipment

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

Brenkert Reflector arc stereopticon projector

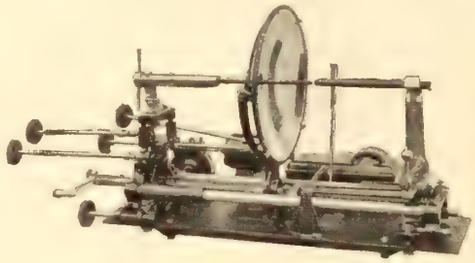
Brenkert Introduces Reflector Arc Projector

THE Brenkert Light Projection Company have placed on the market a new dissolving stereopticon projector which uses the reflector arc principle. The complete equipment includes the new Brenkert reflecting type arc burner with automatic feed, large diameter, fully corrected mirror with external adjustments, condensing lenses, single type built-in slide carriers with swiveling adjustments, light cones, fast operating curtain shutters, 2 5/16-in. diameter, double achromatic projection lenses in any focal length from 14-in. to 36-in., front dowser shutters, slide tray, 60 ampere switch and box with leads to arc lamp, automatic pilot lamp, and arc control, and heavy three legged floor base with height adjustments.

The standard finish is blue steel and silver green with nickel-plated trimmings. The overall measurements are: 15 in. wide; 62 in. long; 48 in. to 57 in. high, with a 9-in. height adjustment. The recommended current is from 20 amperes to 35 amperes for all projection distances in present-day theatres.

A unique feature of this new slide projector is the unit assembly of the condenser lenses, slide carriers, curtain shutters, and light cones on the front plate of the lamphouse. All of these elements are mounted on a separate base which is attached to the frontplate in such a manner that it can be rotated back and forth over an angle sufficient to permit matching the slides for height on the screen. A control handle is provided for this work.

Each slide carrier, condenser lens, curtain shutter and light cone assembly, in turn, is mounted on another smaller base, which is mounted on the main assembly base so that these, too, can be rotated in order to adjust the slides for skew.



The arc burner is especially designed to accommodate a full 16-in. trim of carbons, so that when once trimmed no further setting of carbons will be required. The bearings on each carbon holder are extremely long, and all mechanical fits are held to very close limits to prevent rocking of the carbons, assuring accurate alignment at all times.

A double focussing arrangement is provided for initial adjustment purposes. A pilot lamp, operated by a door switch, is also furnished so that the opening or closing of the main lamphouse door automatically operates the pilot lamp.

The optical design of the equipment is such that slides may be accurately matched on any projection distance more easily and more quickly than with the old type of double lantern projector.

Double achromatic projection lenses in any focal length of from 14 inches to 36 inches are furnished.

It frequently happens that the construction of the projection room in some theatres is such as to make impossible the installation of such equipment as a dissolving slide projector or effect machine. This difficulty has at last been eliminated in the matter of slide projection because the placement of the optic systems, in this new reflector arc slide dissolver, side by side, makes a port opening measuring 8 in. x 10 in., more than ample to freely pass both beams.

Close-up of arc burner of new Brenkert stereopticon

Kliegl Offers New Type Foot and Borderlights

SEVERAL new features are incorporated in the new model footlights and borderlight units which Kliegl Bros. recently introduced. The refinements which have been devised for the improvement of this stage lighting equipment are combined with the desirable characteristics of earlier models.

These include colored-glass diffusing roundels, individual aluminum reflectors, enclosed construction and added strength. The new designs include single and double row semi-flush type footlights, single row disappearing footlights, borderlights in three sizes, and proscenium lights.

The semi-flush type footlights are furnished in two sections—the lighting unit and the trough. The unit embodies the lamps, receptacles, reflectors, diffusing roundels, wiring and hood as a complete unit. The footlight extends about three inches above the stage floor. Its contour is straight, so that it blends with stage lines and is imperceptible to the audience. The single row footlights have receptacles spaced 4½ inches between centers. In the double row, the receptacles are also 4½ inches between centers, with colors staggered in the two rows. Both single and double row footlights accommodate 100-watt A-23 Mazda lamps in stock models, with units accommodating 150-watt P.S. 25 Mazda lamps available on special order.

Close-up view of Kliegl Bros. new model footlight, showing interior of reflectors, and diffusing roundel with split ring removed to one side

Each lamp has an individual reflector, permanently fixed in position. The reflectors are of spun aluminum, so shaped as to project all the light of high intensity lamps upon the stage. The reflector surfaces are treated to resist heat and prevent peeling or discoloration.

The diffusing roundels are convex, colored-glass lenses, ribbed inside for proper diffusion of the light rays. Clear diffusion lenses are furnished for white lighting. For color lighting, red and blue are usually furnished. Other colors, such as amber, green, light blue and moonlight blue, are also obtainable. The roundels are held in place by split-rings, easily removed for changing colors or replacing lamps.

Borderlights with aluminum reflectors and colored-glass diffusing roundels are made in three sizes for lamps ranging from 200- to 1000-watts. They comprise a single row of receptacles with an aluminum reflector for each lamp, and with means for holding colored-glass roundels as well as slide grooves for holding color frames with gelatine mediums or glass slides.

IF you want theatre music that appeals and attracts you cannot afford to overlook Page Unit Organs and Page Organ Players. Purely on the basis of merit these instruments have won their way into scores of theatres everywhere. Page Unit Organs give you tones that are soul-enchanting—response on the split-second—wonderful action that you can depend on every night in the week. Page Organ Players solve the music problem for smaller theatres, converting ordinary 88-note piano rolls into a wealth of true orchestral organ effects. With a patented solo device and other exclusive advantages, the Page Player is a real find for owners and managers, at distinctly moderate prices and terms. Write for details.

Theatre Building Business Map

Including Analysis of Summer Attendance Averages

Above Average Business	AA	Very light new construction
		Light new construction
Average Business	A	Moderately heavy construction
Below Average Business	UA	Heavy new construction

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from June 15th to September 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities: solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The circles shown on the map are located in key cities and illustrate averages of theatre attendance during the three months period from June 15 to September 15. The diagrams indicate the relative attendance at the better theatres in these cities during the summer season. These are given by "averages," with symbols to indicate "Above Average" and "Under Average" box office returns. The term "average" as applied in this survey indicates satisfactory box office returns, based upon theatre expectancies, which, in turn, are governed by past earnings under similar or nearly similar conditions.

ABOVE we reproduce a map which reduces to concrete form the results produced by an analysis of new theatre building projects and, as well, theatre attendance in downtown key city houses for the period beginning June 15 and ending September 15.

Two highly important factors emerge from the survey of statistics and reports, gathered from reliable sources and of unquestionable authority as a basis for an accurate estimate of the status of the theatre branch of the industry at present. These are first: that the building program calling for the unprecedented expenditure in theatre construction of $199,000,000, as forecast last December by Motion Picture News, is going through almost exactly on that schedule. Secondly, that the summer season just closed has been a generally prosperous one for the picture theatres—in which favorable weather conditions must be regarded a factor, but which also conclusively indicates that with modern cooling systems and a good grade of picture entertainment, theatres have attained the commercial ideal of establishing their status as "summer resorts," as well as winter gathering places for the comfort, entertainment and enjoyment of the masses of the American public.

In analyzing theatre construction from June 15th to September 15th, we find that there have been projected 248 theatres which, it estimated, will cost $65,570,000, with a total seating capacity of 345,856.

Last December Motion Picture News presented a theatre building forecast for 1927, which called for $199,000,000 worth of theatre construction, exclusive of the cost of sites. Prorated, this estimate calls for practically $50,000,000 worth of new construction for each quarter. This checks fairly accurately with our figure of $65,570,000 for these three months, inasmuch as this figure includes cost of sites as well as actual construction of theatres. Also, in many instances the costs given in our present analysis include the cost of office and commercial real estate which is constructed in immediate conjunction with the theatre.

IT is found that the average seating capacity of the new houses projected calls for 1,395, and that the average cost is $264,500. It is also interesting to know that of these 248 theatres, twelve call for investments exceeding $1,000,000 and eighteen call for investments between one-half and one million dollars.

The division of this construction by territories according to dollar value is graphically illustrated in the accompanying map.

It will be noted that the country is divided into seven territories:

1. Northeastern States, including Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut.
2. North Atlantic States, including New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia.
3. Southeastern States, including Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida.
4. Southwestern States, including Kentucky, West Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas.
5. Middle States, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas.
6. Western States, including Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Idaho.
7. West Coast, including Washington, Oregon, California.

An analysis of construction by these territories shows that the Middle states call for 85 projects costing $22,567,000, with a seating capacity of 119,850. The North Atlantic states, 51 projects costing $19,958,000 with 88,800 seats. The West Coast states, 52 projects costing $10,790,000 with 60,450 seats. Northeastern states, 19 projects costing $5,220,000 with 28,700 seats. Southwestern states, 19 projects costing $4,177,000 and 26,600 seats. Western states, 12 projects costing $1,573,000 with 11,800 seats. Southeastern states, 10 projects costing $1,285,000 with 9,650 seats.

It will be noted that the Middle states call for the heaviest construction program, with the North Atlantic states running a very close second.

HOWEVER, while the Middle states call for the largest grand total, construction in the North Atlantic states is more than twice that of the Middle states when based on unit of area with the Northeastern states running a close second.

It is found that the average cost per seat of this new construction is $190.00 for the whole country, but it is of particular significance to note that the average cost per seat for the various territories rnages from $223.00 down to $133.00. This variation is due to the construction of superhouses in some territories as against the general construction of neighborhood houses and the small town house in the other territories.

Money represented per seat in the various territories is as follows:

Northeastern states, $182.00 per seat; North Atlantic, $223.00 per seat; Southeastern, $133.00 per seat; Southwestern, $157.00 per seat; Middle states, $188.00 per seat; Western, $133.00 per seat; and West Coast 178.00 per seat.

The individal state calling for the greatest investment in new projects during the period from June 15 to September 15th is Pennsylvania, which calls for 12 projects costing $12,610,000 with a total seating capacity of 23,400. California is second with 40 projects costing $8,035,000 and 44,900 seats. Ohio is third with 20 projects costing $6,930,000 and 36,350 seats. New York is fourth with 14 projects costing $3,890,000 and 22,500 seating capacity. Wisconsin is fifth with 9 projects costing $3,550,000 and 14,700 seats.

We have heard the opinion voiced that theatre construction has been on the wane during the last three months. However, the analysis which we have set forth above tends to indicate that the building of theatres is fully as heavy for that period as it has ever been in the history of the industry. Furthermore, the seating capacity per theatre shows an increase. The general trend appears to be toward big houses. This increase in seating capacity and cost per theatre undoubtedly is due to the large number of supertheatres being built in the downtown sections of our big population centers, and neighborhood houses.

A survey, which was carried on through theatre architects, shows that there are many large theatre projects which will be announced within the next thirty days. Also there is to be a heavier construction of the smaller type house.

Indicative of the prosperity of the motion picture industry is the sale of equipment. In this phase of the business the summer months have proven somewhat above the average for the past years. It has been estimated that approximately $50,000,000 will have been spent during 1927 on theatre equipment. (Theatre equipment is interpreted to include all projection and stage equipment, seats, decorations, atmospheric conditioning installations, etc.) The sale of equipment during the three summer months shows a full share of this $50,000,000. Territories that have proved to be most prosperous in the sale of equipment are the Middle and North Atlantic states. However, there is no territory that has shown a great falling off of sales. The only part of the country which apparently has suffered is that territory which was affected by the Mississippi floor, where construction of new projects has been practically halted; the money being invested in the renovating and remodeling of houses damaged during the flood.

IN the equipment field, prospects are extremely bright for heavy business this fall. This is due both to new construction and to the trend of the times to add more equipment in theatres which have already been built. Each year we find that in dollars and cents the equipment represented by the average theatres is on the increase. Furthermore, that equipment is not allowed to depreciate to the extent which has been the custom in the past.

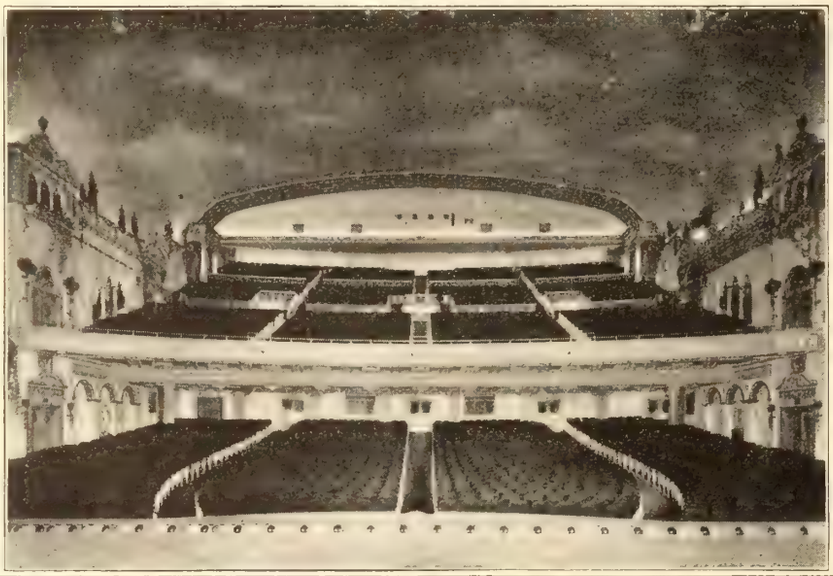
It is not to be considered that business reached the flood level that would turn to the profit side of the ledger those theatres suffering as a result of conditions peculiar to themselves.

Seattle alone dipped down under the "average," and the theatre situation there is rather unusual. A public educated during a course of several years to regard motion picture shows as a form of amusement for which one got a lot in return for a little paid at the box office presents a problem in showmanship which is being solved, but it takes time. The de luxe type of theatre offering elaborate programs in the beautiful surroundings of the modern style of house—with which Seattle is now amply supplied—is making headway, and the tides of business there last summer followed the oustanding attraction offered in these theatres, with the rest sharing the balance with the large number of smaller houses, of which Seattle has more than its share.



THAT New Orleans should go above "average" during a period when that district of the country had but recently emerged from the flood catastrophe, may seem surprising at first blush. But the theatre business in that city is on a very sound basis, and general business there has not been depressed to any extraordinary degree.

While there were a greater number of theatres equipped to continue business as usual, hot weather or no, thanks to cooling plants, the competition from other attractions, such as beaches, outing resorts, etc., last summer was less keen, largely because of weather propitious to theatregoing. Well patronized theatres over week-ends that were altogether too cool or too rainy to give out-of-door attractions their powerful lure, once again illustrated the truth of the old saw that "it's an ill wind that blows nobody good." Nevertheless showmen, aided and abetted by modern theatre buildings, good equipment, and a good run of screen attractions, have found the way to make their offerings even more appealing to the public through the use of judiciously selected added features, presentations, and service.

sign, crescents suspended from metal chains and bearing three candles, while the hanging lights are authentic reproductions of incense burners.

The Avalon is approached through an outer lobby whose half-beamed ceiling is decorated with multicolored designs representing enamel inlays. The walls are textured by hand and antiqued to give them correctness as representations of the Persian walls. The ticket booth has a minaretted dome, and small display frames at either side of the lobby are framed in arched windows.

The physical arrangement of the inner foyer is admirably suited to the efficient handling of hold-out crowds, and the wealth of decorative detail is sufficient to provide interest and sustained entertainment to the theatre visitor who finds much to hold his attention and appeal to his sense of the beautiful in this striking ensemble.

Among the decorative features are hand hammered brass railings along the center of the foyer. Sections of this railing are hinged, permitting a complete enclosure of the center approach to the auditorium, or side exits when the gates are opened. This railing is a magnificent speciment of the metal worker's art, and was executed in Chicago especially for the theatre. In the foyer also are several remarkable mosaic panels, each relating a story concerning the life and manners of the Persians.

The mosaics are the work of Charles Morgan, pupil and protege of Newton Wells, the inventor of a secret process for making a composition of rich colors and tints to be used as pellets in mosaic work. Morgan is the possessor of this secret process, and the productions which decorate the foyer of the Avalon theatre are of surpassing beauty.

Another remarkable work of handicraft is the wall texturing in the foyer. There is a stretch of hand-scratched plaster exactly reproducing the work of Persian masons. The modeling and coloring of flat and relief surfaces offer another extraordinary feature. Eberson has concentrated upon this phase of his work, for in this lies one of the greatest requisites of the atmospheric theatre. He has organized a crew of artists who have undergone special training in the art of modeling, sculpturing and painting, and it is to these specialists alone that he entrusts the execution of effects which he repeatedly has declared to be among the vital factors contributing to the success of his theatre designs.

Some 90 varieties of marbles are used in the decoration of the theatre. The lobby scheme features many of these, used as borders and designs in columns, pilasters and wall surfaces. The marbles are in small fragments, which is artistically correct, for as marbles are not found in Persia but were brought from distant places and no adequate transportation facilities existed for the handling of large masses, the small pieces were laboriously put together and used as ornamentation.

The foyer, a replica of a princely palace, has a tile floor, a combination of faience and ceramic, executed in Oriental design and resembling a huge rug. The general color scheme is blue and gold. Furniture used in the lobby and rest rooms was imported from Syria, and includes some wonderful examples of pearl inlay.

The auditorium of the Avalon depicts a Persian palace and a shrine courtyard. Jeweled domes and minarets reach up toward a blue and cloud-flecked sky. The proscenium is a Persian gate, carried out in minute detail, surmounted by a canopy stretched over spearheads. On the sides of the stage are Moorish fountains. The concealed lighting which imparts a sky effect to the dome has an added feature in an arrangement making it possible to flood the minarettes with a soft light, resembling moonlight, which supplies good lighting to the auditorium during the screening of pictures. Shrubs, rich antique tent hangings and snow-white doves are used to ornament the parapet, while Persian flowers in a variety of colors give added color to the general scheme.

The Avalon was built by the National Playhouses, the company controlled by Cooney Brothers, operators of several theatres. It has a seating capacity of 3,000 and provides every modern convenience for patrons and equipment for the efficient presentation of elaborate programs.

Proper Carpeting Is A Theatre Requisite

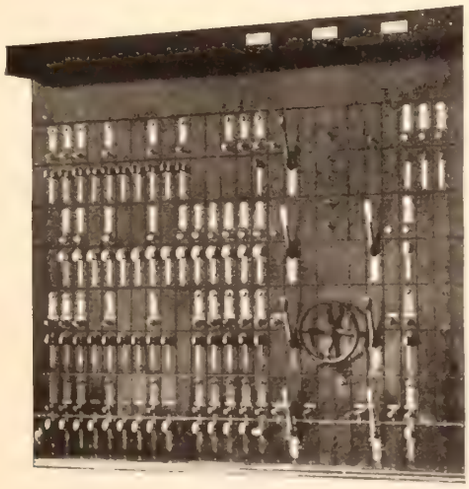
dom adapted to other types of structures, and which, in fact, are wholly inappropriate for any building except one whose purpose is to entertain.

The theatre is, perhaps, the one type of building today in which the owner appreciates the utter impossibility of forcing rigid economies. He often gives his architect "carte blanche." Nothing is too good for his patrons. Not one detail can be overlooked. The covering of the chairs is just as important as the decoration of the ceiling; the design of the carpet counts just as much as the enrichment of the proscenium arch.

It must be taken into account that the average motion picture theatre audience is made up of the same people week after week. After a certain number of visits to the house, the eyes of the regular patrons, thoroughly familiar with the general decorative effect, seek out the details. They must not now be disillusioned. The thrill of luxury that is aroused at the first glance by the splendor of architecture and the gorgeous details of decoration must be maintained, and the richness, attained only by deep and beautiful carpets, is the surest means of sustaining this interest.



For the theatre, carpet possesses the very qualities which are considered the most desirable. Quiet to walk on, giving a luxurious quality under foot, while affording opportunities for rich color and decorative design, a carpeted floor in a theatre is one of the first requisites.

In the selection of carpet for the theatre the colors to be chosen are of prime importance. They must be selected to show to the best advantage under artificial and dull lighting. Colors of opposed values, offering sharp contrast, should be used. The most effective color combinations for use in theatres are red and gold, blue and gold, orange and blue, black and red, and black and orange. The second point to consider is that carpets in theatres are subjected to unusually hard wear, and the quality selected must, therefore, be heavy and resilient. In this connection for lobbies and aisles, where the floor surface is generally on an incline, the carpet with a heavy back offers the greatest service because of their resistance to the pulling caused by many persons walking up or down the incline in the aisle or lobby floor. Heavy piled wool wiltons, not the finely woven worsted wilton grades which have pile that stands upright, are the best and longest wearing fabrics. The next best grade of carpet for theatre use is specially woven high-piled heavy Axminsters. This latter grade, however, is not particularly suitable for use on stairs because of the fact that they lack the heavy backing.

Summing up, it may be said that each theatre presents so decidedly its own individual problem in relation to floor covering, that a general solution is impossible.

Has your theater become a habit?

DOES your house have something in addition to films that makes it the preferred house? Do you surround your pictures with an atmosphere of light that makes any picture go over better?

In building up this habit of going to your theater, nothing is more valuable than beautiful lighting effects—fitting the spirit of the picture—adding an atmosphere which the most skillful producer cannot give.

Over 800 of the most successful theater managers agree that the best way to achieve this crowd-pulling atmosphere is by installing C-H Simplicity Lighting Dimmers. Regardless of size, age or scheme of decoration, C-H Dimmers can be installed in your theater. Ask your architect or electrical contractor how easily it can be done.

Superiorities of C-H Dimmers

Solid soapstone bases have high heat dispersion and insulating qualities—great continuous load capacity—and they won't burn out.

Contacts on both sides of plates allow twice as many circuits in the same space. Plates can be taken out by removing one screw. Plates of any capacity can be substituted allowing easy adaptation to all theaters or any remodeling plan.

Low ratio rock and pinion drive eliminates play and backlash. 110 distinct steps with no overlapping of contacts assure flickerless dimming from full brilliancy to black out. Brushes of Cophite—a non-oxidizing, self-lubricating material.

Growing Up together

IN 1902—twenty-five years ago—Peter Clark was manufacturing and installing stage rigging and equipment.

And ever since, year after year, Peter Clark has devised and installed better equipment for the stage.

Never has there arisen the question of a show being too elaborate for presentation in a Peter Clark equipped theatre.

To have literally grown up with this industry and to have inspired complete confidence in every leading showman is the enviable record of Peter Clark, Inc.—a record proven through the fact that nearly every theatre of importance in this country today has installed Peter Clark stage rigging and equipment.

Futhermore, the ingenuity and experience that are Peter Clark's, guarantees the fullest developments for stage presentation of the future.

She Is The Manager of A Theatre on Broadway

Lest the impression be given that Miss Niles is partisan to her sex in all matters of human behavior, we will relate here that, in answer to questions regarding the handling of patron complaints, she emphatically pronounced women more difficult to deal with than men.

"The most unreasonable complaints and criticisms come from women," she said. "Indeed, it is the women and not the men—though the latter are not entirely without representation among those who seem, from the manager's viewpoint, to 'manufacture' complaints—who sometimes make us feel that people come to the theatre for the express purpose of giving vent to their fault-finding capacities."

She said that one of the most important assets in successfully operating a theatre, is to have confidence in the show and the theatre, too. In her experience as a cashier, Miss Niles said, she found it a tremendous asset if she believed strongly in the merits of the attraction. "Without that," she declared "it is almost impossible to overcome the objections and persist in the effort to sell." This, of course, applied mostly to her work in the ticket office where reserve seats were sold. The observation, however, is not without food for thought for every manager and theatre executive. How much more convincingly can an attraction be exploited if the man exploiting it believes in its merits! And if this is so, how much more efficiently can the cashier, doormen and ushers, perform their tasks if they, too, believe in their own theatre and the show!

Enthusiasm for the work, sound training and native ability for her vocation are qualifications which Miss Niles possesses. She so much likes the work that she doesn't think she will ever be happy away from the theatre and theatre work for any great length of time.

Miss Niles adds to the advantage of good looks and a graceful bearing the other ingredients of a pleasing personality. She performs her duties as manager of the Embassy with an authority that engenders respect for her competence. She is alert and businesslike, but her manner is pleasant and cordial.

"I place personality, alertness and experience at the top of the list of qualifications in selecting a theatre manager," Harold Franklin, now president of West Coast theatres, one told the writer.

Miss Niles qualifies under that formula, for she has all these, and more—she is confident of her ability to cope with any situation arising in the performance of her managerial duties, and—she loves the work. That is, and always has been, a winning combination.

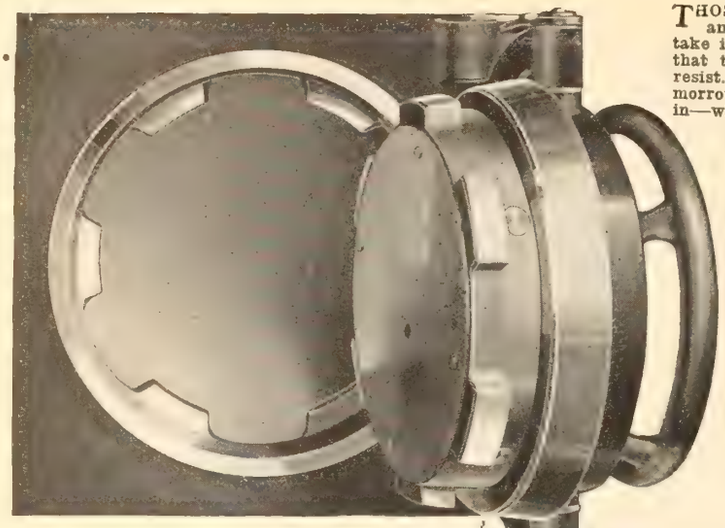
Good lighting is only good business

GOOD lighting can be made one of the greatest assets of any theatre. That has been proved time and time again. A change of the exterior lighting of a theatre along with better stage and auditorium lighting has many times turned transient into steady, continuous patronage. Wherever lighting is used, inside and outside, it should play a definite part in increasing the attractiveness and earning power of the theatre.



How to make lighting pay a real profit is the service offered by engineers of the Edison Lamp Works to every theatre owner in the country. This service is free and obtainable on request at any time.

Why not have experts examine your lighting. Let them show you where it can be improved; often it can be done at little or no expense. And always a greater return on your lighting investment is assured.

Just write to the Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Harrison, New Jersey. There is a representative in your territory who will call on you promptly.

efficiency. True, the life of a lamp under those operating conditions will be longer, but not to a great degree. The greatest possible value of a lamp is realized when it is burned at its rated voltage. Another phase is operating on over-voltage. Here the increase in light output is about 3 per cent for every volt over-rating. But the life of the lamp is noticeably decreased, resulting in premature burnouts and early blackening of the bulb. This latter effect easily eats up the increased light output by absorption of the light in passing through a prematurely blackened bulb. We may thus state a second rule: Operate the lamps at their rated voltage as printed on each individual lamp. The lamp, at its standard voltage, is a most efficient article. Therefore, follow your line voltage closely and secure the best efficiency from the lamps.

Aside from an operating standpoint, there is a further feature that should be observed. There is a saying current in lamp circles,—"There's a right lamp for every purpose." That is very true, yet on innumerable occasions the writer has observed a lamp serving a purpose for which it was never designed. It is as ridiculous a case as using a limousine for trucking purposes. Mazda lamps are designed for certain uses, and every consideration is shown by the lamp manufacturer in the application and development of special lamps for specific purposes. If this were not necessary, one single type lamp would be manufactured for all uses. It would be far more economical on all sides. But this cannot be, and it requires the cooperation of the consumer of the lamp to insure the efficiency toward which he is striving. However, a point may be here discussed which will be of material benefit. The ultimate in lamp design at the present time for general lighting purposes is the Standard Line or inside frosted Mazda lamp. These are a quality product, guaranteed as such. They render unnecessary many features of former lamp design necessary before standardization, such as specifications on frosting, bulb shape and filament construction. It is a benefit to both the consumer and the manufacturer to use this Standard Line, at a reduced cost and with efficient operating values. Hence the third rule: Use Standard Line Mazda Lamps wherever possible. (A complete review of Incandescent Lamps appeared in March, 1927, issue of THE SHOWMAN.)

Undivided Responsibility

THE projection room in the Aztec Theatre in San Antonio offers a striking example of generator and projection arrangement. First glance will show the simplicity and accessibility of Westinghouse motor-generator equipment. Each unit is coordinated with the other—the responsibility is not divided.

That's how Westinghouse serves the motion picture industry. Every phase of projection has been carefully studied, so that every electrical requirement can be met with unfailing exactness.

A dependable source of direct current is assured at all times. The light is steady and unvarying. Changeovers can be made without interrupting the run of the picture.

Westinghouse motor-generator equipment is supplied complete with all necessary accessories, including starters, control panels and ballast rheostats.

True, there are obtainable on the market lamps initially cheaper, that look just as good, but there the comparison ends. The light output of these lamps is generally less, and the life is noticeably shorter. It is the same story of a guaranteed product. In any market, there are cheaper articles, bargains, but who is to say that they will give equal service and value with a guaranteed product? The Mazda lamp has been tested and proven for its efficiency under operating conditions.

The final consideration, and not the least important in lamp usage, is maintenance. When you have a satisfactory pair of shoes that fit well, are you not careful of them, having them shined regularly and resoled before they are beyond repair? That is a personal type of maintenance. One is resolved to make any satisfactory article last and give service. This should be true in the same way of a more material product like the lamp. This cannot be screwed into a socket and allowed to burn there untouched throughout its life. It must be regularly cleaned, rid of that accumulated dust that absorbs 10, 20 and 30 per cent of the available light. The reflector demands cleaning also, for the same reason. This means periodic attention; say every month, more or less depending on the condition of service. The writer has seen lamps in factory service coated with oil and grime through which about 30 per cent of the possible available light filtered out, the other 70 per cent being eaten up in the passage of the light through this dense coating of grime. And, again, in a theatre, indirect units were found in which the accumulated dirt had become so great as to kill 30 to 50 per cent of the light emitted from the filament. These are not exceptional cases; the lighting engineer meets them daily.

A damp rag in a willing hand will boost lighting efficiency with less effort than any other single factor. At first thought it would apear that for dry dust, wiping with a cloth or brush would be adequate, but tests have indicated that such a method only removes about half the foreign material. A wet or damp cloth is by far a more satisfactory and ultimate means for cleaning lamps. It must be borne in mind that all surfaces should be dried thoroughly for a satisfactory job. In removing greasy or wet accumulation, soap and water are good agents, but care must be taken to remove the film of soap by rinsing thoroughly, as dried soap accumulates dust very rapidly. The available cleaners on the market should be examined carefully before being used on a polished surface to see that they are smooth, so as not to make microscopic scratches on the glass in which a film of cleaning material would be deposited. Where lamps are hung high, and it is necessary to use a ladder to reach them, it is advisable to have on hand an extra globe or reflector which may be put in place of the dirty globe, and the latter carried to the cleaning place. This procedure necessitates only one trip up the ladder, as the clean globe can be substituted for the next dirty one.

The SYNCROVERTOR Will Reduce Your Current Cost of Projection Fully 25%

The trend today in motion picture equipment is in the direction of greater efficiency at less cost.

The development of the Liberty Syncrovertor for current rectification is therefore a matter of chief interest to every theatre owner and projectionist.

The Syncrovertor as a unit for the conversion of A. C. to D. C. proves its superiority beyond all question of doubt. It will save fully 25 per cent in your current cost of projection.

This highly efficient device consists of a transformer, a motor, a commutator, a switchboard control panel, all assembled in one unit or with separate control panel. The actual rectification is done at the commutator—not within the motor.

The transformer of the Syncrovertor is the machine's own emergency unit. If the motor ceased to function, the transformer would furnish A. C. current of the proper voltage to the arc. Where the Syncrovertor is used, the "Change-over" is effected without any flicker whatsover on the screen.

Write and let us tell you how you can save 25 per cent in the cost of your projection.

UNDISPUTED TESTIMONY

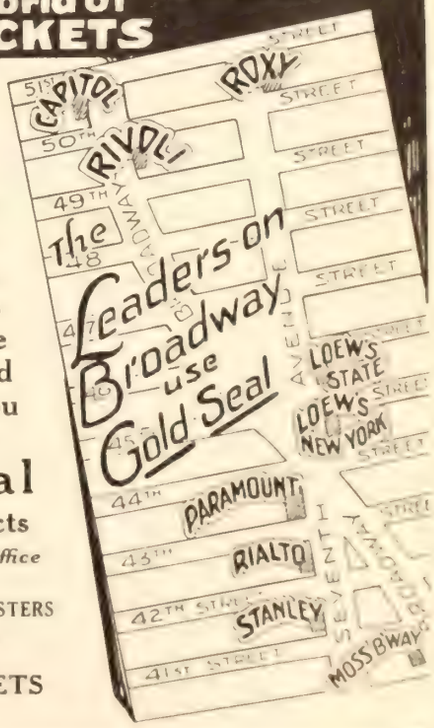
Every Organ Needs Protection

Rapp & Rapp, Walter Ahlschlager, and Eberson and Eberson all endorse EVENHEETERS and include them in their equipment specifications. Why don't you?

Approved by Underwriters Lab.

WHEN you are specifying the organ for that new theatre don't neglect to specify the organ protector too. For regardless of the type organ you decide to use it is not made to withstand cold damp organ chambers—it is too delicately built for that. The chests and other mechanisms must be properly taken care of or the organ will not give satisfatory service.

EVENHEETERS are made for the sole purpose of providing clean even heat in the organ chamber. They are built to combat cold and dampness which so often harm the organ. They are made to protect the delicate organ mechanisms that are so easily affected by cold and dampness.



Specify them in your equipment plans! They will not only save maintenance expenses but the resulting perfect organ service will please all concerned.

No Change in Parley Plans, Says Commission

T.O.C.C. Makes Public Letter to Flannery, Voicing Objections; Use of Exhibitor Proxies Opposed; Delegates Being Selected

THE week's developments in the preparations for the Trade Practice Conference to be held with the industry by the by the Federal Trade Commission, beginning October 10, were:

The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of New York City made public a letter which was sent under date of Sept 23 to M. Markham Flannery, Director of Trade Practice Conferences of the Commission, raising several objections to the plan of selecting delegates.

In this connection, the Washington correspondent of MOTION PICTURE NEWS telegraphed on Sept. 27 that Federal Trade Commission officials denied the receipt of any protest from the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce or others regarding the selection of exhibitor delegates. The correspondent continued:

"They understand some film paper printed a statement that it would be unfortunate to have the selection left too much to producers, but point out that choice is to be made by three theatre owner members of Film Boards. They declare no protests have been received from any source, or any information which would lead to consideration of changes in plans."

A defense of block-booking was made by R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, in an article written for the United Press. "There is nothing iniquitous in block-booking," said Mr. Cochrane.

The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce announced that it would give a dinner at the Hotel Astor on October 10 for the visiting exhibitor delegates, and, through the trade press, extended an invitation to the delegates to make the T. O. C. C. offices their headquarters while in New York. The announcement added:

"Outside exhibitor organizations who are sending delegates will please advise the Chamber of their names so that every effort may be made to make their stay in New York as pleasant as possible. Hotel reservations will be made on request."

The T. O. C. C. letter to Mr. Flannery opposed, among other things, the use of proxies by delegates. The M. P. T. O. A., in the letter sent out last week to exhibitors by R. F. Woodhull, President, and M. J. O'Toole, Secretary, offered to take proxies for exhibitors unable to attend.

Selection of exhibitor delegates from all parts of the country is being made. Mr. Woodhull announced that James C. Ritter and Glenn A. Cross would represent Michigan. H. M. Richley, general manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., will accompany them. Nebraska and Western Iowa will be represented by E. A. Harms and C. E. Williams, with H. F. Kennedy as alternate. Wisconsin will be represented by Steve Bauer and A. C. Guttenberg, with F. C. Wolcott as alternate. Henry A. Staab, Secretary of the organization, will attend.

Following is the letter made public by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, addressed to Mr. Flannery, and signed Sol Raives, President:

"Replying to your letter of September 20th, I wish to correct the impression that I approved the plan of selecting two delegates for each zone. May I call your attention to my letter of September 20th, in which I suggested that the representation of the New York zone be increased to a minimum of four? It is our opinion furthermore that your system of allowing Film Boards of Trade to advise the local exhibitors to select delegates is fraught with many dangers. You are, no doubt, aware that the Film Boards of Trade are employes of the producers; consequently, the placing in their hands of the machinery for the selection of the independent delegates might very possibly lead to a misrepresentation of independent exhibitors' interests.

"Under the circumstances therefore, and in view of your kind invitation for suggestions, we propose that a committee be designated, composed of prominent independent exhibitors, to review very carefully the names of the delegates that have been chosen throughout the country, with the privilege of reporting to you any delegates which they deem are not representative of the independent interests, together with the reasons for such objections. The Chamber of Commerce will be glad to cooperate with you in the selection of this committee.

"We believe that the certification of delegates by such a committee would secure for this conference the confidence of the independent exhibitors throughout the country. It is also our belief that no proxies of any kind should be used by delegates.

"In conclusion, let us again assure you that the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce stands ready to cooperate with you in every manner to assist in making this conference as thorough as possible."

Vast Amount of Valuable Technical Information Is Presented Engineers at Four-Day Session

By P. M. Abbott

THE fall convention of the S.M.P.E. came to a close Thursday of this week after four busy days for the attending body of engineers. This meeting proved to be one of the most successful yet held by this body both in view of the vast amount of valuable technical information presented through some thirty odd papers and committee reports and also from the social events of the program.

At this meeting the officers elected for the ensuing year were announced. They are president, Willard B. Cook (re-elected); vice-president, Frank A. Benford; secretary, L. C. Porter (re-elected); treasurer, W. C. Hubbard (re-elected); board of governors, John I. Crabtree and Max Mayer.

The meeting was opened on Monday morning by an address by President Cook, who said: "About 80 firms or organizations have membership in the S.M.P.E. and we say with confidence that we are fairly representative of the technical part of the motion picture industry. As a result there is hardly a department of the industry that has not benefited by the activities of our Society. However, this is not as well known as it should be, and in spite of its importance the Society is numerically small and comparatively unknown to a large number of people who are eligible for membership and who would be benefited thereby.

"Most of the significant developments and inventions in our industry during the past decade have been announced or demonstrated at our conventions. Our Society has become the recognized authority for the reference of any questions pertaining to our industry and our transactions have an international reputation as the greatest contribution to its technical literature."

The report of the Standards and Nomenclature Committee, which was presented at a following session, bore out the president's claims of the worth of the society's work to this industry. This committee has been confronted with the tremendous task of securing standardization of equipment and practices among manufacturers, theatres, studios, laboratories, etc. Great strides have already been made through the efforts of this committee, with the result that

Kinegraphone Is Latest Talking Picture

General Electric Company Product Successful on First Public Demonstration

By C. L. GRANT

Albany Corresjondent, MOTION PICTURE NEWS

THE Kinegraphone, the latest machine to enter the field of talking motion pictures, and a product of the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y., is being given its first public demonstration this week at the State Theatre in Schenectady. A demonstration to the press and to a number of invited persons, together with a large force of engineering experts from the General Electric Company, was given last Friday at the State theatre. The new device is being used this week along with the regular picture program at the State and is being exceptionally well received by the public.

The sounds came through as clear as the proverbial bell. The General Electric Company has been engaged for a number of months in perfecting many of the details in connection with the machine. It is planned to turn out the Kinegraphone on a large scale and to enter into competition with similar machines now being manufactured.

One of the biggest features of the Kinegraphone is that it means but a slight change in standard motion picture projectors, involving, as it does, only the addition of a sound-reproducing attachment and a loud speaker suitable for auditorium use. Both the picture and the sound are recorded on the same film.

One of the demonstrations consisted of music to accompany feature films. The development of this field will require absolutely no change in the technique of making the original picture. After the picture has been made and titled, accompanying music can be played by a concert orchestra and recorded on a film. The picture and the sound records are then printed on one film in the proper time relation.

To the casual observer the film used in the General Electric machine does not differ from the ordinary motion picture positive. The film is of standard width, but along the left margin there is a strip, a small fraction of an inch in width, on which there appears a serrated pattern corresponding to the frequencies and intensities of sounds recorded. It is this pattern which produces the sound.

The General Electric Company believes that one of the greatest possibilities in the device will consist of supplying a full orchestral accompaniment for pictures, resulting in theatres which do not have orchestras being able to furnish pictures with the same music as the metropolitan house.

The company also believes that the device can be used to great advantage with many of the newsreels, particularly those showing important persons who may be able to be seen as well as heard.

It is intended to also stress the application of the General Electric machine to the schools and colleges, many of which are already equipped with motion picture projectors and using the same in classroom work. It will be possible for even a novice to run the machine with film equipped with the General Electric device, making possible an authority upon some subject being shown to speak and point out the important features of the picture simultaneously as they appear upon the screen.

In recording the sounds, a microphone of any desirable type may be employed, together with amplifiers. The microphonic system actuates a tiny vibrating mirror which records the sound on the film. The higher the pitch of note, the higher its frequency—and the greater the frequency of vibrations of the mirror, reproducing each sound vibration as a mark on the film.

The sound record can be made in different ways. Both the picture and the sound can be simultaneously recorded on the same film by mounting the two recording elements as a unit or the two recorders can be mounted separately and the sound and picture film negatives made as individual units.

S. M. P. E. Meeting Big Success

economy has been obtained and better methods instigated. One of the fields that this committee is now very actively engaged in is the standardization of projection speeds and other equipment common to sound reproducing apparatus.

Reports of other committees brought forth other work that the society has been doing to solve the technical problems of the studios, theatres and laboratories.

An innovation at this convention was the exhibition and announcement of new equipment by manufacturers. It is the plan of the society to incorporate this feature in forthcoming conventions in order that a record may be presented of new and improved equipment through the official publication of the society.

Manufacturers announcing new equipment were the Brankert Light Projection Co., Detroit, Mich.; Hertner Electric Co., Cleveland, Ohio; International Projector Corp., New York City; Eastman Kodak Company, Rochester, N. Y.; Duplex Motion Picture Industries, Long Island City, N. Y.; Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J.; Victor Animatograph Company, New York City, and Dworsky Film Machine Corp., New York City.

The new apparatus described was on exhibition at the convention.

The Arrangements Committee presented a very delightful program for the entertainment of the attending members and guests. On Monday night after a get-together dinner, a special demonstration of the Movietone was extended the society through the courtesy of the Fox-Case Corporation.

The following were among the members and guests attending the convention:

J. C. Kroesen, Edison Lamp Works, Harrison, N. J.; S. R. Burns, International Projector Corp., New York City; W. C. Kunzmann, National Carbon Co., Cleveland, Ohio; E. K. Educational's Earning Feb. to June $753,737

EDUCATIONAL PICTURES, which in February took over Educational Film Exchanges, and the exchanges of its distributors as well as studio units, established net earnings of $270,117 from February 14, 1927, when the new company was formed, to June 30; the sum was available for dividends.

The report for the full year ended on June 30th. It included business acquired by the newly formed Educational Pictures and shows net earnings of $753,737 after all minority interests have been deducted. In the previous fiscal year the net earnings were $748,-143. In view of the reorganization, the net of Educational Pictures is regarded as favorable. E. W. Hammons, president of Educational, regards current business as "very satisfactory."

Oklahoma Exhibitors Eliminating Overbuying

EXHIBITORS exercise wariness now in lining up their bookings for the season—at least Oklahoma exhibitors do, according to W. Z. Spearman, of Oklahoma City, who is president of the Oklahoma exhibitor unit. "In the good old days," said Mr. Spearman, "we bought everything that came along, played what we had dates for and when the new product was out next year we bought it, too, cancelled out the old stuff and all was as merry as a marriage bell. But now we play or pay for everything we buy. So we have to watch our step."

A showman who makes three changes per week realizes now that he can play but 156 films a year, Mr. Spearman further added. "He is not now buying over 125, leaving the balance of the dates open to spot-book the ones that are getting the big money."

Differences Between Labor and Exhibitors Ironed Out

Differences between the motion picture machine operators union in Albany and Troy, N. Y., and the exhibitors over wages and working conditions, were ironed out to the satisfaction of all parties concerned, at a conference held in New York City last Thursday, and which continued throughout the entire day. Harry M. Brooks, of Troy, president of the local in that city and a former member of the New York State Assembly, and Benjamin Edgar, of Albany, represented the operators, while the exhibitors were represented by Joseph Wallace, of the Proctor interests in Albany and Troy, Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Stanley theatres in the two cities, and C. H. Buckley, owner of the Leland and the Clinton Square in Albany.

A three year agreement has been entered into between the operators and the theatres, under which working conditions will remain the same over the period, but increases ranging from $7.50 to $9.50 a week, and a yearly increase of $1.25 per week, for the next two years, are included in the agreement.

Seattle Union Agrees to New Two-Year Contract

Following many conferences between union representatives and motion picture theatre interests during the last few weeks in Seattle, Washington, the threatened trouble with the musicians and operators' unions was averted by the formation of a new two-year contract. Under the terms of the contract, the musicians have accepted the same scale as they were working on in 1926 and 1927, with the provision that they automatically receive a 5 per cent increase at the beginning of the fall season in 1928.

Reports received from Tacoma, Washington, however, indicate that the differences are still unsettled in that city. The unions there were holding out in their demands that every downtown first run house employ an orchestra, and that present orchestras in two of the theatres receive wage increases. It is understood that the Tacoma Theatre Managers' Association has flatly refused to accede to the union demands.

"Kontingent" Sponsors Admit Failures

Herron, Back from European Tour, Reports on Conditions Abroad

FRED L. HERRON, executive in charge of foreign relations at the Hays offices, is back from a tour of Europe, where he has been looking into conditions. He brought with him much interesting information regarding production and distribution abroad.

Among other things, Herron stated the "kontingent" system in Europe is an acknowledged failure by the governments that sponsor it. Despite this, however, other countries plan to introduce restrictive systems along similar lines.

Germany has practically killed off possibility for world-wide distribution of its pictures, according to Herron, because the studios there are principally concerned with making product to meet the "kontingent" regulations. For that reason no big pictures are under way or planned in Germany. The average German picture does good business in German theatres, and gets wide distribution in North, Central and Southern Europe. They do only fairly well in England, but are more numerous in the Far East, South America and South Africa.

"France is not talking of quotas," said Herron, "but taxation. Exactly what the impost will be is undetermined, but it appears at the moment the taxes will not be heavy."

With regard to England, Herron said: "The film bill in England will doubtless become a law in November. Parliament reconvenes in October, but it will probably be a month before the quota regulations come up. In its present form the bill provides for a quota of 7½ per cent on both distributor and exhibitor.

"The British bill may undergo changes. The draft will go through committee before presentation to Parliament, and it is here that revisions may be made. It is not impossible that 5 per cent will be determined upon for the first year, increasing to 20 per cent over a period of ten years. The big American organizations, speaking broadly, will buy British-made pictures to meet the quota, rather than produce them. England is in fine shape. British-made pictures are improving in quality, and in Britain and her colonies they go over well."

Discussing conditions in Italy, Herron said there was considerable talk in Rome of a "kontingent," but so far it was nothing but talk. He seems to think there was little prospect of an Italian quota.

Herron said there was less objection to American pictures in important European markets now than in the past as Hollywood is internationalizing its output, and eliminating much that was held objectionable abroad. There is little market for what he termed "trash." European exhibitors want good films.

Epidemic Forcing Fans to Ignore Alberta Theatres

An epidemic of infantile paralysis has played havoc with theatre business in Edmonton, Alberta, during recent weeks, the exhibitors being affected largely because of a ban by the health authorities on the attendance of children under 16 years of age at local theatres. The epidemic reached alarming proportions, with the result that adults as well as children stayed away from the theatres. Famous Players has three important theatres there, the Capitol, Empire and Empress.

Paralysis Epidemic in Ohio Reported Waning

The infantile paralysis epidemic which has been raging for the past month in the southern part of Ohio, is reported to be on the wane, and most of the towns that were closed are opened again. Those listed as operating on schedule, which had been closed as a precautionary measure, include Long's theatre at Cadiz, the Ritz and Grand theatres at Newcomerstown; the Liberty and Geneva, and the houses in New Philadelphia.

Baltimore Exhibitor Sues Against Demand for Deposit on Film Service

AN action brought in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia may set a precedent in demanding from exhibitors a deposit for film rentals. James E. Hartlove, a Baltimore exhibitor, has filed an action asking the court for a mandatory injunction to compel the Washington Film Board and the members of its credit committee to serve him with films.

It is alleged that the credit committee of the film board has refused to give Hartlove service unless he deposits $500 with each exchange from which he seeks service.

When Hartlove took over the Baltimore house from his father he was told he must assume outstanding contracts if he desired service without posting a deposit. Hartlove declares this would necessitate posting $6,000, which he claims is an arbitrary and prohibitive figure. According to his complaint, it means he must assume the contracts or be forced out of business. The complaint also charges that the same conditions have not been imposed on any other exhibitor.

Oklahoma Hints Trouble

Spearman Says Laws Will Be Passed to Protect Independent Theatre Owners

S. Z. SPEARMAN, president of the Oklahoma exhibitor association, threatens trouble for the big releasing organizations in the way of new legislation unless they change their present attitude toward the independent theatre owners. In commenting in the organization's bulletin on the complaints made by exhibitors of the state against Griffith Bros., Universal ally, Spearman said:

"If the big releasing companies continue in their present attitude toward the independent theatre owners of Oklahoma and the United States, a law, with teeth in it, will be placed on the statute books of Oklahoma, and also of the United States, which will effectively and completely separate the production and releasing of pictures from the exhibition of them.

"If the Universal, Paramount, Metro and other big releasing companies expect to hold the friendship and secure the business of the independent theatre owners of Oklahoma and the United States, we would suggest that they devote all their time and energy and resources to making and releasing pictures that will go over at the box-office, and not dissipate their time, energy and resources in trying to squeeze every dollar out of both ends of the industry."

Among other things the Oklahoma exhibitors charge that the Griffith Circuit, in towns where it operates more than one house, gives with each paid admission a free ticket to its other house.

When the matter was brought to the attention of Dan Michalove, general manager of the Universal Circuit, he declared that the company was in no way responsible for the actions or policy of the Griffith Circuit, as it is but a minority stockholder.

Spearman says there is no law that prohibits a film company or its affiliated or associate companies from owning and operating as many theatres as they are able to buy and operate, but he points to the possibility of trouble with the Federal Trade Commission.

The Oklahoma exhibitors are making extensive preparations for their convention to be held October 31st and November 1st. Among the important things that will be considered are chain competition in the state and unfair competition of non-theatrical institutions, some of which are presenting free shows.

Boston Leading During Last Lap of Tiffany Drive

The last lap of the Tiffany national sales contest finds the Boston exchange still holding the lead. Marcel Mekelbrug, the Boston exchange manager, has been leading his exchangement to victory for the past few weeks, being closely pressed for first place by the Denver and Detroit branches, second and third in line respectively. Atlanta is fourth in the race and New York fifth.

The standing of the first five exchanges are as follows: Boston 1; Denver 2; Detroit 3; Atlanta 4; New York 5.

Another important feature of this National Sales Contest is the fact that there are also cash awards for the bookers. Their standings for the first five positions are: New York 1; Detroit 2; New Haven 3; Chicago 4; Cleveland 5. The western division, being headed by H. C. Borger, holds first place in the territorial rating.

Changes in F B O's Branch Divisions

Several changes have been instituted in F B O branch divisions, according to Lee Marcus, the F B O general sales manager. C. E. Penrod, division manager at Indianapolis, will take charge of the Indianapolis, Kansas City, St. Louis, Des Moines, Sioux Falls, Omaha, Milwaukee and Minneapolis branch offices.

Cleve Adams, with headquarters at Chicago, will be in charge of the exchanges in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Detroit, Memphis, Oklahoma, Dallas and New Orleans.

Loew, M-G-M Start Operation of National Broadcasting Chain Next Month

LOEW'S, INC., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will start operation some time next month of their broadcasting chain of sixty stations in forty cities, according to announcement made by a representative of Loew's. The story, previously published, had not been confirmed until this week.

WHN on the Loew Theatre building in New York and WPAP at the Palisade Amusement Park in Jersey will start their operations next month. The chain will function through wires extending from coast to coast and will be commercialized only to the extent of actually covering the cost of production and overhead of the system.

Included in the chain will be stations in the following cities: Newark, Paterson and Trenton, N. J., Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, D. C., Cincinnati, Charlotte, N. C., Wheeling, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Columbus, Hamilton, Ohio, Indianapolis, Atlanta, Memphis, Birmingham, New Orleans, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Scranton, Harrisburg, Altoona, and Johnstown, Pa., Buffalo, Utica, Syracuse, Rochester, Pilton, N. H., Boston, Providence, New Haven, Dayton, St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha, Fargo, N. D., and Los Angeles.

Param't News Speeds Legion Shots to N. Y.

TERMED by the New York Morning World as "the fastest trans-Atlantic shipment ever made" Paramount News made record time in transporting its negative of events in Paris at the American Legion Convention from the steamer Ile de France to its laboratory near the Times Square district and in delivering prints of the same just 17 minutes after the negative had been received. The Paramount and other houses in New York exhibited the shots on Sunday evening at 9:30, exactly six days after the actual events had occurred in Paris. This breath-taking exhibition of speedy transportation brought the Legion scenes into the Broadway houses one day before the steamer could have taken them to New York. The S.S. Leviathan was met 100 miles off shore by an airplane containing S. H. MacKean, assignment editor of Paramount News, and H. I. Wells, pilot. George Ercole, Paris cameraman for Paramount News, upon sighting them, dropped the air metal box containing the films into the water, the corks attached to the box buoying its precious contents up. The plane located the box, hauled it in board and then flew back to New York, where it landed at West 96th Street and the Hudson River. It was there met by an automobile and the films were shortly afterwards shown in the principal theatres.

B. I. Van Dyke, Iowa Exhibitor, Dies

A veteran theatre manager and for two terms president of the Iowa Theatre Owners Association, B. I. Van Dyke, died in the Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago following an operation for gall bladder trouble. Van Dyke managed the Royal Theatre, an old theatre at Eighth and Locust Streets in Des Moines, which was torn down this summer.

The deceased was president of the Iowa Theatre Owners Association, being reelected to that post in 1926.

Plan New Suburban Theatre for Des Moines

A new suburban theatre is being contemplated for Des Moines that will be located near the campus of Des Moines University. Charles F. Chambers plans to build the house, which will have as its address 211 Euclid Avenue. Mr. Chambers applied for permission to build the theatre, and has now secured the permit, is the report, after delay occasioned by the necessity of securing the approval of adjoining property owners for a variation in the length of the rear yard.

Oklahoma M. P. T. O. Will Meet Oct. 31 and Nov 1

The annual convention of the Oklahoma M. P. T. O. will be held in Oklahoma City on October 31st and November 1st., according to the Directors who met recently. The convention will be held at the Huckins Hotel as it was last year. An effort will be made to have the national president, Mr. Woodhull present, it is said.

Many Notables to Be Present at T. O. Meet

NUMEROUS motion picture theatre celebrities will be present at the M.P.T.O.A. convention, to be held in the Hays Hotel, Jackson, Mich. When the session begins Oct. 11, a who's who list of those registered, it is expected, will include S. L. Rothafel—whose acceptance of an invitation is already on file; William James, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio; H. A. Cole, president of the M.P.T.O. in Texas; Fred J. Harrington, secretary of the Pennsylvania M.P.T.O.; George Erdman, Cleveland secretary for the M.P.T.O.; A. J. Moeller, general manager of the American Cinema Association and a former Michigan resident; Congressmen Robert J. Clancy and Clarence J. McLeod of Detroit; Mayor Smith, also of Detroit, and, of course, H. M. Richey, who presides so efficiently over the affairs of the M.P.T.O. in Michigan. Plenty of local film men also intend to be there. Prize contests, a golf tournament, parties, special trips and a big surprise are planned.

Five New Films Going Into Work at Burbank Plant

Five new productions will go into work during the month of October at First National's plant at Burbank; three others will follow on November 1st.

"Sailors' Wives," with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, go into work around the first of the month. "Down Went McGinty," to co-feature George Sidney and Charlie Murrary, is scheduled to begin on October 3d, under the direction of Mervyn Le Roy. "The Noose," a new Richard Barthelmess vehicle, is set for active filming on October 10th, with John Francis Dillon at the megaphone. "The Butter and Egg Man" will get under way about the middle of the month with Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackail playing the leads, under Richard Wallace's direction. Milton Sills, who by that time will have completed "The Valley of the Giants," expects to start work at once on a new picture the title of which has not yet been set. The three pictures which are to go into work the first of November are "The Royal American," starring Ken Maynard, "Louisiana," with Billie Dove, and a new Johnny Hines comedy.

Columbia Buys Option on New "Lone Wolf" Story

Columbia Pictures has taken an option on the next Louis Joseph Vance novel, now being written around this crook character. It is the intention of Columbia to make "The Lone Wolf" pictures an institution with the company and to produce one as a special every year.

Laurel and Hardy New Roach Team for M-G-M

During the coming year Hal Roach will feature Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy as a new starring team in the comedies he is producing for release through Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Both comedians have been with Roach for several years and have appeared in the same productions as members of a comedy trio.

Producing Companies Are Ahead of Schedules

Fox, FBO and Warners Announce Over Half of Features Are Already Completed

PRODUCING companies are progressing rapidly with their 1927-28 production schedules, according to announcements made this week. Fox has completed one-half of their 52 feature productions, and work is advancing on six additional ones. FBO announces that 29 of their 58 features are already completed, and Warners are well in advance of their schedule at the west coast studios of the company.

The Fox productions already completed are: "Paid to Love," "Chain Lightning," "Singed," "Tumbling River," "What Price Glory," "Two Girls Wanted," "Loves of Carmen," "The Joy Girl," "The Gay Retreat," "Blackjack," "Publicity Madness," "Silver Valley," "East Side, West Side," "High School Hero," "Pajamas," "Very Confidential," "Robinson and Crusoe," "The Arizona Wildcat," "Branded Sombrero," "Blood Will Tell," "Jungle Rose," "My Wife's Honor," and four John Gilbert reissues, "Cameo Kirby," "Honor First," "St. Elmo" and "Truxton King."

The following features are announced as completed by FBO: "The Great Mail Robbery," "The Coward," "Not for Publication," "The Racing Romeo," "Clancy's Kosher Wedding," "In a Moment of Temptation," "The Gingham Girl," "Jake the Plumber," "Shanghaied," "Judgment of the Hills," "Hook and Ladder No. 9," "The Harvester," "South Sea Love," "Aflame in the Sky," "Little Mickey Grogan," "Dead Man's Curve," "Loves of Ricardo," "Moon of Israel," "The Flying U Ranch," "The Cherokee Kid," "The Desert Pirate," "The Mojave Kid," "The Bandit's Son," "Driftin' Sands," "The Boy Rider," "The Slingshot Kid," "Wizard of the Saddle," "Breed of Courage," "Ranger of the North."

Nine of the FBO features now in production include "Coney Island," "Red Riders of Canada," "Freckles," "Her Summer Hero," "The Little Buckaroo," "The Renegade," "When the Law Rides," "The Swift Shadow," and "A Legionnaire in Paris."

Warners offer twenty-six features and a group of special productions. Those on the schedule completed to date follow: "The Bush Leaguer," "The Desired Woman," "Slightly Used," "Jaws of Steel," "One Round Hogan," "A Sailor's Sweetheart," "Sailor Izzy Murphy," "A Reno Divorce," "A Dog of the Regiment," "Ginsberg the Great," "Don Juan," "The Better 'Ole," "The Missing Link," "When a Woman Loves," "Old San Francisco," "The First Auto," "The Jazz Singer," "The Fortune Hunter," and "Ham and Eggs."

In production at the present time are "Good Time Charley," "The Girl from Chicago," "The Comeback," "Beware of Married Men," "If I Were Single," and "Glorious Betsy."

Sterling Pictures has now passed its first lap of production and now enters the second phase of its production schedule. The entire list of eight productions has been definitely planned as to production and release date, with "Stranded," the first picture, and "Pretty Clothes," the second, now finished.

Charlie Paddock Technical Advisor for 'College Hero'

Charley Paddock, champion sprinter of the world and one of the greatest authorities on college life, has been signed by Columbia for the production of "The College Hero."

Mr. Paddock, who will act as technical adviser, also appears as the coach of the football team in "The College Hero."

Stagehands,, Operators, Musicians Strike in Minneapolis and St. Paul

MORE than 500 stage hands, motion picture operators and musicians are on strike in twelve theatres in Minneapolis and St. Paul, with every prospect that it will continue for some time. The theatres affected are the Palace, Orpheum, Capitol and Metropolitan in St. Paul and the Garrick, State, Shubert, Hennepin-Orpheum, Seventh Street Palace, Gayety and Metropolitan in Minneapolis.

Stage hands were first to walk out when their demands were refused for a day off with pay and the right to appeal the case of a discharged stage hand to the executive board of the union. Non-union men were employed backstage and this brought a sympathetic strike of the operators and musicians.

Strikers have been picketing the theatres and police have been stationed as guards. So far there has been no trouble. Finkelstein & Ruben are advertising that all performances are proceeding as usual, even the musical features. W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest Theatre Owners, declares the theatres will be kept open no matter what transpires.

Loew's Houston to Open

Will Inaugurate Chain to Be Built by Company Throughout Southwest

THE third large house to be launched in Houston, Texas, since January will be formally opened October 1st, when Loew's Theatre, erected by Loew's, Inc., will have its dedicatory program. The opening was originally planned for September 24th, but additional time was needed to complete all necessary arrangements. The new house is the first of a chain to be built by Loew's, Inc., in the southwest, according to announcement by Lionel Keane, southern representative of the company. Plans are under way to start additional houses throughout the territory in the near future.

The new Loew Theatre in Houston was built at a cost said to be $1,500,000, and is the third of these larger houses completed during the year. The other two are the Metropolitan and Kirby, both Publix houses. The Loew will bring the number of seats added in Houston since January to 8,000.

Until a year ago the Majestic, an Interstate house, was the only theatre in Houston that laid claim to architectural grandeur. At that time the Queen Theatre, a Publix house with a seating capacity of less than 1,800, was the leading motion picture theatre.

No definite plans have yet been announced regarding the program for the opening of the Loew house, nor has the theatre staff been named. These details are being arranged by Loew's southern representative, Lionel Keane. The new house is of the Adam type of architecture, with soft blue, gold, light green and ivory tints predominating. There are entrances and exits on two streets.

Houston takes pride in the fact that there are few cities of its size that can boast four theatres of such architectural beauty and general excellence of productions as the Metropolitan, Majestic, Kirby and Loew. R. E. Crebill, manager of the Publix de luxe houses, said last week that Houston is the only city on the route from Buffalo to Atlanta to Houston that has two Publix houses ranking with the Metropolitan and Kirby. There are houses on the "A" circuit with larger seating capacities, but none are of a finer type than these two.

Double Features Adopted

Large Suburban Theatres of Toronto Start Plan Launched by Small Houses

AN interesting situation has developed at Toronto, Ontario, with regard to the presentation of double feature programmes.

Some months ago the local exhibitors were urged to discard the policy of presenting two full-length features on a bill, but the small independent owners demurred, claiming that the double-feature bill was largely their chief weapon against the larger suburban houses. No further action was taken in the movement and things continued as they were.

The shoe is on the other foot now, however, as the large suburban theatres of Famous Players Canadian Corp., of which there are some fifteen, are presenting double-feature bills with one or two exceptions. In plain words, the Famous Players houses in the outlying districts have met the independents at their own game and double-feature bills are now common throughout the city, except in the downtown area and a few other spots.

Independent exhibitors are not saying much, but it is evident that they are concerned regarding the situation, although, generally speaking, they have been doing good business.

In the meantime, the film exchanges are not saying a word because two features are better than one from their business standpoint, and there are plenty of feature films to go around.

For some years it has been the regular policy of exhibitors in Montreal, with the exception of the big houses, to offer double bills, and the neighborhood public has been educated to expect something in the nature of a double bill at nearby theatres. Largely the same situation has now developed in Toronto, where, for years, one feature was considered quite enough. Short subjects are being shown as before, with the result that programmes are profuse—and really too long.

First National Releasing Five in October

The First National release schedule for October includes two specials and three other pictures.

"Rose of the Golden West," the George Fitzmaurice special, will be released on October 2nd. Mary Astor and Gilbert Roland are featured.

"American Beauty," the second of Billie Dove's starring productions, will be released on October 9th. Richard Wallace directed. "The Crystal Cup," directed by John Francis Dillon, is the release for October 16th. Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall are featured.

"Breakfast at Sunrise," a Constance Talmadge vehicle, directed by Malcolm St. Clair, will be released on October 23rd. "No Place To Go,' is the final release for the month, the date October 30th, and Mervyn LeRoy the director. Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes are featured.

Columbia to Star Jack Holt in "The Tigress"

Jack Holt's first Columbia vehicle will be "The Tigress," a romantic love story set against the background of the Spanish Sierra Nevadas. Production will start immediately upon the selection of the director and the remainder of the cast.

Churches Combine to Support Worthy Films

THE Church and Drama Association, composed of representatives from the churches of America, Protestant, Catholic and Hebrew, have joined their forces for the purpose of supporting worthwhile entertainment on the stage and screen.

Hon. John W. Davis, former candidate for the presidency and ex-ambassador to England, is honorary president of the association. The Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, president of the Federal Council of Churches, is president. Rev. George Reid Andrews is executive director and editor of the weekly guide which the association is issuing. The vice-presidents are Dr. Cyrus Adler, president of the Jewish Theological Seminary, Rev. Francis P. Duffy, pastor of Holy Cross Church, Right Rev. William T. Manning of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, William Lyon Phelps of Yale University, and Mrs. John Ferguson, representing organized churchwomen.

In addition to the bulletin service, every other possible avenue of information will be utilized by the Church and Drama Association in its effort to build up a strong patronage for worthwhile theatrical productions, not only in New York, but throughout the country. Producers are not to know in advance whether their plays are being considered or not, Mr Andrews stated.

The first issue of the bulletin recommends "The Student Prince."

E. M. Loew Buys Apartment Bldg. in Somerville

E. M. Loew, head of the E. M. Loew circuit in New England, has purchased an apartment building next to his Day Street Olympia Theatre in Davis Square, Somerville, Mass., and as soon as the present season is over, plans to replace the present structure with a much larger theatre seating approximately 2,400 persons.

The Loew circuit is completing a new theatre in the Thompson Square section of Charlestown. In addition the circuit owns and operates theatres in Lynn, Portland, Casco, Springvale, Fitchburg, New Bedford, Dorchester, Pawtucket and Lowell, sixteen in number.

Pathe Releasing Eight De Mille Films

EIGHT features from the De Mille studios are included among the pictures scheduled for release by Pathe during October and November. First on the list comes "The Angel of Broadway," featuring Leatrice Joy. "A Harp in Hock," with Rudolph Schildkraut and Junior Coughlan, follows. Vera Reynolds is on the list with "Almost Human," while Phyllis Haver is represented by "The Wise Wife." Next on the program is "The Wreck of the Hesperus," with Virginia Bradford and Frank Marion, to be followed by Marie Prevost's "The Rush Hour," and "The Girl in the Pullman," also featuring Miss Prevost. The last of the eight is "Dress Parade," starring William Boyd and heretofore known by the working title of "The West Pointer."

In and Out of Town

FRED QUIMBY, short subjects sales chief of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has extended his trip into the Middle Western states. He is not expected back at the New York office for another week.

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, Fox Film executive, left New York City Wednesday, Sept. 28th, for the Fox studio in Hollywood.

ED. J. SMITH, general manager of sales for Tiffany Productions, has left New York City for a short visit to six Tiffany exchanges where negotiations are now in progress for the booking of Tiffany's program. He will be gone about ten days.

F. W. MURNAU, German director of "Sunrise," has departed from Berlin and is due to arrive in New York the first week of October en route to Hollywood where he will produce his second picture for Fox Films.

A. PAM BLUMENTHAL, president of the Stanley Advertising Co., the Industrial Division of the Stanley Company of America, has just returned from a three months' trip in Europe. His company expects that his negotiations abroad will soon result in a tie-up with a French firm.

HAL ROACH, accompanied by Mrs. Roach, departed on last Friday's Century for the Roach studio at Culver City, where he will personally supervise the completion of the program of 40 comedies to be released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

JOHNNY HINES arrived in New York this week, joining his producer, C. C. Burr, who preceded him by a few days. Both the comedian and Burr expect to remain in Manhattan for about three weeks, during which time they will confer on the next vehicle on which Hines will begin working some time in October.

ANN CHRISTY, leading lady in Harold Lloyd's new picture for Paramount, has completed her work with the bespectacled comedian and will return to Los Angeles before many days, stopping at Logansport, Ind., her home town, on her way to the Coast.

DOROTHY DEVORE, Educational comedienne, arrived in New York last Tuesday, September 17th, from Hollywood to spend a vacation of a week or so. It is the star's first visit to Manhattan. On Monday noon at the Hotel Astor she was hostess at a luncheon to newspaper and trade representatives. Miss Devore leaves later in the week for the West Coast.

EDWARD MONTAGNE, Universal scenarist, arrived from the Coast this week for a story conference with Universal officials at the home office.

CLARENCE V. HAKE, assistant to Colvin W. Brown, vice-president of F B O in charge of foreign distribution, left this week for a trip of three months to Central America, where he will survey film conditions.

THREE United Artists directors, Roland West, Henry King and Herbert Brenon, are now in New York City.

JAMES D. BARTON, play and film broker, sailed Saturday, September 24th, for London, Paris and Berlin to book foreign films obtainable there for the Edyth Totten Theatre, a New York legitimate house which has been converted to the films.

Verbal Promises Banned

Seventh Arbiter Necessary to Decide Case Hinging on Salesman's Word

THE calling of a seventh arbiter was necessary to decide the case brought by Vitagraph against M. A. Manning, of the Opera House of Baldwin, Wisconsin, in which a breach of contract was charged. Manning held that certain verbal promises not in the original contract were made him and that they had not been lived up to. He also claimed that he signed at a price that reduced his profits to almost nothing and that certain pictures in the contract could not be delivered as sold, and that some of the pictures were of such a character that it meant loss of patronage to show them.

The arbitration board ruled that verbal promises not embodied in the contract are not binding upon a distributor and that performance of any part of a contract makes binding the entire contract.

At the hearing of the case Manning maintained he had signed the contract because of promises of service made to him by the salesman and because of threats to sell the contract to his competitor.

After the matter had been freely discussed and the evidence was all in the board was deadlocked and it became necessary to call a seventh arbiter. The latter, in declaring against the exhibitor, held that promises made by the salesman were merely verbal and as they did not form a part of the contract they could not be construed as misstatements of fact. It was also held that Manning was at fault in accepting the salesman's statements without proof of reliability, and that he should have secured definite assurance as to promised installation of Vitaphone and on what terms it was to be paid.

It was ruled that as Manning had accepted several pictures on the contract, even though it had not been confirmed on time, and had given dates for other films, he was legally bound to go through with the contract as stipulated. The board agreed that the exhibitor was not compelled to accept pictures in which the theme had been changed. It was further agreed that any pictures Manning could prove to Vitagraph were of such a type that he could not show them in his theatre should be stricken from the contract.

Skouras Bros. Entering Field in Columbia, Mo.

SKOURAS Brothers Enterprises, Inc., of St. Louis, Mo., are said to have closed a lease on the new theatre that will be erected in Columbia, Mo., by the Tiger Hotel and Theatre Building, Inc.

The Columbia building will be started within a very few days as the general contract for the work has been awarded to the Simon Construction Company of Columbia. The hotel portion will be 9 stories high. The theatre will seat 1,500 persons and will be 82½ feet by 120 feet. The structure will be located on South Eighth street between Broadway and Cherry streets. It will cost upwards of $400,000.

The entry of Skouras Brothers into Columbia is believed to be forerunner of a general movement in that direction. For some time it has been expected that the prominent St. Louis theatre operators would enter the state field on a large scale and within the next few years the organization is expected to take over or build theatres in most of the key cities of Eastern Missouri and also probably in Southern Illinois.

Albany Will Resume Junoir Movies During Winter

Junior Movies, which are said to have had their first inception in Albany, N. Y., a number of years ago, will be continued in that city this winter, opening on October 29 with a Hallowe'en party at one of the city's motion picture houses. Plans for the party are already under way by a Junior Movie committee consisting of many of the most prominent women in Albany.

There will be prize costume contests in connection with the opening of the season. Weekly feature pictures will be shown at a minimum cost throughout the winter and at various times there will be special programs significant of various days. Arrangements are also under way for the annual drive for used toys during Thanksgiving week as well as for the Christmas tree and Christmas festival, by means of which several thousand Albany children will be given holiday cheer.

FBO's "Legionnaire" Film a Tie-Up With Paris Meet

Great tie-up possibilities are on hand in F B O's "A Legionnaire in Paris," a comedy which has as its theme an event which has received front-page publicity in the daily press— the American Legion Convention in Paris. To give the picture the conviction of reality, the Kennedy organization this week rushed a battallion of cameramen on the S. S. Leviathan to take shots of the meet which will be utilized in their entirety in the picture now in the process of filming.

Shots were secured of the line of march on the Champs Elysee, of the notables in attendance, including General Pershing, Marshal Foch, President Gaston Doumergue of France. In addition scenes were filmed at Havre, on the Paris streets, the Follies Bergere and Comedie Francaise. Ernest Koening, F B O's Paris agent, took charge of the shooting.

Warners Schedule Four Films for October

Four productions will be released by Warner Bros. during October. On the 8th, playdates will be open for "Sailor Izzy Murphy," starring George [illegible] "The College Widow," featuring Dolores Costello, is set for the 15th. May McAvoy's new vehicle, "A Reno Divorce," will be released on the 22nd. Rin-Tin-Tin appears in the last October release, his "A Dog of the Regiment" being scheduled for the 29th.

West Coast Celebrates Whole Week as Part of Greater Movie Season

WEST COAST THEATRES injected a novelty into their Greater Movie Season campaign when they set aside a week for the showing of short subjects. This was done as a recognition of the relative importance of these featurettes and they proved a most popular attraction. It was the first time such recognition has been made a part of the regular campaign.

Harold B. Franklin, president of West Coast Theatres, Inc., decided upon the short subject week and it was launched in the West Coast houses the week of September 15th, with the leading stars of the short subject field making personal appearances at nearly all of the larger houses.

Franklin urged the co-operation of all of the companies making short subjects and all responded with their best efforts. Christie, Hal Roach, Educational, International, Paramount, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Pathe were among those who participated.

An Our Gang comedy was shown at the Metropolitan Theatre in Los Angeles and the "gang" delighted capacity audiences with personal appearances. Lupino Lane, making comedies for Educational, made personal appearances at both the Metropolitan and Loew's State Theatres in Los Angeles.

Charley Chase, whose short subjects feature the Pathe program, appeared on the stage at Grauman's Egyptian, and many other actors and actresses appearing in the short comedies visited other West Coast houses.

The West Coast institutional advertising featured the short subject as another plum of the Greater Movie Season. All theatres devoted trailer, lobby, program and individual dual ads to playing up their featurette attractions, and newspaper stories were printed calling attention to short subject week.

As a result of the success attendant upon the first of these short subject weeks during Greater Movie Season they will now become a permanent part of all future West Coast Greater Movie Seasons, according to announcement by President Franklin.

Heart Disease Kills Walter Hays

WALTER HAYS, 57 years of age and vice-president of the Stanley-Mark Strand Corporation, succumbed suddenly to heart disease Tuesday morning, September 27th, at his apartment in the Hotel Alden in New York City. Surviving him are his wife, a son and a daughter. Services were held Thursday afternoon at the Riverside Memorial Chapel.

Mr. Hays entered the theatrical business 14 years ago with Mitchell H. Mark, with whom he founded the Mark Strand Theatre Corporation, which opened the Mark Strand in New York during 1914. He was a director of the theatre corporation which later purchased houses in Syracuse, Albany, Rochester and other cities; in most of these enterprises Mr. Hays was a stockholder. With the ascent of Moe Mark to the presidency of the Mark Strand Corporation, he became vice-president, which office he held until the consolidation of his company with the Stanley Company of America two years ago. Besides being an executive in the Stanley-Mark Strand Corporation, Mr. Hays was also president of the Syracuse-Strand Corp.

M-G-M Has Eight Shorts for October Release

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's releasing schedule of short subjects for the month of October consists of eight short features.

On October 1st "The Flag," a technicolor story of the birth of the American flag. In the cast of this junior feature are Francis X. Bushman, Enid Bennett, Johnnie Walker and Alice Calhoun; Arthur Maude directed. Also scheduled for the 1st is "The Lighter That Failed," a Hal Roach comedy with Charley Chase and direction by James Parrott. On October 8th "Dog Days," the fourth of the Ufa Oddities series, will be released as will also "The Second Hundred Years," in which appear Roach's new comedy team, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy. Fred Guiol directed these two.

"The Call of the Cuckoo," a Max Davidson comedy directed by Clyde Bruckman, will make its appearance on October 15th. Supporting Davidson are Spec O'Donnell and Lillian Elliott. "Hidden Death Traps," another of the Ufa shorts, is programmed for the 22nd in company with "The Old Wallop," an "Our Gang" comedy produced by Roach and directed by Robert McGowan. "The Way of All Pants," the second Chase vehicle for the month, will come on the 29th.

Eight Subjects Comprise Pathe's Oct. 2nd Program

"A Gold Digger of Weepah," a two-reeler from Mack Sennett, "Outwitting Time," a Grantland Rice Sportlight, "The Death Menace of Lost Canyon," the sixth chapter of "The Hawk of the Hills," Pathe Review No. 40, Topics of the Day No. 40, "The River of Doubt," an Aesop Film Fable, and Pathe News issues Nos. 82 and 83 make up the Pathe program of short subjects for the week of October 2nd.

The Sennett number presents Billy Bevan, Alma Bennett, Johnny Burke, Sunshine Hart, Andy Clyde and Matty Kemp. The direction is by Harry Edwards, the story by Jefferson Moffitt. The Pathe Review issue shows "Jes' Driftin' Down Ol' Lazy River," "The Imperial City of China" and "Words and Music By. . . ."

Newsreel Resume

Fox News, Vol. 8, No. 10, leads off with shots of the A. E. F.'s second arrival in France; equine thoroughbreds at Newport, R. I. An Austrian's new motor-driven machine, followed by pictures of Hindenburg at 80, are next shown. United States agent inspecting health of Samoans, Europe's smart set along the famous resort at Biarritz, France, and girls racing on aquaplanes, wind up the reel.

The first number of the new series, Vol. 9, shows the A. E. F. welcome in Paris, cyclists contesting at N. Y. Velodrome bowl, sheep descending Cascade Mountains into corrals, persons featured in the day's news, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad pageant, and football activities on college campi through country. A stirring finish is made with shots of nine aviators leaving plane via parachutes.

M-G-M News, Vol. 1, No. 12, plays up the Dempsey-Tunney affair, and gives prominence to scenes of the A. E. F. in France. Speed boats versus express trains, foot-printing babies to prevent mix-ups, views of Nick Schenck and Mayor Walker, and the popularity of bull fighting in France are other subjects.

Vol. 1, No. 13. More shot news of the A. E. F. Paris Convention head march of events. An "Iron Horse Fair" shows progress of transportation, anti-aircraft guns prove worth in sharpshooting tests, Lindy visits M-G-M studios, and high divers give exhibition of cliff jumping. Goat walking tight-rope supplies novelty, while highlight is had in scenes of the nine men leaving plane at two-minute periods.

Kinograms, No. 5329, portrays floral offerings being strewn over Pacific to honor Dole dead. Berlin aerial circus is next witnessed, followed by novel scene of farm on top of skyscraper. U. S. cavalrymen show their skill, and Los Angeles feeds goats with cast-off straw hats. Trained seal, Australia's double of Teddy bear, and Tunney's defense of title complete scenes.

No. 5330 presents parade of Legionnaires in Paris, glimpses of Lindbergh, winner of New York to Spokane dash, memorial services in Mid-Pacific honoring lost Dole flyers. New Hampshire's cliff divers, railroad anniversary celebrations in Maryland, and test scenes of navy's daring airmen dropping from airplanes.

Pathe News, No. 79, depicts recent Chicago fistic battle, a new bird-like plane, visiting Japanese war ships, beautiful and little-known waterfall in remote Argentina, A. E. F.'s reception in France, and battle games of German Republic.

No. 80 introduces its stories with Tunney's arrival in New York, and follows with latest planes of German engineers, Mrs. Horn winning national golf title, Baltimore & Ohio Railroad pageant, nine airmen leaping from airplane to test parachutes, and Paris saluting Legionnaires on Victory March.

Paramount News, Issue No. 17, shows Hindenburg, army flyers testing practicability of landing blimps on city roofs, Pershing at head of voyaging Legionnaires, Dempsey-Tunney fight, police dog acting before camera, champion rifle marksmen, and scenes of New York's motorcycle races. Other news flashes include France's victory bell, which will toll over every French battlefield, tricks of sacred temple monkeys in India, and airplane crash in New Jersey.

No. 18 includes A. E. F. in Paris, jump to safety of nine airmen, splash coaster, latest water sport, German's new radial plane, Japanese girls swimming, army testing anti-aircraft guns, Foch and Pershing meeting again and German cruisers at practice.

:: "The C eck-Up" ::

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who consider it "Fair"; the third, the number who consider it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who consider it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Key City Reports

New York City

BROADCAST of the Dempsey-Tunney fight cut deeply into at least one night's business of a rather ordinary week among New York theatres. One official of a large house stated that the Chicago fracas was responsible for at least a $3,000 drop in the figures for Thursday. In addition to this, the finest weather this season drew many away from the bright lights.

However, the Roxy managed to keep "7th Heaven" over the $100,000 mark for the second week and under the existing conditions this must be considered satisfactory. Remember also that this is a long picture.

The Capitol with "The Big Parade" at popular prices did a brisk business and trade at this house is expected to boom with a radical change in presentation policy. At the Paramount, "One Woman to Another" with Paul Whiteman's orchestra as a bolster, averaged a fair week, and this can also be said of the other Publix houses showing "Underworld" and "Wings." Both the latter continue to pull well. The Strand also had an average week with "The Drop Kick," another campus picture.

The Globe continues to do nicely with "The Patent Leather Kid" and Hugo Riesenfeld has good reason to be gratified with the showing made by his presentation and "The Cat and the Canary" during an extended run at the Colony. The "Garden of Allah," at the Embassy is drawing a steady trade and the bigger pictures, "The King of Kings" and "Les Miserables" are reported to be turning in a fairly satisfactory gate.

One of the best box office pictures of the week was at the Hippodrome where "Alias The Lone Wolf" well pleased the audiences of this theatre. The ticket register at the Astor may not be clicking as merrily as when "The Big Parade" was there but it is said that "The Student Prince" is catching on nicely.

Chicago

BETTER weather conditions proved beneficial to theatre attendance during the past week and normal business was the rule, except on the night of the Dempsey-Tunney fight, when a large number of people attended the battle or remained at home to hear it over the radio, cut into box office receipts.

At the Chicago the Duncan sisters in person and on the screen in "Topsy and Eva" and a Spitalny production, "Mid Summer's Night Dream," pulled average business. "Camille," which was in its last week at the Roosevelt, turned in a fair box office report, as did McVickers with "The Way of All Flesh." The Oriental pulled some of the thousands attending the boxing match and a big business was done with "Smile, Brother, Smile" on the screen and Paul Ash and his gang in "Doll House Follies" on the stage. "What Price Glory" and Movietone showed a big improvement over the previous week at the Monroe, and a long run is predicted for this feature. The Orpheum continued to do a good business with "Old San Francisco" as its screen feature and Vitaphone.

Northshore houses shared in better business, the Granada which had as its offering "The Blood Ship" and Benny Meroff's special anniversary stage show "Our First Year" playing to good business. The same was true of the Uptown, which had as its attraction the popular Benny Kreuger and the screen feature "Twelve Miles Out." At the Sheridan "The Joy Girl" on the screen and Gene Buck and his band on the stage did average business.

"The Blood Ship" was the screen feature at the Marbro with Vitaphone and Charles Kaley, rounding out a bill which proved a good box office combination.

The Tivoli on the southside featured "The Stolen Bride" on the screen and Lester Allen on the stage with Frankie Masters and his band, attendance being normal. Attendance at the Capitol and Avalon was good, the former's bill including "The Fighting Eagle" and Buddy Fisher and his Buddies in "School Days" and the latter "The Joy Girl" and Del Delbridge and his Merrymakers.

Boston

BOSTON'S theatres played to an excellent week's business with the attendances of last week remaining steady throughout the current week. Broadcasts of the Tunney-Dempsey battle at all the theatres Thursday night helped to bring out the record crowds.

Paramount's "Underworld" at the Metropolitan, played to well filled houses through the week and showed an increased business as the week advanced.

M-G-M's "Mockery" played to capacity houses the entire week, Saturday's business being unusually heavy. All that is needed is to attach Lon Chaney's name to a picture to bring out the crowds in Boston.

"For the Love of Mike" attracted generous sized audiences to the Washington Street Olympia, especially interesting groups of college men.

Paramount's "Nevada" scored a hit at the Scollay Square Olympia. Excellent's "The Nest" was given its premiere at Loew's Orpheum and was one of the best attractions from a box office standpoint, for the early season. "Out All Night" played to good houses at the Keith-Albee Boston. "The Country Doctor" and "Simple Sis" played the twin houses, Modern and Beacon, attracting an average crowd at each. "Hard Boiled Haggerty" and "Service for Ladies" brought a better than average audience to the Capitol.

"The Cohens and the Kellys" headed the Fenway bill with the "Beauty Shoppers" as the companion picture, playing to fair audiences, which increased as the week progressed. "Dearie" was the feature at the University, this Warner Brothers' picture drawing better than several of the preceding films. Bowdoin Square's triple feature bill failed to draw any larger numbers than the former double bill, presenting "The Circus Ace," "Adam and Evil" and "The Sting of Stings."

Detroit

ONLY one off night occurred at the downtown wickets this week. It was caused by the Dempsey-Tunney match, most of the movie patrons preferring to remain away and listen in front of loud speakers. Neglecting this Thursday night drop, business on the whole was excellent, with fine weather conditions prevailing.

A first anniversary show, presenting Publix talent on the stage, and "The Life of Riley" brought good returns throughout the week at the Michigan. Heavier business was noticed in the Madison, however, where "The Big Parade" drew packed houses from 9 A. M. till closing time.

The Adams did a fourth and final week of good business with "Beau Geste," while "Topsy and Eva," at the State, was average.

"What Price Glory" continues nicely at the Fox-Washington, and Charles Cohen, the manager, is very pleased with the attendance records. It will be held over at least another week. The program also includes movietone.

The Capitol picture, "Breakfast at Sunrise," proved fair, and "Jaws of Steel," the Temple feature, went over strong with Keith-Albee acts, while the Colonial featured "Back to God's Country" did good business. Brisk attendance also turned out for "The Romantic Age," playing at the Miles.

St. Louis

ON the whole this was a very good week in St. Louis territory, although the weather most of the week was a trifle too cool for the airdomes that were still operating. However, most of the airdomes are conducted in conjunction with adjoining theatres.

The six first-run theatres of the city reported that business was satisfactory, while the Capitol Theatre, which was re-opened after many months' idleness with a first-run showing of "The Red Kimono," had a good week. However, this house in the future will use pictures after the Missouri and Ambassador.

"Ben Hur," in its second and final week at Loew's State, had a very good week, considering its splendid showing during the opening seven days.

"The Cat and the Canary" was on the screen at the Ambassador and, in conjunction with "Happy Days," a stage show arranged by Ed Lowry as master of ceremonies, had a good week.

Out at the Missouri Theatre, Grand Boulevard, the attraction was "For the Love of Mike." The receipts were satisfactory.

"Old Ironsides" closed its road show engagement at the American Theatre this week. Its business should have been much better considering the advertising this feature has received in this locality.

"The Joy Girl" was the screen offering of the St. Louis Theatre, which also includes Orpheum vaudeville on its program. On the whole it was a good week for this very popular house.

Los Angeles

THE Forum Theatre re-opened this week under the management of Alexander Pantages, who plans to conduct vaudeville on a prologue plan. On the screen, "Paid to Love" was a good drawing card.

It is reported that 400,000 people have seen, "King of Kings" at Grauman's Chinese Theatre. The announcement has been made that the engagement will close at an early date as will "Seventh Heaven" at Carthay Circle. Both pictures showed a gain in attendance during the past week.

The Pantages drew the largest share of motion picture patrons with the first downtown showing of "What Price Glory" at popular prices. Many people are viewing the picture for the second and third time.

Just a short distance from Pantages, Loew's State was also successful in showing Constance Talmadge in "Breakfast at Sunrise." Over the week-end, there were crowds waiting for seats at every performance. Gene Dennis, the wonder girl, was a splendid attraction on the stage.

"The Road to Romance" shown at the Metropolitan drew in large crowds and was especially well attended at the matinees.

"Camille" played to excellent business at the Criterion. It opened with a blaze of lights and many of the stars attended which all served to attract valuable publicity.

"The Country Doctor" at the Uptown ran to a good crowd. "Ben Hur" is playing a return engagement at the Million Dollar and is doing favorable business.

Central Pennsylvania

RETURN of splendid weather, with just enough chill in the atmosphere to drive folks in from the outdoor park amusements, brought business to the Harrisburg picture theatres in proportions to delight the managers. Good attractions were offered in practically all the houses, and several of the theatres on Thursday night profited in an extra way because they provided facilities for announcing blow-by-blow returns from the Tunney-Dempsey prize fight.

"Nevada," at the Victoria, was popular from the first day and maintained a good flow of patronage all week. At the Colonial, "The Prince of Headwaiters," proved an attraction that was very acceptable to Harrisburg movie fans, while in the State the main film attraction, "Million Bid," was also well received.

It is seldom, indeed, that any film picture is shown for two consecutive weeks in any Harrisburg theatre, but "The Big Parade" was held over from the previous week at Loew's Regent.

Manager Feldser, of the Broad Street theatre, appropriately selected this week to show the Sharkey-Dempsey fight films and those of the Bass-Chapman fight, coming at a time when everybody was talking in terms pugilistic.

Baltimore

THE high water marks for good business done in Baltimore for the week beginning Monday, September 19, were made at Warner's Metropolitan and at Loew's Valencia and Century.

At the Metropolitan "When a Man Loves," with Vitaphone accompaniment and presentations, was excellently received by the public and business continued fine throughout the week. "The Magic Flame" proved a good puller at Loew's Valencia with the house holding good crowds every night. "Adam and Evil" had them laughing at the Century and that picture, coupled with Ted Lewis and his band, proved an excellent drawing program.

Next in line came the Maryland Theatre, the Keith-Albee house, which now shows first run pictures, with "The Joy Girl." Good business was done throughout the week there.

Patronage at Keith's Hippodrome was a little off for the week, but Saturday proved good for crowded houses with "The Beauty Shoppers" and five acts of family vaudeville. Business done at Whitehurst's Garden Theatre was good with "Clancy's Kosher Wedding" and five acts of family vaudeville.

A fair business was done by the New Theatre with "We're All Gamblers." Although the Rivoli had a good program, including "Ten Modern Commandments," a girl violinist and three dancing girls, also on the program, business throughout the week was not so good.

Minneapolis

STRIKE conditions which affected eight Minneapolis theatres did not serve to help attendance this week, although the fact that there were some very strong picture attractions showing helped to stimulate business.

The Garrick opened for the fall with "Beau Geste" and did a rattling good business, enough so to warrant holding the film over for a second week. Pola Negri in "Barbed Wire" proved popular at the Strand, and Adolphe Menjou in "Service for Ladies" played to good houses. "Running Wild" enjoyed good business at the Lyric. John Gilbert attracted many people to Pantages, where the reissue "Cameo Kirby" was showing, while "The Swell Head" proved timely at the Hennepin Orpheum, in view of the Dempsey-Tunney fight. The radio, by the way, kept many persons home from the theatre on the night of the big Chicago fight, although all the theatres were giving returns from the stage.

Atlanta

FAVORED by the first cool, brisk weather of the season, Atlanta theatres rallied uniformly good attendance last week, despite the falling off of juvenile patronage due to the recent opening of public schools.

The biggest picture draw of the week was "The Big Parade" at Loew's Grand. The engagement was actually third run in Atlanta, and smashed all records. Vaudeville was laid off for the week. So great was the demand that Manager Thomas H. James had to put on a special morning matinee at 9:00 o'clock Saturday.

Vincent Lopez (in person) and his orchestra played a merry tune directly across the street at the Capitol Theatre, bringing the biggest gross business in the thirteen weeks' history of the house. "The Lone Eagle" on the screen drew favorable comment.

Keith's Georgia had no complaint forthcoming from its box-office toll with "One Woman to Another" as the feature picture, and an unusually good vaudeville bill.

"Loves of Carmen" did well at the Howard, but did not reach the proportions anticipated. Critics gave abundant praise. Al Short's band show unit was excellent.

"The Prince of Headwaiters," at the Metropolitan, drew only an average gross, though the dramatic critics and reviewers declared the fault was in the title of the picture.

The Rialto enjoyed a sunny week with "Soft Cushions" playing the first three days; and with "The Great Mail Robbery" coming on for the last half.

Fair receipts were reported by the Tudor where three pictures split the week—"Hands Off," "Call of the Wilderness," and "The Fighting Hombre."

Only one first run appeared on the bill at the New Alamo—"The Honeymoon Express." This, with three well chosen second runs, rounded out a week that barely reached average business. The slump there is due to loss of the school contingent.

All neighborhood houses were off to a lesser or greater extent. They depend largely upon children for their audiences.

Cleveland

BUSINESS was very good at all the first-run houses here last week. The weather was good theatre weather, clear and cool. And outside competition was light. All of the first-run houses and most of the subsequent run houses gave the fight returns on Thursday night. The vaudeville houses stopped the show and let Graham McNamee entertain the audiences with his broadcasting.

"Camille" went over very big at the Stillman Theatre, where it had been extensively exploited, and was favorably acclaimed by both fans and critics. "College," at the State, played to consistently big houses all week. The Allen had trouble taking care of the crowds wanting to see "Spring Fever." "The Fighting Eagle," coupled with an excellent vaudeville program, filled Keith's Palace consistently all week. "White Pants Willie" was just moderately successful at the Park. Reade's Hippodrome scored well with "The Great Mail Robbery." "The Life of Riley" held up for two weeks at the Cameo. Keith's East 105th St. had large and appreciative audiences attending the performance of "Back to God's Country." The Circle played the first neighborhood showing of "Old San Francisco" with better than average results. The Little Theatre of the Movies offered "Secrets of the Soul" a UFA production, with just fair results.

Oklahoma City

"BARBED WIRE," which wasn't heralded as a n'"extra" of any sort, proved a big success at the Empress Theatre.. In spite of extremely hot days, this theatre played to capacity business. Pola Negri was well liked in this role, and Clive Brook seems already to have built up a reputation in this town.

"Mockery" was well received at the Criterion, but we believe it was not quite a business-getter as it was expected to be. The heat and strong competition from the town's vaudeville house may have been partly responsible for this.

"After Midnight" received good press notices and did very well at the box office considering the heat. "What Happened to Father" did only fair business the last half of the week at this theatre.

"Paid to Love" went over very, very nicely at the Liberty the first of the week. This was followed by "Singed"—a very, very ordinary picture. Business a little below [illegible]

Atlanta

SWELTERING under the worst heat wave the South has known in two years and suffering the usual handicap precipitated by the opening of public schools, theatres nevertheless managed to register average business, and in a few instances better than average.

"Underworld," playing at the Howard, drew first praise of critics and patrons as the outstanding picture of the week.

Fatty Arbuckle was the headline attraction at Loew's Grand where "The Bugle Call" was the feature picture. Business was good and Arbuckle is given major credit.

A meritorious vaudeville bill and "The Joy Girl" at the Capitol brought one of the best week's business that house has checked up during its twelve weeks' history.

Keith's Georgia dropped below its usual average. However, the slump was not due so much to "The Gingham Girl" as to a vaudeville bill that fell a bit flat after a record week with Gene Austin.

Only fair business was registered at the Metropolitan with "Hard Boiled Haggerty"

The Rialto enjoyed a good week with a split bill—"Clancy's Kosher Wedding" and "The Last Outlaw," each of which filled three days.

"Sundown," though it was made long ago, only reached an Atlanta screen last week, having never previously drawn a first-run here. Going on for the first three days of a split week at the Tudor it drew only regrets. "Somewhere in Sonora" redeemed the situation during its successful three-day run the last half.

Only one first run was included in the offerings at the New Alamo—"When The Door Opened," and it drew good response.

Seattle

ANOTHER week of strong programs at a majority of the first run houses brought big gate receipts to Seattle theatres during the last seven days. Moderate weather, and a day's visit from Colonel Charles Lindbergh, were responsible for more than average "drop-in" trade at the larger houses.

High gross for the week was reached, as usual, by the Fifth Avenue Theatre, although it was noticeably under the gross that has been reached at this house in past weeks. Buster Keaton's "College" was the film attraction.

Another big money-getter was "When A Man Loves" at Hamrick's Blue Mouse Theatre. This film, in its opening week, had waiting lines in front of the theatre day and night, and piled up a capacity gross, with no sign of a let-up as it went flying into a second week. Three Vitaphone subjects, rounded out the program.

At Bob Bender's Columbia Theatre, the first week of "The Cat and the Canary" played to capacity houses, due to the picture, a fine publicity campaign, and a good presentation.

Something new for Seattle picture fans was attempted this week when "Underworld" was suddenly put into the Liberty Theatre as a "holdover" picture immediately upon the conclusion of its engagement at the Fifth Avenue Theatre last week. Although it did a good steady business during its first showing, the move to the Liberty was a failure and it was pulled off after four days of the proposed week's run.

"Chang," playing its second week at the Coliseum Theatre, maintained a fair average all during the week, but was far from the big attraction that it was the first week.

At the Embassy Theatre, "Just Another Blonde" was not very strong, and the house fell below its usual average. A good supporting musical program was not strong enough to help much.

Pantages Theatre, following its success a few weeks ago with "Glory," put in "The Loves of Carmen" and exploited the cast and director angle of the previous film. It did big business for the week, in conjunction with a program of six vaudeville acts.

At the New Orpheum, "Vanity" was a weak screen attraction, although the house still continues to do big business because of its newness. For the third consecutive week, the vaudeville program has been only mediocre.

San Francisco

ANOTHER good week was witnessed by the local motion picture houses, credited to the showing of good pictures. The better class of residential houses also reported good business.

"Camille," shown the second week at the California Theatre, did wonderfully and many were surprised it was not kept over a second week. "Beau Geste," finished its sixth and final week at the St. Francis Theatre, continuing to draw remarkably, large crowds. "Alias The Deacon," shown at the Imperial drew well filled houses, partly credited to the popular price.

"Romance," in which Raymond Novarro starred, filled the Loew's Warfield Theatre each evening, the specialty acts also drawing many. "The Drop Kick," presented at the Granada Theatre, proved fairly popular, the stage act, "Dolls' Ideas" helping fill the house.

"Flashing Fangs," at the Union Square Theatre, together with five acts of vaudeville, filled that theatre. "Painting The Town," a comedy, drew many laughs from those attending the Golden Gate Theatre and the picture together with six vaudeville acts drew crowds. At the Pantages Theatre, crowds were attracted by the "Passionate Quest" on the screen and Peaches Browning heading the vaudeville program.

In the residential district, the Coliseum Theatre was filled with "Lovers?" and the Casino Theatre with "The Beloved Rogue." Crowds were attracted to Nat Holt's Wigwam Theatre when he showed "The Flying Horseman" and a musical comedy.

Oklahoma City

"THE Cat and the Canary" played all week at the Liberty Theatre to record-breaking crowds. This theatre usually changes programs twice a week, but on this occasion broke all box-office records with the one picture. There was some extra advertising done on this in advance.

"Rough Riders" had a good week at the Criterion, too. The crowds kept up throughout the run of the picture. Frank Hopper, the star, made personal appearances at the main performances each day, and this, together with community singing, seemed to add interest. Advance advertising was carried on this picture in the newspapers. No advance in price.

"What Price Glory" on at the Shrine Auditorium for six days at $1.10 top price, didn't do the business expected. The picture pleased, but as a rule road-show prices for pictures seem to lessen the appeal to Oklahoma City audiences. But they crowd the houses when the pictures return at regular prices.

The Empress had an off-week with their weekly picture lasting only three days. That was Harry Langdon in "Three's A Crowd." The other theatres gave strong competition, and Langdon's picture was pulled for Sidney-Murray in "The Life of Riley." Business on this was good.

"Monte Cristo" drew good crowds the first of the week at the Capitol, in spite of the fact that most everyone remembered the old version of four or five years ago. "One Woman to Another" did an average business the last half of the week.

The weather was decidedly pleasant this week, and after the recent warmth made business good again with the theatres.

Ottawa

MOVING picture fans of Ottawa, Ontario, had plenty to see during the week of September 19, and there was plenty of enjoyment. The widest possible variety was in evidence among the principal theatres of the city, and as for counter-attractions there weren't any.

Leading off in the week's parade was "What Price Glory" at the Regent Theatre, where patrons flocked all week. It was one of the Regent's big weeks.

For comedy the theatre-goers rallied at B. F. Keith's, where the attraction was "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." Keith's did pretty business with this one, good vaudeville helping.

For extreme variety, there was "Chang" at the Imperial Theatre. Manager Ray Tubman found it necessary to carry over the picture for an extra performance after the week's run was done.

For costume romance and drama, there was "Cameo Kirby" at the Centre Theatre, and the crowds liked it. The Centre registered a very substantial week with this feature.

In Hull, Quebec, the fans celebrated the re-opening of the New Laurier Theatre, the presentation being "Beloved Rogue" and a special programme. The Laurier got away to a splendid start and the picture did its share in establishing a high status for the house.

Des Moines

"THE BIG PARADE" at the Des Moines Theatre last week did not do as well as expected. There were two pretty good reasons, hot weather of unusual variety, and the fact that the picture bucked "What Price Glory" playing at the Orpheum. Neither picture did the other any good and both resulted with not nearly so good a business as they should have made. "What Price Glory" probably got the shade of better business, since it was making its first appearance. At the Capitol Theatre last week "The Prince of Headwaiters" was very well liked. It did a good week and must be attributed to have drawn business outside of that which the stage show draws at the Capitol. At the Strand "Painting the Town" did unusually well and must be given some credit aside from the fact that the show prices have recently been given a good cut at this theatre. "We're All Gamblers" playing the first half of the week at the Strand did well though it is nothing to get excited about.

Albany, Schenectady & Troy

THERE were vacant seats at the Mark Strand theatre in this city throughout last week. The feature picture itself "Firemen, Save My Child" appeared to please fairly well. Its drawing power was hard to determine for the dullness of the remainder of the program was quickly noised about the city and as a result many no doubt remained away from the theatre during the week. At the Leland, "Tillie, the Toiler" ran to good business throughout the entire week. The fact remains, however, that Marion Davies has a big following in Albany.

At the Ritz, "The Drop Kick" played to a very satisfactory business day in and day out. On Monday and Tuesday nights it became necessary to turn hundreds away and stop the selling of tickets. Proctor's Grand is now showing a higher type of pictures along with its vaudeville than has been customary, with the result that "Silk Stockings" should be credited last week as good entertainment and materially helping out the vaudeville bill from the standpoint of the box office. At the Clinton Square theatre, "I'll See You in Jail" did only a fair business. In Schenectady, "The Big Parade," running at the State theatre, broke all house records during the past week and on Sunday alone over 3,000 persons were turned away, unable to gain admission. In Troy, "The Rough Riders" did what might be termed a satisfactory business at the Troy theatre, filling the house each night, but with considerable falling off at the matinees. This picture did not draw as well in Troy as it did in Albany. At the Lincoln theatre "The Drop Kick" went over big. Every theatre in Albany, Troy and Schenectady that installed a radio did a land office business on Thursday night in connection witth the Dempsey-Tunney fight.

Tampa

THE Tampa had "The Rough Riders" the first half and the business Sunday was big, but the handicap of the cooling system out of commission had its effect and hurt the returns the following three days. "Two Girls Wanted" got away to a bad start Thursday on acount of the competition of the fight returns, with the two following days failing to develop a draw.

The Strand started the week with "Convoy." It did nicely. The next attraction was "Alias The Lone Wolf," which kept business up to normal, with "The Broken Gate" closing the week, which was satisfactory.

The Franklin opened Sunday with "Monte Cristo," a re-issue, which pulled the largest Sunday of the summer. The title and the cast got 'em. "Love Makes 'Em Wild" and "Tom's Gang," featured two days each, brought good returns and gave the house a good week.

Kansas City

WITH temperature that made the lighting of furnaces necessary instead of operating cooling systems, first run houses of Kansas City this week experienced a week of good attendance, much better than many preceding weeks.

"The Way of All Flesh" at the Royal drew good all week and commanded much favorable newspaper comment, while "Adam and Evil" at the Newman played to large crowds all week.

"What Price Glory" at the Pantages was exploited and advertised in newspapers to a much greater extent than usual, but the increased effort was reflected at the box office.

"The Fighting Eagle" at the Mainstreet held up good, although the attendance was not quite in line with that experienced at other theatres. The Duncan Sisters in "Topsy and Eva" at the Globe drew big.

Milwaukee

THE fall season got well under way in Milwaukee theatres this week and business swung along at an encouraging rate. Strong attractions and snappy weather brought out patrons in gratifying numbers and all theatres report good business for the entire week.

"Beau Geste" made its first appearance at popular prices at the Alhambra and the throngs that came in prompted the management to hold it over for an additional week. "When a Man Loves" closes its third week at the Garden, where it played to large houses throughout its entire stay. "Smile, Brother, Smile" at the Wisconsin supported by a fast moving stage presentation made up a bill that drew good patronage throughout the week. "Chang" has been filling the Strand to a gratifying extent. The picture was introduced by considerable advertising and a special matinee for school children at 4:30 was offered. "What Price Glory" in its second week upheld the record it had established in the first at the Merrill. Business was unusually good.

Milwaukee's neighborhood theatres merit the good business it is their custom to enjoy. This week, for instance, pictures such as "After Midnight" at the Tower and Modjeska, "Hard Boiled Haggerty" at the Uptown, "Barbed Wire" at the Oriental, "Framed" at the Milwaukee, could not help but bring in good business.

Salt Lake City

UNSETTLED weather has been the rule in and about Salt Lake for the past week with theatre reports at down town houses being very good throughout.

"Camille" perhaps headed the list as to popularity with capacity houses each night. Exploitation on this picture was somewhat heavier than usual. A stage attraction was also offered at the Paramount Empress.

The new policy inaugurated at the Victory, which combines vaudeville with the picture program, has gone over in a wonderful fashion. The picture featured at this house was "The Joy Girl."

Betty Compson, a Salt Lake girl, in "Cheating Cheaters," was a good drawing card at the American along with Clair Omar Musser, direct from the Roxy theatre, on the stage.

The Gem offering which proved to be very successful throughout the week was "Judgment of the Hills." "Colleen" was the picture presentation at the Pantages in connection with the regular vaudeville bill, and was well received.

"Tillie the Toiler" was shown at the Rialto with a good measure of success, the house being overcrowded nightly.

Providence, R. I.

NEW box office records were established during the past week at all of the Providence theatres, with an unusual array of pictures of the better kind being offered. Four theatres which have been dark during the summer opened their doors. Every theatre reports the largest week's business for 1926-27 during the past week.

The Carlton, formerly the Emery, reopened with "The Gingham Girl." The Modern reopened with stock. The Opera House opened with "The King of Kings."

Here are other features which pulled the record breaking business: "Beau Geste" at the Strand, "Captain Salvation" at the Victory, "The Covered Wagon" at Fays, "Framed" at the Rialto, "The Magic Flame" at the Majestic, "Rookies" at the Columbus and the Capitol, "Tip Toes" and "Stepping Along" at the New Park, "Mother" and "California or Bust" at the Palace.

The Victory Theatre commenced their new policy this week very successfully, having inaugurated a vaudeville and picture program and an exceptionally big week was enjoyed. The picture which went over in a fine fashion was "Soft Cushions," starring Douglas MacLean.

Central Pennsylvania

THIS was a red letter week for the picture houses of Harrisburg where a combination of fine attractions and good weather conditions made the cash register fairly jingle in the leading theatres.

"Old Ironsides" was put on at the Majestic, a Wilmer & Vincent legitimate theatre, and, notwithstanding top night prices at $1.65, the play attracted very gratifying crowds all week. The play was well advertised in advance and this brought many from nearby towns to see it, Manager Lee Levy reporting that an especially large number of mail order tickets was sold.

"The Big Parade" was the attraction at Loew's Regent, and although it showed in Harrisburg last Winter it was so well patronized on its return to Harrisburg that Manager Edward J. Melniker, of the Regent, arranged to have it remain for a second consecutive week.

At the Victoria "Chang" was the feature film and it, too, went over very big, there being capacity houses at some of the night shows. The Colonial's offering was "The Circus Ace," starring Tom Mix and Tony, and this, too, captivated public approval. The State's picture presentation the last half of the week was Thunder, the Wonder Dog, in "The Silent Avenger," which, combined with a good vaudeville show, registered big business.

Studio Briefs

Albert Rogell, the director who has handled the megaphone on the majority of Ken Maynard's western features, has been signed to a new long-term contract by Charles R. Rogers, producer of this series for First National Pictures. Rogell will direct "The Shepherd of the Hills," Harold Bell Wright's story, which is to be his first picture on the new contract.

A brand new contract and an important role in a special production have been presented to Alan Hale by officials of the Pathe-DeMille Studio, following his recent return to the screen.

Hale has been selected for an outstanding character portrayal in "The Blue Danube," one of the major productions on the DeMille schedule, in which Leatrice Joy is to be starred under Paul Sloane's direction. Cecil B. DeMille will personally supervise the production.

A production in which many innovations are promised is, "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," now being filmed at First National's West Coast Studios. Virtually all the settings will be in pure black and white—thus producing extremely beautiful photographic effects. These are being secured by Lee Garmes, chief cinematographer, with the cooperation of Horace Jackson, art director.

John Westwood and John Stambaugh, winners in First National's nation wide collegiate search for new screen material, have been assigned roles in "The Private Life of Helen of Troy."

Patsy Ruth Miller was signed to appear in "Red Riders of Canada," a Canadian Northwest Mounted Police story to be directed for F B O by Robert DeLacy, according to an announcement from William Le Baron, vice-president in charge of production.

Bill Franey, eccentric comedian of the screen, will play a comedy role with Bebe Daniels in that star's latest starring production "She's a Sheik."

Fred J. McConnell, formerly owner and editor of the Exhibitors Daily Review and, on several occasions, supervisor of productions at Universal City, is functioning in similar capacity with two series of pictures being made for release through Pathe Exchange, Inc. McConnell is starting production on the first of a series of eight feature-length pictures in which a famous screen dog will be starred. The cast of players is headed by Arnold Gray, Kathleen Collins and Henry Hebert. Noel Smith will direct and Edward J. Snyder will be the photographer. Jack Donovan heads the other McConnell unit.

Casting on four new Warner Bros. productions was completed this week. All of them will be before the cameras before September fifteenth.

Clyde Cook has been selected by Warner Bros. to supply comedy in Monte Blue's next picture, "The Comeback," which will go into production as soon as the star returns from his annual vacation.

Two more additions have been added to the cast of Florence Vidor's next Paramount production, "Honeymoon Hate." Effie Ellsler will play Miss Molessey, the companion to the impetuous Gail Grant, which role Miss Vidor plays, and Genaro Spagnoli is to play Bueno, a servant.

Thelma Todd, Massachusetts school teacher, who came to Hollywood to play a lead opposite Gary Cooper in Zane Grey's western "Nevada" has won the lead in Paramount's biggest "Western" of the year.

Adrian Johnson has joined Excellent Pictures Corporation as head of the scenario department. Mr. Johnson has been a photoplay author and editor for more than a decade. In the long-ago days when Theda Bara and J. Gordon Edwards were making screen history, he was their principal collaborator in the creation of stories and in adapting in scenario form the plots obtained from stage-success or novels.

Michael Raffeto, screen comedian, has been cast with Bebe Daniels in the Paramount Star's latest comedy of the desert, "She's a Sheik." Raffetto will play the part of Achmet, general aide and henchman of William Powell, the comedy villain.

Gary Cooper has been assigned the role opposite Pola Negri in "Rachel," which will go in production within a fortnight at the Paramount studio.

Cissy Fitzgerald, one of the screen's pioneer comediennes, has returned to pictures, and will have an important part in "The Side Show," the first Chester Conklin W. C. Fields starring piece, which Ralph Cedar starts directing this week.

Ernie Adams, Fred Esmelton, Jerry Mandy, and Harvey Holden, four of Hollywood's best troupers, were the first members of the supporting cast in "The Gay Defender" to be cast. This is to be Richard Dix' next starring picture.

Andreas de Sigurola, for twelve years a star of the Metropolitan Opera in New York, has deserted music for the silent drama. The celebrated singer has been added to the cast of "Bringing Up Father," Cosmopolitan's filmization of the George McManus comic cartoons, to play the role of "The Count."

"Serenade," has been definitely selected as the title for the next Adolphe Menjou picture. The story as written by Ernest Vajda was originally entitled "The Musician." H. D'Abbie D'Arrast has been selected to direct and the only member of the cast selected so far is Lawrence Grant.

With the addition of Jacqueline Gadsden and Cecil Holland, the cast of M-G-M's "In Old Kentucky" is now complete. Holland and Miss Gadsden will have roles of husband and wife, aristocratic friends of the Brierley family of Kentucky, the former appearing as an armless Confederate veteran.

Marc McDermott has been added to the cast of "Fires of Youth," John Gilbert's new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle. McDermott will play the role of the newspaper publisher in the new story, a drama of newspaper life, directed by Monta Bell.

Warner Baxter has been signed by Edwin Carewe for the role of Alessandro, Indian lover of "Ramona," the title character of Dolores del Rio's first starring vehicle for United Artists' release.

Robert Brower, one of the original members of the old Edison Company, has been given a featured character role in "The Gay Defender," Richard Dix's new starring vehicle, which will go into production about the middle of September with Gregory La Cava directing. Thelma Todd is to play the feminine lead.

The Warner Bros. next vehicle for Irene Rich will be "Beware of Married Men," by Franz Jacques. "Powder My Back," originally announced as the star's next will be postponed. The cast in the new film will have Clyde Cook, Myrna Loy, Audrey Ferris, Richard Tucker, Armand Kaliz and Hugh Allen.

William Powell, sophisticated screen heavy, has a light comedy role in "She's a Sheik," Bebe Daniels' latest satirical photoplay which Paramount is producing. The company, composed of about 100 persons, left Hollywood this week for Sabreur, California, where desert scenes will be taken.

Nat Levine has begun production on "Heroes of the Wild," his second serial for the season of 1927-28. Actual shooting started September 15 and the serial will be in work for eight weeks. Jack Hoxie is the star and Joe Bonomo is in the cast. White Fury, a wild horse, and Tornado, a dog, are the featured animals in the picture. This is the first time a serial with this combination of animals has been produced.

Bobby Vernon has started working on "Wedding Vows," his newest Paramount-Christie comedy. His support includes Frances Lee, Sid Smith, Eddie Baker, Bill Blaisdell, Stella Adams, Dorothy Vernon, Georgia O'Dell and Gail Lloyd. Arvid Gillstrom is directing from a script by Frank Conklin.

"Red Hair," announced as Clara Bow's next Paramount vehicle, has been postponed, and the star will begin working instead on "You Will Marry Me," within the fortnight. It is said that Dorothy Arzner will direct the picture; roles were assigned this week to Josephine Dunn, Josef Swickard and Harvey Clarke.

Warner Bros. have loaned Leila Hyams to Fox Films for a role in "Balaoo," after which she will return to Warners, who hold her contract to play for them in several forthcoming pictures.

Frank Urson will direct the screen version of "Chicago," a special on the Pathe-De Mille program. Phyllis Haver will have the leading role played on the stage by Francine Larrimore.

"Twenty Legs Under the Sea"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IF they kept these twenty legs under the sea, as the title suggests, they would not have as good a picture as they have in this one. There are pretty girls in profusion and they are gaily attired in a wide variety of bathing suits. The story, too, is a good one and the picture would be entirely acceptable but for too much of the silly type of comedy injected. Some of the comedy, however, is good.

In order to boost an almost defunct seaside hotel an international swimming race for girls is arranged. In the absence of funds to provide a suitable prize a diamond studded garter left in the keeping of the hotel by a somewhat elderly matron is used, with the belief that it will be won by the beautiful daughter of the hotel proprietor.

The race brings entrants from all parts of the world and the owner of the garter returns on the day of the contest. She demands the garter, but it is not available. It has been lost and is adorning the neck of a stray canine, who takes to the water with the contestants. The rightful owner of the garter sees it, gives chase to the dog and wins the race, which re-establishes the hotel. The picture is well above the average for this type.

"Toddles"

(Paramount—One Reel)

HERE'S a subject with audience appeal. It is another of the Mintz productions for the Paramount company and it centers around a toddling infant and a faithful dog. The situations into which these two are led will produce a sympathetic response from almost any collection of movie goers. Wherever the little fellow goes, the dog goes with him. He is an intelligent dog with impressive eyes and countenance. As guardian over the child, he has many opportunities to demonstrate how good he is at doing things. He is almost as good as Tige, Buster Brown's dog, and that, you know, is high praise.

Most of the action of the first part is confined to one room with the baby getting his daily bath and crawling back again, fully clothed and fresh from mother's hands, into the tub. The scene shifts to the barnyard and the feathered denizens of that place become drunk when they eat the contents of a can of alcohol burner. Next to engage the attention are a bunch of piggies, one of whom is placed by the kid in mother's clothes basket, soiling the contents. These little episodes in the life of a child come to an end when, with a bottle of warm milk, the ever-present dog at his head and about a dozen chicks clambering over him, the tot begins his daily nap. The pleasant faced youngster, the dog, the chickens, the pigs and all the various little incidents build to make this a satisfying number.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"She's a Boy"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

YOU can promise your patrons a dandy "Big Boy" comedy in "She's a Boy." The little fellow's name has become synonymous with quality entertainment, and this particular two-reeler is in better form than ever. It is interesting to watch the progress of a kid actor, see how he is expanding and growing more varied in his appealing art. "Big Boy" has assumed new expressions and the intelligent youngster responds wonderfully under the direction of Charles Lamont, to whom great credit must be given for the way the kid has been brought along. The large derby still covers the attractive little countenance, the big shoes have gone, and "Big Boy's" slim little frame has passed the toddling stage. The kid is growing up, not only physically, but adding additional strength and charm to his natural Thespian powers. We are sure of one thing, that he is the most inviting and attractive kid actor on the screen today.

"Big Boy" is a war orphan, who met a most delightful grown-up buddy while in France. He is taken to America by the Red Cross, and grudgingly admitted to the home of a war profiteer. His reception at the rich man's house, empty of sympathetic occupants except for a little girl is uncongenial, so he becomes unruly. He gives forth a great deal of energy in escaping the tormenting adults, who want to squelch his manful little spirit. Escape is finally found with the kid running out of the house and down a nearby street, where the back of a traffic cop's head makes him pause because of its old, familiar look. The cop turns out to be his war time friend, and traffic and the rest of the world stands still while these two are enjoying their reunion.

Jack White supervised the production. Its cast includes Stanley Blystone, Lorraine Rivero, Eva Thatcher, Robert Graves and Hy Meyer.

"When Greek Meets Greek"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

WRESTLING plays no small part in "When Greek Meets Greek," the latest adventure of The Gumps. The self-conscious Andy (Joe Murphy) accidentally hogged a picture of the leading professional wrestler (Kalla Pasha) and the photograph was published in the paper with a caption which, quoting the words of the wrestler, offered $10,000 to any man who could throw him. The helpless Andy found being mistaken for a champion wrestler a ticklish business, having to wrestle with various men who, meeting him on the street, decide then and there to win that $10,000.

The Gumps decide to sleep in a house of evil reputation. Andy is not afraid of ghosts, but a prowling cat awakens him and Min (Fay Tincher), strange noises keeping them on the qui vive. Andy gets shocked with electricity and spends a terrible night. To cap it all, the wrestler comes along, furious at having been misrepresented in the press, and wrestles Andy all over the place. They slip on some paperhanger's paste and Andy accidentally puts the Greek's shoulders to the floor, winning the $10,000. Andy's goofy antics keep one amused, but the comedy is not so strong in gags and construction. Directed by Robert Kerr, the Gump comedy will be released on November 21st, 1927.

"South of the Northern Lights"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

FEATURING Jack Perrin with Peggy O'Day, this featurette of the Northwestern Mounties is the old, old tale of the villain who cannot get away with kidnapping girls—at least while a clear-eyed, two fisted son of the North is on the villain's spoor. Corporal Jack is the name of the hardy wearer of the red coat and the poor villain hasn't a chance against his prowess. Perrin sends his fists crashing against him in regular Dempsey style and you can readily foresee a defeated villain crumpled in the dust, while over him stands the valiant hero breathing easily and without any dust on his uniform and marks on his face to remind one of the tussle. This appears to be a favorite way of ending Westerns whether they are two reels in length or five or six.

Scotty McDonald subdued and imprisoned one Lamont, a dealer in furs, when Lamont recognized some of McDonalds furs as the property of a murdered trapper. The dead man's daughter is also kept prisoner by the rascally McDonald. Corporal Jack arrives on the scene and is temporarily overpowered by the villains, who then flee the place with the girl. The Corporal's horse frees his master's hands from the bonds with which he had been tied and then comes the big slugging bee in which McDonald meets his Waterloo. A scene of the Mountie and the liberated girl gazing into each other's eyes closes the picture. A mediocre offering. Directed by Levigard, this release will be issued on November 22nd, 1927.

"Kilties"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE longer portion of this comedy is taken up with a young lassie's adventure in a Scottish manse. It is a different sort of atmosphere for Dorothy Devore to work in and is the first time we can recall comedy characters running around clad in the kilts and plaids of the Scotch. It is effective as a laugh-getter.

With Miss Devore are Al Thompson, Henry Murdock and Glen Cavender. Thompson is the heartless apartment-house owner who fired Dorothy, dashing her hopes of ever getting ahead. It is just about this time that a telegram from Murdock in far off Scotland arrives and sends the girl packing for the Scottish manse where a loving uncle and a fortune awaits her—or him, rather, for the Scot really thinks her a boy.

The titles proceed to poke fun at the supposed thriftiness of the Scotch and Dorothy does a burlesque with the bagpipes and other things associated with the inhabitants of the Northern part of Great Britain. An attempt is made by enemies of the bonnie lassie to scare her mightily so she will flee the house in dread. All sorts of weird Mardi Gras figures are introduced, sliding panels and the like are called into play. These grotesque figures and the reaction they produce on the girl and her uncle are amusing.

A good comedy, different in many respects, and filled with wise-cracking titles. Norman Taurog wrote and directed the story.

"All For Uncle"

(Universal—Two Reels)

RUBE GOLDBERG'S twin characters, Mike and Ike, try to fool their Uncle Dudley in this one. Charles King and Jack are the two chaps who look alike and they figure that they can win the $10,000 offered by Ike's uncle if Ike will marry. Ike originally had had a wedding scheduled but the bride, tossing a head filled with false ideas about her Ike's devotion, had left him flat for another. Ike, consequently, has Mike impersonate a blushing bride so that he could visit in conquering fashion his uncle's house. The idea is not new, as you can readily perceive, and has been pressed into service by the comedy manufacturers ever and anon. King and Dorety, directed by Francis Corby, get fair results with it.

There are some fairly funny situations when Mike and Ike find a lost tot, who loves to swallow things and who casts avaricious eyes on Ike's engagement ring. The child tosses the ring into the pocket of a tough egg and Mike has to risk a black eye to get it back again. Then in the uncle's house, the uncle falls for the fake fiancee, and the supposed bridegroom falls for the uncle's ward. They are all in a fine situation doting on one another and the hoax is only revealed when Mike's skirt accidentally drops.

Of fair strength as a laugh-provoker. Released November 19th, 1927.

"Felix the Cat in Flim Flam Films"
(Educational—One Reel)

IN Felix's many adventures in Timbuctoo, Egypt, the North Pole, Africa and other places on this broad earth of ours, we never thought that at home all the time he had had a wife and family. In this little excursion, however, the fact that the Sullivan cat is hooked up is very forcibly brought home—and to the cat's sorrow, too.

It is dusk and the scene in the room into which we are permitted to glance shows Felix, his wife and a number of little Felixes. Their father has decided that it is time for them to go to bed, but they think otherwise and yowl, as cats will do. Mrs. Felix evidently wants to spend an evening of quiet so she bundles her husband and the miniature Felixes off to the movies. There they meet with stern rebuffs, and the omniscient cat decides to film some movies himself to satisfy the persistent demands of his offsprings for cinema entertainment.

On the lookout for worthwhile shots, Felix films a group of dancers, a parade, a balloon ascension and a bathing beauty. In this latter scene, Felix was really wrapt up in his subject. The feline beauty had such charming eyes and alluring lips that he could not help but forsake his camera and enrich himself of her loveliness. And this responding to the attractiveness of the cattish Lorelei proved fatal to Felix, for when he proudly throws his pictures on a home made screen to his wife she gives vent to an appalling outburst of spleen when she sees Felix's smirks and brief acquaintance with the diver. You see, the mischievous youngsters had thought that their father's new found bliss would prove a dandy subject to film. The cat's pantomime is as interesting as ever, and in this one he has a good story with which to work.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Mickey's Pals"
(F B O—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

INTRODUCING Mickey McGuire, Tomboy Taylor, Stinky Davis and the Powerful Katrinka's little brother, this first issue of the new series of two-reelers built around Fontaine Fox' famous cartoon, has considerable fun in it. The Toonerville kids have their individual characteristics, you know, and they are well brought out in this celluloid record of the stream of events taking place in just one day of the life of the tough Mickey. He is the chief attraction of the neighborhood of Toonerville, and he has his throng of satellites to do him homage, to dress and undress him at the Swimming Hole. Mickey Yule, the stern-faced kid who plays the title role, is right at home in his characterization. He bull-dozes the other kids, defies all regulated authority, including dog-catchers, and gets away with murder. Mickey is an amazing little fellow in the cartoons, but in the flesh he loses some of his sang froid; this is to be expected, however, because in celluloid the Fox character assumes a more human halo, a likable tenderness, which seems remote in the black and white of a cartoon. It is a good kid comedy in which the youngsters carry on in fine fashion. They get a good deal of laughs, and their success seems to us to be far superior to that of other kid-groups we could mention.

In the story we see the complacent Mickey lording it over all; we see an escapade of Tomboy Taylor, the gang outwitting the dog catcher and attending a party of high brow children, and lastly McGuire rescuing a baby whose carriage had slid down a hill into a stream. There's lots of action and pleasing acting by the kids. This series ought to be a winner.

"Here's Another One"
(Bray—One Reel)

A NOVELTY decidedly different from the usual run. The public has been deeply interested in cross word puzzles, Ask Me Another and all sorts of intelligence and memory tests for some time and the custom of testing wits is still a popular, if not a paramount, by-play. It is therefore appropriate and very much to the point for a reel of questions in title form and answers in pictures to make an appearance. Will an audience exhibit signs of impatience when it realizes some stickers are about to be asked? Regardless of the dictum which has often been advanced that an average audience never, or very seldom, exerts its capacities for thinking, that it sits in a sort of hypnotic trance, we are sure the mental response to these questions would prove that high-brow theory of inertia to be all wrong.

Here are some of the questions: What order of religion founded the California missions? Where is New Guiana? What is a Chinese abacus? Who invented smokeless powder? What instrument of torture does the modern woman regard as a benefactor? In golf, what is the stance? Not so terribly difficult, are they? These questions and answers on the screen should prove popular with audiences. The fact that its contents are somewhat new to the screen, and that the idea has not as yet been exploited to death by our picture-makers, is favorable. This number will nicely balance programs.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Boys Will Be Girls"
(F B O—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

IN this fourth issue of F B O's new Witwer series, "The Beauty Parlor," those two inimitable comedians Kit Guard and Al Cooke bear the brunt of the burden of distributing comedy. Thelma Hill and Lorraine Eason, who supply the "beauty" portion of the series, have little to do except look nonplussed when their creditors bombard them with threatening sentences. Danny O'Shea, the warring gladiator, has only one or two scenes of minor importance.

Cooke and Guard had hopes of swelling the finances of the beauty establishment with their new invention, a machine which turns brunettes into blondes. They tried the thing out on a negro porter, who on seeing his jet black kinks whitened, smashed the contrivance in vigorous protest. To satisfy the hounding creditors, the inseparable two promise to find the fight manager who gave them a phoney check. They go after him in a flivver, and upon missing their man, get a job in a cafe where they cut capers juggling trays. They are fired in due time, but succeed in apprehending the fight manager. In the meantime, O'Shea's father appears and is so far won by the girls and their honesty that he promises to take care of the bad check. The fight manager gets a beating, the beauty shop's debts are paid and all ends happily. Cooke and Guard are funny as usual, their gags with the auto and the waiters' art being the best in this comedy. The director was Reggie Morris.

"Burning Timber"—"Rough Country"
(Educational—One Reel)

STATIONING his camera right on the firing line where cinders and billows of smoke hold sway, Robert C. Bruce has recorded some fine shots of a savage forest fire. One can easily imagine the crackle and angry roar of the hungry destroyer relentlessly advancing, the crashing of his victims, beautiful forest monarchs, and the scorching heat which he sends out as a warning to flee his ferocity. He is the burning giant and yearly he takes his toll of beautiful tracts of timber; he is an ever present menace and keen-eyed rangers are constantly on the alarm for the puffs of smoke which herald his presence; he finds his origin in half-out cigarettes and smouldering camp fires, but with amazing rapidity he grows to huge proportions so that it takes the utmost exertions of an army of men to corral him and subdue him after he has run wild. If you wanted to, you could interpret this Bruce offering as a sermon in film, a forceful and compelling elucidation of the desolation wrought by fire.

There is rich pictorial value in the constant play of the flames, the dense columns of smoke, the sun's rays penetrating the dimness, and (at night) the huge torches blazing away. Here's a subject worthy of your approval.

In the second half of this Bruce Outdoor Sketch, you have some pleasing mountain scenes. Snow, trees, pillars of sand are all placed with nature's infallible sense of proportion along a canyon. They are all duly noted and their picturesqueness caught by the camera, which winds up its trip with shots of a river plunging over the side of a cliff, giving, in its descent, as pretty a view as you could ask for.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Seeing Stars"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

GEORGE DAVIS, winner of a funny-face contest, tries to storm Hollywood. A brick-layer by trade he thinks he can make the grade but it is very clearly brought home to him at the end of two reels of striving that the picture studios are not the place for him. The only person on the lot who seems to have even an iota of sympathy for him is the office girl, Molly Moran, and she seems to bear more compassion than love because George is such a dodo. In a place where downright stupidity is not supposed to be tolerated, he musses up scene after scene and becomes an object of hatred for fuming directors and distraught studio managers. But George is blissfully ignorant of these thoughts; he really thinks that he is making good.

A conspiracy against him finally comes to the fore and the goofy Davis, kidded into believing that he has worlds of talent, is made the goat. The pianos which were to have crashed on his head fall on themselves, instead, and their attempts to terrorize him on the studio at night come to naught. Of course, plenty of slapstick is introduced hereabouts, and actors fall to the ground with much gusto. The spirit idea is also brought in to add to the general hilarity. The quaking negro again gives his closeup of terror, his feet refusing to do their duty when grinning skeletons, roaring lions and mysterious figures confront him. George gets the breaks, undoubtedly, and the picture succeeds in the business of creating laughter. In addition to Davis, the cast is graced with the presence of Jack Lloyd, Phil Dunham, Jack Miller and Ray Turner. Stephen Roberts presided in the director's chair.

"Fleshy Devils"
(F B O—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

FB O's heavyweight comedians, Fat Carr, Fatty Alexander and Kewpie Ross, hold the spotlight in this new Standard comedy, which is just fairly good as a laugh-getter. It's plot is jerky, but at least you cannot foretell just what the three fatties are going to do next. They start their little adventure as hired hands who earn their living dragging autos out of ditches and they wind up with a trip down a steep hill upon roller skates. Fat, Kewpie and Fatty are kept busy minding horses, painting houses and chasing girls. There is something attractive about a fat man, and you often hear it said that the whole world has associated him with jollity and good nature. Certainly it is funny to watch their huge frames in action and in one instance they have a unique method for pummelling an adversary by gathering around him and buffetting with their protruding stomachs until the breath is knocked out of him.

A trick horse supplies some really good pantomime and the three caparisoned in artists' attire are humorous.

"All Bull and a Yard Wide"
(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

OLD Al Falfa has his troubles with a bull and a band of cattle. They, with Thomas Cat, disturb the old boy's slumbers until he becomes thoroughly riled. They tear about the house and through it. Al tries to find what it is all about and is butted off somewhere into the next county. And the moral, as pointed out, is: "If you don't take the bull by the horns, he'll get you in the end. There is very little of a humorous nature in it.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

The Student Prince

Fine Romantic Film, Capitally Done

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT must have been a real treat for Ernst Lubitsch to direct a story after his own heart. This picture of student life in Heidelberg takes the director away from other races and places him among his own people. He has done a very neat job—the thoroughness of detail, the shafts of satire, the by-play of light comedy, the sheer charm of romance—all of these are given the Lubitsch stamp in a picture which tells a wistful love story with understanding and feeling.

Here is the simple yarn of a young prince who would become one of the crowd instead of a pampered youth. Lubitsch makes the heir to the throne get a kick out of life in just the manner he wanted. And his penchant for contrasting the characters and establishing their moods is firmly established—so much so that the figures seem real.

It is spectacular in its settings—it carries a sweep of movement that doesn't pause in its play of scenes. Novarro plays with fine naturalness, though he cannot be called the best type for the role. Norma Shearer is too restrained, too thoughtful of expression.

The Cast: Ramon Novarro, Norma Shearer, Jean Hersholt, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Philipe De Lacy, Edgar Norton, Bobby Mack, Edward Connelly, Otis Harlan, John S. Peters. Director, Ernest Lubitsch.

THEME: Romantic drama of German prince who longs to be like other boys. Is sent to Heidelberg and finds romance and happiness.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The fine duplication of Heidelberg in the settings, etc. The play of romance. The intimate scenes at the University. The acting by Hersholt and Seyffertitz. The episodes between the prince and his tutor. The fine treatment.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as fine screen version of celebrated play and operetta. Use stills for lobby display. Bill as Novarro's best since "Ben Hur." Feature the director and Miss Shearer.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw through its title, players and director. O. K. for all types of houses.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M.
Length, ten reels. Release date indefinite.

The appeal of early California will be found in "The Rose of the Golden West," George Fitzmaurice's newest production for First National.

A tale of glamorous passion is recounted in "The Loves of Carmen," Fox Films' version of Prosper Merimee's story of a Spanish heart-breaker.

Alias the Lone Wolf

An Excellent Mystery Crook Melodrama

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THOSE who like a real good mystery-crook melodrama—and most folks do—will not be disappointed in this offering from Columbia. Their previous picture along these lines, "The Lone Wolf Returns" made a decided hit with the fans, and this companion production should prove to be just as much of a winner. The story is another of Louis Joseph Vance's—and that gentleman's reputation speaks for itself. Edward H. Griffith, director, has done a neat piece of work, while that of the featured players, Bert Lytell and Lois Wilson, also ring true; in fact, the entire cast is particularly good.

The story opens aboard an ocean liner en route from Europe to America. Among the passengers are, the "Lone Wolf," a supposed crook, two others of the underworld and a French mademoiselle. The latter, with true feminine disregard for any law which does not suit the occasion, is inclined to smuggle some family jewels in order to raise money for a brother charged with embezzlement. And so a clever game starts between the "Wolf" and the other crooks to gain possession of the jewels—which finally reach New York. In the City, further attempts are made by the gang to gain the necklace, and in the meantime romance develops between the girl and "The Lone Wolf."

The Cast: Bert Lytell, Lois Wilson, William V. Mong, Ned Sparks, James Mason, Paulette Duval, Ann Brody and Alphonse Ethier. Directed by Edward Griwth and supervised by Harry Cohn.

THEME: . Mystery .crook melodrama in which supposed crook prevents theft of jewels. He later turns out to be a Federal operative and marries the heroine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Excellent direction, work of entire cast, scenes aboard ship and in Custom House, and denouement.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: There is an excellent press book offering such suggestions as: book store tie-ups, jewelers' cooperation, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Good for most any house; particularly, those with mixed audiences.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures.
Length, 6,843. Released August 22, 1927.

The Loves of Carmen

Will Register At the Box-Office

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE role of Carmen is like that of Camille—every actress nourishes the dream of some time playing one or the other, or both. The latest entry to tackle the temperamental Spanish figure is Dolores del Rio and because of her Castilian ancestry and her well-proved ability to emotionalize whatever characterization is assigned her she contributes a performance comparable to what she flashed in "Resurrection." Dolores surely makes a vivid cigarette girl.

The Carmen stories don't differ in general outline and treatment. If one director takes a deal of liberty with the plot and characters another is likely to handle it all with restraint. Raoul Walsh doesn't exercise much of a restraining hand. Which is wise—to our way of thinking. The characters take on more color and reality. They become, naturally, more human. The production here embodies sufficient warmth and feeling to please a skeptical Don. The backgrounds comprise some excellent atmospheric scenes while the sets are truly suggestive of Spanish design.

The story has a good flow of action and never loses its pace. It's rugged and romantic—and chock-full of moods.It has box-office written all over it.

The Cast: Dolores del Rio, Victor McLaglen, Don Alvarado, Nancy Nash, Jack Bastian. Director, Raoul Walsh.

THEME: Romantic drama of Carmen, the cigarette girl, whose game is to conquer men's hearts.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scenes between Carmen and Don Jose and Escamillo. The settings and locales. The spirited acting by Dolores del Rio. The rugged performance by Victor McLaglen. The close-ups. The romantic moments.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease that title and bring out patrons as well acted and staged film version of celebrated story and opera. Play up the principals and the director—all of whom helped in putting over "What Price Glory."

DRAWING POWER: Should attract healthy patronage through title and players. Suitable for first runs and small houses.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films.
Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1927.

Rose of the Golden West

Pictorially Pleasing But Story Is Not So Hot

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANY picture carrying a story of the early development of California—at a time when it belonged to Mexico—is bound to be rich in backgrounds and atmosphere. The director has framed it against some charming settings—and the plot, itself, is interesting enough while it establishes its romance. Early California was productive of much romantic appeal—with its play of old-world chivalry. And it released much intrique of a political nature. These factors have been appreciated by Fitzmaurice and for considerable footage it commands good interest.

But from the moment that it discards its historical notes and jumps into fiction it becomes unduly picturey. Events happen which are quite proposterous. They even wave the flag for a rousing finish. Had the story stuck more to history it might have gone a long ways in telling a true narrative of California and how it came into the Union.

The central figure is a young caballero who because of his love and respect for California and the Stars and Stripes sacrifices his love to keep the land of sunshine from political rascals who would betray it. As it develops, his sweetheart is none other than the daughter of the man he has sworn to kill. The climax looks weak and has movie written all over it.

The Cast: Mary Astor, Gilbert Roland, Gustav von Seyffertitz, Montague Love, Flora Finch, Harvey Clark, Andre Cheron, Romaine Fielding, William Conklin. Director, George Fitzmaurice.

THEME: Romantic drama of political intrigue with youth circumventing plotters who would betray country.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The intrigue. The early scenes. The development of romance. Scene when hero is saved by heroine. The climax. The settings and costumes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease the title and bill it as historical film of early California. Use stills of players. Stage Spanish prologue.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for everyday crowds. Title is alluring.

Produced and distributed by First National.
Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1927.

One Round Hogan

A Story With a Real Knockout Punch

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

WARNERS have what appears to be a winner in this well done story of the prize ring with Monte Blue as the light heavyweight champion and James J. Jeffries in the role of his father. Big Jeff is a better actor than Monte is a fighter, and that's not disparaging to either of them. In fact the Big Fellow carries the same wallop as an actor that he did as a fighter up to the time he met Jack Johnson in Reno. And Monte as a fighter would doubtless be a rival of Jack Dempsey as a drawing card.

It's a lively tale of the ring with a wallop all the way through; and as for the fight scenes they are accurately depicted.

The story is a logical one and not overdone. Monte is in love with Leila Hyams, who abhors fighters, not knowing he is of the prize ring. Her brother, Monte's pal, aspires to his title. She persuades Monte to make the brother give up his ring career. When the challenger fails to appear for the championship bout Monte agrees to meet the brother if the latter will retire from the ring in the event he does not last through the first round. Monte knocks him out in a punch. The victim is rushed to the dressing room and there his manager takes a punch at him which proves fatal. It is made to appear that the brother has met death as the result of the knockout delivered by Monte, but in the end the true facts are revealed and Monte is forgiven by the girl.

The Cast: Monte Blue, Leila Hyams, James J. Jeffries, Frank Hagney, Tom Gallery, Texas Kid, Abdul, the Turk.

THEME: Drama of the prize ring in which the light heavyweight champion is made to appear as the killer of his fiancee's brother in a championship bout, but the true facts are revealed and he wins the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The accurately depicted ring battles. The work of the star and James J. Jeffries. The romance and the swift action.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The championship bout. The appearance of Jim Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world.

DRAWING POWER: Should do well in almost any house.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.
Length, 6,375 feet. Released Sept. 17, 1927.

2 Girls Wanted

Lacks Farcical Touch of Original

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HAD they retained more of the farcical treatment of this Gladys Unger Broadway stage success, it would undoubtedly have been a more interesting picture. As it stands now on the screen it is too seriously a drama. As a drama its action is entirely too slow and too lacking of incident. It struggles seriously to get nowhere in particular.

There is the threat in the early sequences that comedy will dominate the story, but, after the groundwork is laid, it swings into the dramatic and thereon must be taken very seriously. However, the picture has its moments and Janet Gaynor, in her first starring role, is altogether pleasing. She is equally good in her few comedy scenes and the more dramatic moments.

Glenn Tryon is miscast in the role of the hero who tries so hard to prevent the sale of his employer's business at a scarifice of $200,000. He would undoubtedly have fitted more happily into the picture had more of the comedy element been retained. It is hard to figure him in a serious role of this character after he got through "Painting the Town."

The Cast: Janet Gaynor, Glenn Tryon, Ben Bard, Marie Mosquini, Joseph Cawthorn, Doris Lloyd, Alyce Mills, William Tooker, Pauline Neff, William Blatcher, C. L. Sherwood.

THEME: Drama of young girl who gets herself employment in office, where she learns of plot to cheat rival concern of her sweetheart. She exposes the plot just in time to save the situation and win the lasting love of the hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The early comedy sequences. The romantic scenes. The suspense.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The success of the play on Broadway. Want Ad teasers. See press book for suggestions.

DRAWING POWER: Should do fairly well.

Length, 6,293 feet. Released, September 11, 1927.

Rich Men's Sons

An Averagve Story About One of Them

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE usual reaction is awakened by this story. It is one of those tales which do not require great mental capacity to down; fairly interesting, it provides entertainment of the light, pleasant variety and should engage the attention of the majority of your patrons.

The broad-shouldered Ralph Graves (also the director) acts the leading male role and the diminutive Shirley Mason is seen opposite him. Not contrary to the established order of movie plots are the situations in which they find themselves. He is a lounging, shiftless son of a wealthy parent who has been kicked out of his home, and she is a steel-mill owner in financial straits who wishes she had a strong, young man to help her. Of course they soon come together, Graves showing signs of action, due, no doubt, to the tumult in his breast aroused by a glance into the eyes of the girl. Responding to that plaintive SOS, he defeats the villain who had longing eyes on the girl's plant and obtains a fat contract for a million dollars or so of steel.

Graves shows a skilful hand at directing and acts his role with easy assurance. He is another of the erstwhile Sennetters who is making good on his own.

The Cast: Shirley Mason, Ralph Graves, George Fawcett, Robert Cain, Johnny Fox, Frances Raymond. Directed by Ralph Graves from story by Dorothy Howell.

THEME: Disinherited son of wealth begins to take an interest in things other than his pleasures when he meets young girl owner of steel mill. He saves her from financial ruin by securing his father's signature on contract, which she had sought and been refused.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Graves' easy method of acting. Miss Mason's performance. Steel mill episodes. Auto race with speeding locomotive. Scene where hero's father signs contract.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Impart to your prospective customers an idea of these aforementioned highlights.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for houses which cater to average clientele.

Produced and Distributed by Columbia. Released May, 1927. Footage, 5,751 feet.

Out All Night

A Typically Lively Denny Farce

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

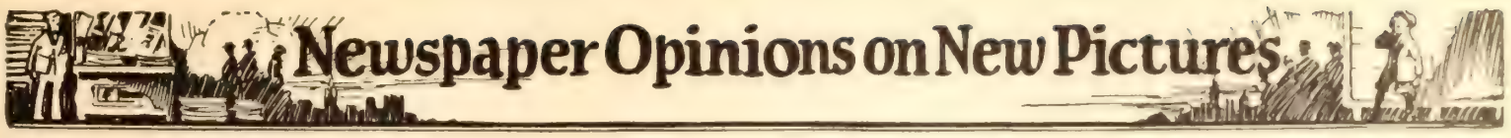
REGINALD DENNY fans will like this story of the young bachelor and the complications into which he is thrown for twenty-four hours following his secret marriage to a Broadway star who is Europe-bound.

It is a typical Denny vehicle and shows the comedian off to advantage. He is undoubtedly at his best in a farce of this kind, whose situations would be fairly ridiculous in less skilled hands. Here and there the story lags a bit and has its discrepancies, but as a whole it must be commended.

Denny is a fast worker whatever way you look at it and it is not surprising when he wins the star as the pair are unromantically stuck between floors all night in an automatic elevator in the hotel apartment where they both have suites. Their wedding follows in the morning as her guardian signs a new stage contract for her which includes in its terms that she shall not wed during the life of the contract. She is sailing for Europe that day and it behooves Denny to get quarters for himself on the crowded steamer. Failing in all his efforts he is finally induced into the service by the captain, who misjudges him as a doctor as the ship's surgeon fails to put in an appearance.

One hilarious situation follows closely upon another.

The Cast: Reginald Denny, Marian Nixon, Wheeler Oakman, Dorothy Earle, Dan Mason, Bob Seiter, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Bill Francey, Harry Tracy, Lionel Brahams.



THEME: Farce comedy of young bachelor and the complications aboard ship which follow his secret marriage to a Broadway star, whose new contract provides that she shall not wed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scenes aboard ship. The back-stage scenes: The romance and the comedy situations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The star's name is sufficient, together with the fact that it is a typical Denny vehicle.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Universal. Length, 6,170 feet. Released Sept. 4th, 1927.

"Hard Boiled Haggerty"—First National, Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia

Public Ledger: "It has been a ling time since Sills had a picture which fitted him as well or which contained so much comedy and humor combined with a fast-moving story. It gives him a chance to fill the he-man role for which he is suited."

Evening Bulletin: "For good, downright entertainment of its kind, put over in swift tempo, and in straight-from-the-shoulder, man-to-man fashion, is truly a meaty film. Rarely has Milton Sills done better. Racy film with its rough, almost Rabelaisian touches of humor, without giving offense."

Inquirer: "Adds still another angle of war to screen's library . . . this time the air. Sills is quite himself."

Evening Ledger: "High jinks behind the lines . . . thrilling duel in air. Comedy is best feature of picture, with robust 'What Price Glory' quality about it."

"The Patent Leather Kid" — First National, Woods Theatre, Chicago

Daily Tribune: "Tells great war story and great love story, and in it Barthelmess is — just great! Never was a character more sympathetically portrayed than lovable, pitiful, tragic Patent Leather Kid by Mr. Barthelmess. Film most skillfully directed, and could not be better staged or photographed."

Hetrald Examiner: "Is a great picture. Acting of Barthelmess in title role magnificent. More stark reality in this picture than there has been in its martial predecessors. Fight scenes which precede kid's war days far better than any I have ever seen. They are even better than the official fight pictures of our best championship bouts."

Evening Post: "At last dark-eyed Dick has sort of role he must have been saying prayers for. And what a gorgeous performance he gives! One of the most genuine and most fascinating characters screen drama has ever presented. It is a new Barthelmess you meet. New force in his playing, new confidence and authority. A fine picture."

Daily News: "Barthelmess assumes a role so entirely different from past portrayals that many of his admirers will no doubt wonder if casting of this excellent story has been wisely done. After seeing picture equally as many will be convinced that selection is perfect. Is well worth seeing."

Journal of Commerce: "Fight parts of this picture are as exciting as anything that anyone would want to see at Soldiers' Field, and war parts are as comic, as pathetic, as realistic and as charged with action as 'The Big Parade' or 'What Price Glory.' Acting excellent, with chief honors going to Barthelmess, who is as good as he has ever been at any other time, and probably better. Direction superb. Picture starts at healthy speed and keeps going with a never a let-up."

Daily Journal: "Beautifully photographed and skillfully directed. Extraordinarily good film show. Barthelmess has again found picture worthy of his charm and talent."

"For the Love of Mike"—First National, Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia

Evening Ledger: "Lyon, with apparent ease, scores hit. Portrayals given by Sidney, Cameron and Sterling are three performances which are hard to duplicate. . . . Claudette Colbert, intriguingly brunette and serious-eyed, cast in harmony with Lyon."

Inquirer: "Lyon does excellent work. Three fathers well played by Sidney, Sterling and Cameron. Claudette Colbert makes bow to motion picture audiences quite charmingly."

Public Ledger: "A real bet. Story well done and runs along fast enough to keep attention. Lyon acts naturally and is impressive. Makes dramatic moments strong and intense."

Record: "Claudette Colbert and Lyon make dashing pair, but there is still more original group of three—Sidney, Sterling and Cameron. Quite human."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Rialto Theatre, Waterbury, Conn

Democrat: "Never before in history of Rialto has there been such crowds actually milling about theatre entrance as those trying to gain admission to see what can rightfully be called greatest of present day. . . . McLaglen, Lowe and Dolores Del Rio have caught and held spotlight by living rather than acting roles assigned to them."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Fox Theatre, Philadelphia

Evening Public Ledger: "Picture, tale of two devil-dogs in their contest of fighting, thinking, speaking, and—loving, together with some touches of real pathos of battlefront, are blended in such a manner that it is sheer delight to view."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Cataract Theatre, Niagara Falls

Gazette: "Were you one of those who saw the initial performance? If you weren't you missed one of finest pictures that was ever shown on screen. . . . McLaglen, Dolores Del Rio and Lowe have given screen three of greatest characterizations on record."

"For the Love of Mike"—First National, Olympia Theatre, Boston

American: "One of most entertaining pictures shown this season. Fast moving comedy drama should prove popular with movie fans."

Advertiser: "Lyon favored with very superior support. Miss Colbert attractive and talented. Spectacular thrills. Melodramatic trend to film."

Post: "Colorful atmosphere of great collegiate event (Yale-Harvard boat race) very realistic. Claudette Colbert screens well and has charming personality."

Herald: "Fast moving comedy drama . . . should prove popular. Thrills come fast with authentic Harvard-Yale crew race as high light."

Traveler: "Lyon as Mike has something to be proud of. Miss Colbert a delight to eye and fine little actress. Actual Harvard-Yale boat race has been worked in exceedingly well."

Globe: "A series of amusing and, at times, serious complications. A Harvard-Yale boating contest one of stirring events."

"The Student Prince"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Astor Theatre, New York City

Times: "Lubitsch has turned his music wand on people of his own land. Lubitsch lives up to all that has been written about him. Satirical shafts, careful attention to telling details, half-second notes inform spectators that it is a master from Berlin who has directed this splendid shadow story."

Herald: "We never saw stage play, but we doubt whether there ever could have been so dashing a Student Prince as present one. Novarro leaves nothing to be desired. He is adorable yet believable! . . . It is beautifully done."

American: "Charming movie made of tale of Old Heidelberg. Undoubtedly will settle down for indefinite run. . . . Cast acquits itself so creditably that it is difficult to find honors enough to go 'round."

Evening World: "If the reception it received at its opening may be taken as a criterion, it bids fair to emulate success of spoken version and more recent musical version as put on by Shuberts."

Evening Post: "Lubitsch has added another brilliant work to his already long list of screen achievements. Picture flows harmoniously without single discordant note. . . . Cast uniformly excellent. Thousand and one delightful touches serve to make 'The Student Prince' a joy."

Graphic: "We can't recall picture that tells a real love story in better or more convincing manner. A royal tale without gaudy purple, romance without cheap sentimentality—extraordinarily good film. Norma Shearer gives sympathetic and appealing interpretation and Hersholt as prince's tutor is fine indeed."

Telegram: "Lubitsch's first night audience, between laughter and tears, admitted its satisfaction that this 'Student Prince' was indeed a pictorial achievement. Lubitsch's version of Old Heidelberg romance is as poignant and lovely a thing as he has ever given moviedom."

Mirror: "Novarro renders his most distinguished performance since the distant days of "Scaramouche.' Vivifies a kaleidoscopic range of emotions which merge appealingly with his boyishness."

Journal: "Novarro does remarkably fine piece of work. Piquant little touches make various sequences delightful. Fascinating shots of university, picturesque countryside, and carefree, singing, beer-drinking students."

Telegram: "Splendid direction by Lubitsch and intelligent acting of principals should bring film general acclaim. . . . Lubitsch has emerged with skilled and restrained love story which is startlingly beautiful piece of cinema art. Will study Broadway for some time before it leaves for lesser and more open spaces."

"Soft Cushions"—Paramount—Paramount Theatre, New York City

Times: "Happy combination of amusing incidents and bright subtitles. Far higher order of humor than usually is afforded on screen, and its shafts of wit kept an audience thoroughly merry."

World: "Surprisingly bright fling of satire. Sort of constructional triumph in lighter subjects of films, movement being nicely paced, acting expert, titles positively brilliant."

Americans "Yes, indeed, slick entertainment. Everybody seems to contribute toward making it so —especially title writer whose name somehow eludes us."

Morning Telegraph: "Picture has been photographed and produced in usual lavish Paramount manner. MacLean one of most pleasing of screen's farceurs. Sue Carol pulchritudinous maiden who injects lot of 'it' into action."

Daily Mirror: "Whimsical tale of Aslan, young thief, and two companions in art of thievery, combined with set of subtitles which, in Biblical English, voice modern note in flippant humor. . . . Sue Carol will have something of vogue. A new type; apparently very young, ingeniously pretty and proportioned on lines of any modern flapper.

Graphic: "MacLean nimble star. Silk swathed heroes, villains of considerable rotundity, and pro[illegible] swearing much [illegible] All amusing Marathon, interspersed with Arabian idea of busy Romeo."

PUBLIX officials held a convention at the Hotel Fort Des Moines on September 22, which was attended by the managers of the A. H. Blank-Publix chain of houses in Iowa and Nebraska. The members of the theatre management department of the Publix shows came from the East to confer with the managers on all branches of the business and to discuss the new program of pictures and stage shows which are planned for the coming season. L. E. Schneider and Robert Crabill represented the theatre management heads, while A. G. Stolte, manager of the Riviera at Omaha, and Nate Frudenfeld and Mr. Korach of the staff there, came from Omaha. August Hermann, manager of the theatre at Council Bluffs, L. E. Davidson, manager at Sioux City, Everett Cummings from Rock Island, R. E. Schrempf of Davenport, F. O. Slenker of Davenport, G. P. Hundling of Newton were managers from over the state who were here from the all-day business session and luncheon. Managers of the Des Moines theatres present were Herb Grove, manager of the Des Moines Theatre; Harry Watts, manager of the Capitol Theatre; Jess Day, manager of the Strand Theatre, and Mr. Shroedt, manager of the Garden and the Palace. The inclination of the general meeting was to feel most enthusiastic about the business prospects for the coming season.

The six first-run houses of St. Louis and most of the neighbor and suburban houses gave their audiences round-by-round accounts of the Tunney-Dempsey world's championship battle on Thursday, September 22.

In all about fifty houses in St. Louis and environs gave this special service to the patrons. However, it is very doubtful that the fight returns attracted any additional cash customers to the box office. Thursday is usually an off-night in St. Louis and business was but average.

Albany

HUNDREDS of motion picture exhibitors in New York state heaved a sincere sigh of relief last Sunday morning when they shoved the hands of their watches backward an hour, signifying the end of daylight saving for at least another year.

As an exhibitor, Father Blaise, conducting Community Hall in Schroon Lake, N. Y., is making a name for himself these days not only in his home town but throughout this part of the state. The well-known Catholic priest expects to be able to run the house three days a week throughout the entire winter. In addition to offering motion pictures, the theatre is also open for card parties and dances and could be used by all persons.

Miss Eva Goldstein, of Warner Brothers exchange, gave a shower one night last week for Miss Mary Curley, of the First National exchange, who will be married next month to James Dermody, a salesman at the Fox exchange.

The Troy Theatrical Bowling League has already started a tournament that will run through the fall and winter with teams representing the American, Lincoln, Proctor's and Troy theatres competing.

Anthony Veiller, manager of the Mark Ritz in Albany, left last week for Lake George, where he will spend a month in recuperating. Mr. Veiller's health has been rather poor for the past several months, due to stomach trouble.

William Donovan, owner of the Palace Theatre in Tupper Lake, is spending a considerable sum these days, installing a new front to his house, as well as making many improvements to the interior.

William Shirley will re-enter the exhibitor field on September 29, when he will reopen the Van Curler theatre in Schenectady, using a Vitaphone along with his picture program.

R. J. Meigs, salesman at the Pathe exchange, is back on the job, following a two weeks' vacation at Atlantic City and other Jersey resorts. Mr. Meigs made his plans one day to motor over to New Brunswick for an airplane trip. Car trouble developed, however, preventing his visiting New Brunswick on the day the plane crashed and killed seven.

W. W. Farley, head of Farash theatres in Schnectady, was in Binghamton one day last week, attending the funeral of Mrs. George Greene, widow of a former State Excise Commissioner, and a close friend of Mr. Farley's.

Mrs. C. H. Buckley, wife of one of Albany's best known exhibitors, was overjoyed last week when she was awarded a blue ribbon at the municipal flower show for the best table centerpiece.

Amos Leonard, a Pathe salesman out of Albany, who makes his home, however, in Syracuse, has been busy during his vacation period, superintending an addition to his home.

John Christie, who owns the Third Avenue Theatre in Watervliet, was along film row during the week, booking for the fall and winter. Mr. Christie could not refrain, however, from doing a bit of bragging about a wonderful litter of police dogs which is demanding fully as much of his time as does his theatre.

Sam Shapin has been transferred from New York City to Warner Brothers exchange in Albany, succeeding Fred Robke, as a salesman. Mr. Robke has returned to New York City.

Charles Stombaugh, one time manager of the Albany Pathe exchange, passed through town on the Twentieth Century Limited one afternoon last week, en route to Chicago.

Among exhibitors in town during the week were Charles Sesonske, of Lowville; Mike Kallet, of Rome; Sam Slotnick, of Utica; William Kennedy, of Champlain, and the Thornton Brothers, of Saugerties.

Jack Bulwinkel, local manager for First National, was all smiles last week for the local office leads all First National exchanges in the entire United States in a sales drive now under way.

Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy Theatre, is no longer a commuter, having moved in from his lake cottage, where he had spent the summer. Mr. Roberts spent one day last week hunting an apartment and preparing to move his furniture.

A. J. Hacking, district manager for Pathe, and H. O. Duke, manager of physical distribution, were in Albany last week for a sales conference. G. D. Swaebe, of Boston, representing the educational department, was also in town.

Many of the exchange managers in Albany, as well as film salesmen, gathered at various homes on Thursday night of last week, to hear the radio reports of the Dempsey-Tunney fight. Harry Goldstein, local manager for Paramount, entertained a crowd of his friends at his home.

Will Rose has resigned as manager of Gardner Hall, in Troy, and is back at his old trade of barbering. The theatre is now being handled by Henry Windekenecht.

Andy Smith, a well known First National official, was in Gloversville conferring with the Schines last week, and then continued on to Canada, where he visited various of his company's exchanges.

Guy Graves, managing supervisor of Farash Theatres, in Schenectady, was in New York City during the week. Uly S. Hill, of the Stanley houses in Albany and Troy, also spent a few days in the big town.

M. Horne, play date representative for Universal, has gone to New Haven after spending several days at the Albany office.

Jack Campbell, manager of the Griswold in Troy, is once more featuring dance contests one night each week at his theatre.

The Arcade, in Lake George village, will remain open until October 10, and its proprietor, Mrs. Carpenter, will later on leave for Florida, where she will spend the winter.

William Smalley has remodeled his theatre in Delhi, and this house is now on a par with other Smalley theatres.

Louis A. Freiberg left on his first trip as salesman for F B O last week, and spent his time in northern New York towns.

Alex Papayanakos was the recipient of considerable newspaper space last week when his theatre in Canton reopened after having had several thousand dollars spent in improvement and general remodeling.

S. E. Feld, Pathe salesman, is back on the force after having been laid up for several days from sickness.

All theatres in Troy will admit all sailors attached to the United States Destroyer, which will be docked in Troy on October 27, in connection with the Naval Day observance in that city.

Ray A. Conner, manager of the Avon in Watertown, took his first airplane ride one day last week, being accompanied by Gus Rosenblit, manager of the Olympic Theatre in the same city. Flying was nothing new, however, to Mr. Rosenblit, who was a former pilot.

Eddy G. Newcomb, one time assistant manager of the Empire Theatre in Glens Falls, died last week at his home in that city, at the age of forty years.

Ben Stern, manager of the Lincoln in Troy, is without a car, having decided to dispose of his automobile rather than pay garage hire during the fall and winter.

Edward M. Hart, former supervisor of Proctor houses in this district, has just been named as manager of Proctor's houses in New Rochelle, Mount Vernon, as well as the Eighth Avenue house in New York City. All local Proctor managers were down to New Rochelle for the opening of this house.

Everett Fuller is now handling the Woodlawn Theatre in Schenectady and apparently meeting with much success.

First Division Distributors, Inc., has added Bond Photoplays with exchanges at 1048 Broadway, Albany, and 265 Franklin street, Buffalo, to its long list of franchise holders. The Bond organization, headed by Herk Webster, will distribute the eighteen First Division features. Bond Photoplays has been distributing I. E. Chadwick's productions in northern New York and First Division naturally has exclusive distribution today of all Chadwick product.

Detroit

THE Regent headliners for the past year, Paul Specht and his orchestra, have left town to accept an engagement at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York. They have been replaced by Gerald Marks and his Hotel Tuller orchestra. In addition to this change, the management recently announced the appointment of Lawrence Lipton to handle publicity material. He succeeds B. G. Clare.

Frank Raymond has been engaged as publicity director of Charles H. Miles' new Oriental theatre, which opened to capacity crowds, Monday, Sept. 26. A program of super-vaudeville, musical prologues, organ novelties and feature pictures constitutes the policy of this house, which is said to be a foremost example of Oriental architecture in America today.

Spanish architecture predominates [illegible] Lou Cohen's west side enterprise, which also opened this week. The entertainment plan is similar to that of the Oriental except for the Hollywood-Sunny Brook orchestra, [illegible] Sammy Dibert.

Fred Aiken, district manager for Pathe short subjects, and Cecil Mayberry, district manager for Pathe features, were in Detroit last week for a sales conference.

Work on the Marine at Marine City is being rushed and the men have on several occasions punched the overtime clock while rushing to complete the job. Manager [illegible] and stage equipment.

Baltimore

THE Stanley Theatre, built on the site of the old Academy of Music, North Howard Street, at Franklin, Baltimore, Md., by the Stanley-Crandall Company, Washington, D. C., was opened to the public Friday night, September at 8:30 o'clock, to the public and invited guests.

The auditorium of the playhouse measures 120 by 250 feet, and the building was designed by the Hoffman-Henon Company, Philadelphia, and Roland Toner acted as construction superintendent.

The seating capacity of the playhouse is 4,000 persons and nearly that number of persons attended the opening. Among the notables there were John J. McGuirk, president of the Stanley Company; Harry M. Crandall, executive vice-president of the Stanley-Crandall company; Abe Sablosky, Frank Buhler and many state and city officials, newspaper people and other prominent citizens. Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, was unable to attend.

A dinner was given to Mr. McGuirk and Mr. Crandall and his family at the Hotel Belvedere just prior to the inaugural performance at the Stanley.

The program started with dedicatory address by Mayor William F. Broening, in which he extolled the virtues of the new theatre.

Prior to his address a special act in one was the first number on the program following an organ concert by Ernie Cooper. In the act a singer, with two other persons dressed in Colonial costumes, sang the "Star Spangled Banner," against a background of moving clouds and toward the end of the act the representatives of Fort McHenry came into view with Old Glory woving above it illuminated with a baby spot light.

Next followed the overture "My Maryland" by Sigmund Romberg, by the orchestra of 35, under the direction of Felice Iula, and a chorus of 20 directed by George Castelle.

The Paramount news, a cartoon "Co-co the Cannibal," a dancing act with Carlos and Valeria; selections by Waring's Pennsylvanians and "The Stolen Bride," featuring Billie Dove, constituted the program.

While the guests were coming in selections were rendered in the mezzanine lounge by Immanuel Wad, pianist.

The Romanesque style adapted to modern construction was used in designing the façade of the Stanley, which is of glazed terra-cotta with a white marble finish. A large marquee is over the main entrance, and at night flood lights located on its top play upon the whole front.

The large lobby is entered by twelve double mahogany doors, and on either side of it wide marble staircase lead up from the tesselated floor to the mezzanine lounge and promenade.

Three-way stairs have been placed at either end of the promenade leading to different levels of the balcony. The entrance doors to the main auditorium are located just under the promenade.

Around the marble walls and pilasters of the lobby and in the auditorium mural paintings depicting the history of Maryland in a chronological order have been placed.

The color scheme used in the interior decoration is that which was in vogue during the middle of the fifteenth century and the design is typically medieval Romanesque adapted to modern designing.

The various decorations are done in blue, pearl, maroon and gold with antique finish, while the cornices of the marble pilasters and columns and grills above the back of the boxes are decorated with gold leaf.

The draperies, silk wall panels and carpets are of maroon and deep rose, making a soft, harmonizing combination of colors.

A concealed lighting system is augmented by many large crystal chandeliers designed in fountain effects which have been placed throughout the house, the largest of which is suspended from a medallion in the ceiling of the auditorium.

All sorts of productions may be given on the stage as it has been completely equipped to handle 38 drops and extensive lighting equipment and many large dressing rooms. A twenty foot square lift has been placed in the center of the stage which can be lowered or raised at will.

The marble used for tthe pilasters and columns includes Brecha, Pavazanna and Flora. That used for the railings and bases includes Botchina and Lavanto and a York Fossil has been used for the black bases of some of the columns. Other marbles used in the decorative work are Tennessee, White Italian and Rouge Royal.

An elevator orchestra pit has been installed also which can accommodate fifty men, and sinks nineteen feet when the orchestra is not playing.

Four projection machines, a full set of spotlights and other equipment have been installed in the large projection room located high up in the front of the house.

The hot air in winter, as well as the refrigerated air in summer, will be forced through the air purifying system, with which, the house will be heated in winter and cooled in summer.

Bernard Depkin, Jr., who has been an exhibitor in Baltimore for many years, has been appointed resident manager, and his assistant manager is William A. Busch, a film salesman in this territory for many years.

The conductors of the orchestra will be Felice S. and Robert Paul Iula.

A triple manual orchestral organ costing about $50,000 has been installed with a console on a lift also.

Continuous performances will be given daily from 11 A. M. to 11 P. M., with four de luxe presentations.

The scale of prices is as follows:

From 11:00 A. M. to 12:30 P. M., all seats 25 cents; 12:30 to 5:00 P. M., all seats 35 cents; 5:00 P. M. to closing, orchestra 60 cents, balcony 40 cents, boxes and loges 75 cents.

On Saturdays and holidays the scale will be: 11:00 A. M. to 12:30 P. M., all seats 25 cents; 12:30 to 5:00 P. M., orchestra 50 cents, balcony 35 cents, boxes and loges 60 cents; 5:00 P. M. to closing, orchestra 65 cents, balcony 50 cents, boxes and loges 75 cents.

W. B. Armstrong of the Armstrong-Power Theatre equipment establishment with headquarters in Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland and other mid-western cities, visited San Francisco recently after a trip over the district in the Northwest where Armstrong-Power stage equipment is being installed in several theatres.

S. Harvey Levey, formerly the manager of the State Theatre at Martinez, has resigned from that position as the ill-health of his wife necessitated Levey's leaving Martinez.

C. Mandel, organist at the Palace Theatre, Oakland, is making a decided hit with the audiences by playing what the people want.

The new Alhambra Theatre in Sacramento, which is now nearing completion has installed Preddey Spotlights.

J. Fred Miller, manager of the Theatre Visalia, was in San Francisco recently looking after his bookings.

The new Palo Alto Theatre, owned by E. J. Arkush, the well known theatre man of San Francisco, is unique in that it has an outdoor lobby or patio. The seats have just been ordered from C. F. Weber & Co. and will be installed at once.

Frank Garbott, manager of the Palace Theatre, San Leandro, believes in selling the coming attractions to his patrons as they step inside the theatre by the use of cut-outs and atmospheric displays in his foyer. He has many attractive displays to his credit and everyone who enters the theatres gets an impression of the next attraction.

On September 3rd the well known American Theatre of Oakland, for many years under the direction of the Midgeley people, came under the banner of the new order of West Coast Theatres, Inc.

Beach & Krahn, have installed Preddey Reflector Lamps in their Lorin Theatre in Southern Berkeley.

New York & New Jersey

JEWISH holidays this week made that section of New York known as the film curb look like a country village, and the same can be said for most of the exchanges in the Godfrey building and 1600 Broadway, where salesmen are generally as busy as the proverbial bees during the early part of the week. When an occasional customer did straggle in he was greeted like a long-lost brother and it's a good safe bet that he was sold before leaving. Broadway and 7th avenue also felt the effects and it was a cinch to cross both these thoroughfares without being hit by a taxi or film delivery truck.

The new Leonia Theatre, Leonia, N. J., opened on Thursday, Sept. 29th, and consisted of a mixed programme, including pictures, vaudeville, a presentation and speech-making by various high officials of the community.

John Pollock, of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum forces, acted as master of ceremonies, his selection for the post having been urged by the Leonia Board of Trade.

The theatre is a 1,200 seater, adaptable also for dramatic productions, the try-outs of several having been already booked.

Friday afternoon, Sept. 30th, has been set aside for the children of Leonia and vicinity, when they will be guests of the management.

Clarence A. Cohen and Maxwell Platt have just completed construction on the Whitehall Theatre located at 57-58 Whitehall Street.

This theatre, which has long been the cherished ambition of the builders, is located at the most extreme southerly point of New York City, opposite the Battery Park.

Messrs. Cohen and Platt have long felt that this particular neighborhood was in need of some amusement, not having had any form of entertainment since the days of Jennie Lind, the Swedish Nightingale, who sang in the famous Castle Garden, which now faces their theatre.

The construction of this theatre marks a new era in the motion picture industry, as it will cater primarily to transients, sightseers and seafarers—

The theatre will be operated by Louis and Harry Harris, who operate a large circuit of theatres in this city. The turn over of the theatre to Messrs. Harris for operation was negotiated through George Braham of Banett & Co. Attorney for Messrs. Cohen and Platt was Mr. Lewis Mayers, 51 Chambers street, and for Messrs. Harris, Maurice Shaine of Shaine & Weinrib.

Rentals are said to aggregate over a million dollars.

The appearance of several screen stars, state senators and others socially and politically prominent in Woodbridge and adjacent New Jersey territory made the opening of the State theatre, owned and operated by Marcus Block, a notable event last week. Many hoping to be present at the inaugural ceremonies were unable to gain admittance to this house, which is said to be one of the finest of its kind in towns the size of Woodbridge.

Nathan Marcus is manager of the Block theatres, which in addition to the State in Woodbridge, includes two other houses on the way to completion at Hawthorne and Highland Park, N. J.

Jack Goldstein, of Commonwealth exchange, is again assembling his editorial staff for the first Fall number of the M. P. Salesman, according to report. At this organization's luncheon last week, Sol Trauner was elected chairman of the entertainment committee. All members are looking forward to the M. P. Salesman's ball to be held at the Commodore Hotel, Nov. 26.

Morris Jack is once more operating the Palace theatre at Long Branch. Some difficulty over certain fire laws was successfully ironed out.

Over a hundred cases before the local arbitration board were disposed of at the last meeting.

Paul Luck, a former newsgatherer along New York's film curb and later engaged in picture distribution, recently entered the production ranks along with Ed Hurley. These two have been busy with a "colored Elk" picture in the black belt of Harlem.

The Ruby theatre on the East Side of New York again has Jack Teich back as manager.

Richard Reilly has recently been appointed manager of the Stanley-Fabian Embassy and Hollywood theatres of Orange. Mr. Reilly was formerly with the Royal at Bloomfield.

Phil McLean sketched the cartoon and the caption read: "Sawtee Sawtell."

It won't be long now before East Rutherford, N. J., will have a new $250,000 theatre called the Rex. October 29th is the date set for the opening and the programs will consist of first run motion pictures and high-class vaudeville. The house seats 1,100 and is constructed from plans drawn by Douglas P. Hall, architect, along the lines of New York's Embassy theatre. There will be no balconies.

The building proper will be a two-story affair which, in addition to the theatre, will include six stores and six offices. The facade will be finished in tapestry brick.

Frank Gersten, president of the Rex Theatre Corporation and able veteran of the theatre, will personally direct the Rex, which he affectionately terms "the bandbox." Mr. Gersten's past experience in this field includes an executive position with the Shuberts, and former ownership of the Lexington Opera House, Keith's Royal and Prospect theatres, the U. S. of Hoboken and the Temple theatre of Union Hill, N. J.

The Rex Theatre Corporation is a subsidiary of the Equity Theatres Corp., credited with owning and operating numerous theatres in the East.

Russell Fanning is house manager of the Edyth Totten theatre, which was recently made one of the "Little Theatres."

In line with present popular musical presentations, Brandt Brothers of Brooklyn are said to have entered negotiations with several well-known orchestra leaders.

A new motion picture is to be built at Iselin, N. J., according to a recent report.

George Cohen, well-known exhibitor of Newburgh and Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has moved his New York office from West 49th Street to the Strand Building.

It is reported that the Stanley-Fabian organization has recently acquired a new theatre site at 31st street and Bergenline Avenue. Another recent acquisition of this company reported is a long-term lease of the Dewitt theatre, Broadway, Bayonne.

Canada

A VERY serious accident befell William Conway, Toronto, salesman of the Toronto branch of the Fox Film Corporation, in an automobile smash at Lindsay, Ontario, on September 22, as a result of which Mr. Conway suffered a fracture of the skull, remaining unconscious for hours.

Word was sent to Toronto of the accident and W. C. Gehring, manager of the Toronto Fox branch, W. J. Reid, Fox salesman, and Mrs. Conway immediately went to Lindsay to look after Mr. Conway. Physicians at the Lindsay hospital reported next day that Mr. Conway had recovered consciousness and would recover.

The opening of the new Auditorium Theatre, Quebec, on September 22, as a unit of the Keith-Albee organization, with Irving Sourkes as manager, was an event of singular importance. Prices for opening night were $3.30 for boxes, $2.20 for the orchestra floor and $1.10 for the balcony. The programme also included five acts of Keith-Albee vaudeville.

Starting next day, the new theatre dropped to its regular admission scale with the same programme, prices anging from 40c to 85c for evening performances and 25c and 35c for matinees. Programmes are being changed twice weekly, Sunday shows being held.

Intimation has been given by N. L. Nathanson, Toronto, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., of the establishment of a profit-sharing policy by the corporation for employees among the 120 theatres operated in Canada from Montreal, Quebec, to Vancouver, B. C. The details of the plan have not yet been completed.

Along with quite a few other exhibitors of Toronto, Ontario, Manager Thomas Daley of the Tivoli, a downtown house, has adopted the Saturday opening policy for regular attractions. The change took effect Saturday, September 24, with the presentation of "Swim, Girl, Swim" for one week.

Jules Bernstein, manager of Loew's Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, as long as anybody can remember, has gone to New York City, where he has been given an important post in the Loew organization. The Toronto house, which is a [illegible] with a winter garden on top of the regular theatre, was opened by Manager Bernstein 15 years ago.

Basil Ferrari has closed deals whereby he takes over the Tivoli Theatre at Huntley, Indiana, from Manager Hansen and the Mark Theatre at Mark, formerly operated by Louis Pedrucci.

Lyman Massey, who has recently been operating a theatre in Kankakee, has been appointed manager of the Valley Theatre, Spring Valley.

Marks Brothers staged a special gala program including an elaborate stage show at the Granada Theatre this week, in honor of the first anniversary of this house. Jack Hess, publicity manager for Marks Brothers, put over a special section in the Chicago American, to mark the occasion.

C. E. Beck, who opened up with the official Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures a day after the battle, in his Castle, Rose and Pastime Theatres, has reaped a harvest on this film, admission prices at all three houses having been raised to seventy-five cents, and capacity audiences have been the rule each day this week from 9:00 A. M. to midnight.

Joseph McKeuhn, formerly chief of service at the Palace Theatre, and at one time manager of the Stratford, is now in charge at the Embassy.

The sales staff of Universal's Chicago exchange is starting work this week on a play date and new business drive to celebrate Alexander Month, in honor of the popular manager's tenth anniversary of service with Universal. Mr. Alexander is popular with exhibitors and film men alike, and the sales staff expects Alexander Month to break all previous business records of the Universal exchange.

Pat Garyn, sales manager, and Rhea Duhan, head of the booking department of National Screen Service's New York Office, were Chicago visitors last week.

Schaefer Brothers recently had a safe mounted on a heavy concrete foundation in their Crystal Theatre, so that burglars could not carry away the strong box and its contents. Early Monday morning safe crackers wrecked the safe in an effort to get at Saturday and Sunday's receipts, but its strength resisted their efforts to open it. [illegible] making this procedure difficult.

Central Penn

AS a result of the primary elections on September 20, Chas. E. Newbaker, a motion picture theatre owner and manager, of Steelton, Pa., is practically certain to be the next sheriff of Dauphin county. which is one of the most important subdivisions of Pennsylvania, including in its territory Harrisburg, the State capitol.

Mr. Newbaker won the Republican nomination in the primary contest, defeating three rivals in his party. As Dauphin county is normally overwhelmingly Republican, there is little doubt of his ability to defeat his Democratic opponent in November.

Mr. Newbaker is owner and manager of the Strand and the Standard Theatres in Steelton, both of which he purchased about three years ago. The Strand is a large, modern picture house. The Standard, a smaller theatre, was the first photoplay house established in Steelton. Mr. Newbaker personally directs the management of both theatres.

George Nevin, of Sunbury, Pa., graduate of the Paramount School of Theatre Managers in New York City, has been promoted to the post of manager of a handsome new theatre just erected in Binghamton, N. Y., by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which controls a chain of about 150 theatres. Until his recent transfer to Binghamton, Mr. Nevin was assistant manager of a large Comerford house in Buffalo.

The interior of the Capitol Theatre, Reading, has been repainted and redecorated under direction of the new manager, John G. Newkirk, recently transferred to the theatre from the Rialto in Allentown. The work was completed early in September.

Orders have been placed for the installation of Marr & Colton pipe organs in the Plaza Theatre, East Stroudsburg; the Liberty, Exeterboro, controlled by Joseph Walsh, and in the new theatre which V. C. Luppert is building in Williamsport.

A midnight show was given in the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, of which Charles J. Jones is manager, on the night following the primary elections on September 20. Election returns were obtained from the office of one of the local newspapers and displayed on the screen.

The announcement has been made of the marriage of W. Earle Homan, publicity man for Loew's Colonial Theatre, Reading, and Miss Clara Blatt, of Camden, N. J., daughter of a former Reading newspaperman, which took place in Camden recently.

Timothy B. Heckard, who recently obtained a long-time lease on the Broad Street Theatre, Harrisburg, accompanied by Oscar B. Feldser, who formerly controlled the theatre, was in the Philadelphia film exchange district on September 12, booking plays for the winter season. Mr. Heckard relinquished control of the New Rialto, Harrisburg, September 30, when his lease on the property expired. The New Rialto will be operated hereafter by Isaac Marcus, owner of the Royal and National Theatres, who recently bought the property. He contemplates extensive improvement to the building this fall.

Three hundred children from four Harrisburg orphanages were the guests of the management of the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, on September 15, at a showing of a Tom Mix picture.

The Arcadia Theatre, Reading, one of the Franklin Amusement Company chain, resumed the use of the Vitaphone on September 12. It had been out of service all summer because the mechanism interferred with the operation of the theatre's cooling system.

Seattle

JOHN C. RAGLAND, vice-president and general manager of the Columbia Film Exchanges, was the "guest of honor" on Seattle's Film Row last week, visiting at the local office and conferring with Managers Adolph Rosecan of Butte and Jack Tillman of Portland. Mr. Ragland, accompanied by is wife, arrived here by boat from Los Angeles, and returned to the southern city after a brief vacation in this territory.

W. T. Stapleton, well known exhibitor of the Northwest territory, spent a short time here last week, and announced plans to open his new house at Pell, Washington, about the middle of October.

Herman Webber, Western district manager for Paramount-Lasky, arrived in the city last week for a sales conference with Branch Manager George P. Endert, after which Mr. Endert accompanied Mr. Wobber as far south as Portland on the latter's return trip to Los Angeles.

J. Frank Shea, home office representative of Film Booking Offices, visited Branch Manager Art H. Huot last week, en route to California.

Bill Drummond, well known salesman of this territory, resigned last week from the Columbia Pictures exchange and has joined the sales staff of Manager Clarence Hill's Co-operative Exchange. He succeeds L. W. Patrick, who recently joined Manager Jack Lannon's sales organization for Greater Features, Inc.

P. W. Struppler, exhibitor of Pullman, Washington, came into Seattle this week to confer with Ben Shearer of the National Theatre Supply Company's local office relative to the new house which Mr. Struppler will soon introduce to the theatregoers of his home town.

L. O. Lukan, First National's Western Division manager, returned to Seattle last week after a brief vacation spent at his home near this city. After a short time at the local office he entrained for California to take up his duties with renewed vigor.

Jay Gage and Frank Quiett, sales representatives of the Tiffany branch, returned this week from Oregon, where they have been conducting an intensive sales campaign for the last several weeks.

Walt Tebbets, veteran showman of the Oregon territory, who promises a real surprise when he opens his new Oriental Theatre in Portland within a few weeks, spent a short time in this city last week, picking out new equipment and film releases for his house. The Oriental opening will be a $5 affair, with personal appearance of several movie stars, if the advance reports are to be believed.

B. Wallace Rucker, chief of the local Educational exchange, is so proud of is new quarters that last week he called a sales conference of his men and introduced them to the improved exchange. Billy Green, of Portdand, and Harry Landstrom, of Western Washington, were the salesmen in attendance.

A mechanical apparatus for playing phonograph records, adaptable to the smaller suburban and town houses, has been installed in the Embassy Theatre in this city by Manager Joe Danz.

Friends of Phil Weinstein, formerly associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in this territory, will be glad to learn of his appointment to the position of manager of the Columbia Film Exchange in San Francisco, as reported by Columbia offices here this week.

Waldo Ives, youthful exhibitor of Anacertes, spent a short time on Film Row last week booking pictures for his string of houses in the previously mentioned territory.

The new Rialto Theatre in Kirkland, Washington, was opened to the public last week with a showing of "What Price Glory" and has been classed as one of the finest small houses in the local territory. It is operated by Guy Merrill, former exhibitor of Idaho and more recently from California.

Donald Johnson, projectionist for the Kelso-Kalama chain of houses, achieved wide publicity throughout the state last week at the Seattle Radio Exposition when it was learned that he had picked up various radio stations in Australia, Japan, Scotland and England during the year that he has been interested in radio experimentation.

Contracts were placed last week for the erection of a new $100,000 motion picture theatre for Pilz & Swanson, Star Amusement Company, at Everett, Washington. The house will be on the site of the former Rose.

Carl D. Lippincott has taken over the G. A. R. Hall at Zephyrhills, and will give picture shows three nights weekly during the winter. The house will be called the "Show Shop."

The weather department had decided to declare the "rainy season" officially off, when Mother Nature put her foot on the accelerator and turned on the tropical rains for three additional days, which served to keep quite a few people away from the theatres; but in spite of that, and the big draw Thursday night to the fight returns at the newspapers and many resorts, the past week registered fairly good for the show folk.

Frank Grosso, who has been directing the orchestra at the Strand, has been transferred to the Victory, which reopens this Saturday, where he will direct an augmented orchestra to be known as "Grosso's Little Symphony."

C. N. Leach, manager of the Marlea at Haines City, visited in Tampa this week. Mr. Leach said that he had been playing but two and three nights each week during the summer, but had arranged his bookings and will show every night from now on.

A negro troupe who have been playing the colored theatres through Florida were stranded in Fort Myers last week.

The Tampa Real Estate Board are behind a "Better Homes and Building Exposition," which they will stage at the Davis Island Coliseum, November 5th to the 12th. The big attraction of the show will be a five-reel picture, which they have engaged Edwin Cooper to produce, and which will be shown there first each afternoon and evening.

Tampa

James M. Wiest, who managed the Tampa Theatre, and who later was transferred to Texas, has returned to Florida and taken over the Eustis, at Eustis. Mr. Wiest visited in Tampa last Sunday, and said his new house was doing fine in spite of the summer slump.

Atlanta

FIRE last Monday afternoon wrecked the operating room of the Pastime Theatre here and also damaged the front of the building occupied by the theatre. The theatre was not running at the time of the blaze. Manager Vesta Wood plans to make repairs immediately and expects to have his house reopened in a few weeks.

While in Atlanta early last week, P. J. Hen announced that he had bought the Bonita Theatre at Canton, Ga., from Dr. Thomas Hogan. He also stated he expected to remodel the house.

Gus Grist, director of publicity and advertising manager for the Howard Theatre here, will leave next week for New York to take a position in the advertising department of Publix under the supervision of Lem Stewart.

He will be succeeded by Mr. Furman, who is now assistant to Sidney Dannenberg, Publix manager in Birmingham, Ala.

The New Alamo Theatre was the victim to a skillful and expert looting the past week-end between midnight last Saturday and Monday morning. Manager Ed Wallace reports the safe was thoroughly cleaned of approximately $670.00, the thieves doing their job so well as to not leave the slightest clue. The whole amount was in bills and coins.

C. L. Peavy, Atlanta branch manager of F.B.O., made several short trips into north Georgia last week.

H. G. Ballance, southeastern division sales manager for Paramount, left last Monday for a week's trip into Tennessee and to Dallas, Texas.

Hank Hearn, Atlanta manager of Liberty, spent last week in Florida territory.

Friends of Major J. W. Quillian, president of Enterprise Corporation, will regret to learn of the death of his aunt, Mrs. Emily Jane Wimpy, of this city.

Wendell Welch, of the Strand Theatre, Dallas, Ga., visited Film Row this week.

Henri Brunet, home office inspector booker for Pathe, is visiting the Atlanta office.

Robert J. Ingram, Enterprise Dallas branch manager, visited the Atlanta office for a few days last week.

Salesman J. D. Stetson, of Enterprise, made a special trip last week through Alabama and Tennessee.

C. D. Touchon, special booker for Warner Bros., who has been stationed in the Atlanta office for several weeks, has left for the Dallas branch, where he will be located for some time.

W. B. Fulton, Warner Bros. Atlanta representative of the extended run department, left last week for Chicago, where he will remain several weeks doing special work.

Russell Enger, of M-G-M home office sales development department, is expected to visit the Atlanta branch this week, where he will hold a special sales conference.

Felix F. Feist, of M-G-M home office, will visit the company's Atlanta office this week.

Ben Y. Cammack, Universal Atlanta branch manager, returned Tuesday from New York, where he spent a week in conference with the company's home office.

George Montgomery, of the Wells Enterprise, Anniston, Ala., passed through Atlanta last Sunday, enroute to New York, where he will spend several days on business.

Mrs. George A. Almon, who has been secretary to Manager C. R. Beacham of First National for several years, has resigned her position. She is succeeded by Miss Lucy White.

Friends of Miss Ruth Roberts, of Bromberg Attractions, who underwent an operation for tonsilitis this week, will be glad to learn she is recovering rapidly.

Oscar S. Oldknow, vice-president of National Theatre Supply Company, with headquarters in Atlanta, visited the company's home office in Chicago last week.

J. R. McIlheran, manager Atlanta branch of National Theatre Supply Company, has returned from a trip to Nashville, Tenn.

Ed Brown, of Atlanta, booker for the E. J. Sparks Enterprises, left Sunday for New York to meet Mr. Sparks, who, with Mrs. Sparks, is returning from a trip abroad.

Irving Briskin, secretary of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, was in Atlanta last week while on a sales tour of the country.

It is reported that C. C. Jordan, owner of the Florida Theatre at Haynes City, Fla., plans to reopen that house about October 1. The theatre has been entirely remodeled. It seats nearly 1,200.

Clinton Lake, special representative of Inter-State, is handling the Birmingham Lyric during the run of big pictures which are now playing that house.

T. D. McMinn, of the Lyric, Cullman, Ala., was elected director of the Cullman Chamber of Commerce, which was recently organized. Mr. McMinn is one of the best showmen and business men in Alabama and has recently opened his new theatre, which is one of the most pretentious houses in the small towns in Alabama.

C. H. Smuggs has recently opened the new Princess, in Haleyville, Ala., taking the place of the old "Globe," formerly operated by W. J. Hurn. Mr. Smuggs has installed modern equipment and is now presenting the best in pictures to his patrons. The house seats 350 and is equipped with all modern projection and seating appliances.

Ray Howell, of the Scenic Theatre, Birmingham, Ala., and his bride of a few months, have entered enthusiastically into their fall season. They have booked many big attractions for their theatre, and Mr. Howell states that he looks forward to a very good year.

T. A. Wilson, of the Bay Theatre, Red Bay, Ala., was a Birmingham visitor the past week. He states that business conditions are very promising in his section.

Sidney Dannenberg, of the Strand and Galax, showed remarkable presence of mind when a small store in front of his theatre caught fire, and for a short time threatened to become a serious conflagration. The blaze, if allowed a few more minutes of headway, would have threatened the Strand Theatre. Finding the blaze to be of no menace to his patrons, Mr. Dannenberg closed his doors to keep them from suspecting the presence of fire.

Visitors to Atlanta's film row last week included J. W. Andrews, of the Joe Steed Enterprises; S. J. Jenkins, Ritz Theatre, Tifton, Ga.; C. S. Smith, Alamo Theatre, Newman; F. L. Wadsworth, Rose Theatre, Tuskegee, Ala.; P. J. Henn, Ritz Theatre, Rossville, Ga.; R. T. Hill, Cumberland Theatre, Tullahoma, Tenn.; Cowan Oldham, Oldham Theatre, McMannville, Tenn.; M. W. Studio Briefs

Walter Lang, director under contract to Columbia, has been loaned to Cecil B. DeMille Corporation to handle the megaphoning of "The Night Flyer." He is at present shooting his third Columbia feature, "The College Hero."

Appearing in one of the important roles in Esther Ralston's next Paramount picture, "Spotlight" now in production under the direction of Frank Tuttle, will be George Housman. Others in the cast of the Ralston production are Neil Hamilton, Arlette Marchal, Blanche Le Claire, Nicholas Soussanin, Walter Goss and Judy King.

In the future, instead of enacting "heavies" in pictures, Charles Byer, FBO actor, will have the role of the upstanding hero. He has just been signed to play with Patsy Ruth Miller in "Red Riders of Canada," which enters production next week.

Thespians signed by Warner Bros. this week to appear in a picture now being made at their studio on the Coast include Holmes Herbert, who will be leading man in "The Silver Slave," Julanne Johnston, who will be seen in "Good Time Charley," and William Russell, who replaces Rockliffe Fellows in "The Girl from Chicago."

Mattie Witting, character actress, has been signed for a role in Paramount's "Now We're in the Air," the Paramount farce co-featuring Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton. Among other players listed in the cast are Louise Brooks, Malcolm Waite, Emile Chautard, Russell Simpson and Luke Martin.

A new Fox Film contract player is June Collyer, granddaughter of Dan Collyer of theatrical renown. She portrayed her first screen role in "East Side, West Side" and was signed by Winfield R. Sheehan to a long term contract as soon as he had seen her work.

Patsy Ruth Miller, who has been signed to an F B O contract, has been assigned the leading feminine role in "Red Riders of Canada," an F B O picture soon to enter into production with Robert DeLacy directing. The film will be an adaptation of "Pirates of Muskey" a story by William Byron Mowry which appeared in Munsey Magazine.

Supporting Claire Windsor in Gotham's "Blondes By Choice," her initial vehicle for that company, will be Allan Simpson, in the male lead, Walter Heirs, Bodil Rosing, Louise Carver, Mae Wells, Alice Belcher, Joe Belmont, Willard Leigh, Bess Flowers and Jack Gardner. Hampton Del Ruth is directing.

Lois Wilson has been signed by F B O for one of the principal roles in "Coney Island," which Ralph Ince is directing. Lucila Mendez is also in the cast. Interior scenes will be shot at the F B O studio as soon as other members of the cast have been chosen.

"Balaoo," Gaston Leroux' mystery play, has been placed in production at the Fox Films West Coast plant under the direction of Richard Rosson. Edmund Lowe and Leila Hyams have the leads and George Kotsonaros, professional wrestler, the role of ape-man. Harry Hoyt made the screen adaptation. Also in the cast are Gustav von Seyffertitz, E. H. Galvert, Norman Trevor, Barry Norton, Maude Turner, Oscar Smith, Parle Marshall and Richard Frazier.

Henry Lehrman will direct Warner Bros.' "Powder My Neck," with Irene Rich, and will start working as soon as Miss Rich has completed "Beware of Married Men."

Joining the cast of "The Gay Defender," a Grover Jones story which will be Richard Dix' new vehicle for Paramount, are Thelma Todd, Robert Brower, Jerry Mandy, Ernie S. Adams, Harry Holden, Frances Raymond, Fred Kohler and Fred Esmelton. The players are working under the direction of Gregory La Cava, whom B. F. Zeidman is supervising. Ray S. Harris, Sam Mintz and Kenneth Raisbeck scenarized the tale.

Stanley Blystone plays the principal supporting role to "Big Boy" in the Educational youngster's initial starring vehicle for the new season entitled "She's a Boy."

Ben Turpin will have the humorous role in Columbia's "The College Hero," in which Pauline Garon and Bobby Agnew are featured.

As soon as "The Comeback" has been made, Monte Blue will next appear in "Across the Atlantic," for Warner Bros. Harry Gates is now penning the script which has to do with a transoceanic flight.

Viola Dana and her sister, Shirley Mason, will meet on the same lot, for the former has signed a contract with Harry Cohn, and will report with her sister for work next week at the Columbia studio.

"Fox Tales," a new Mermaid comedy from the studios of Educational, presents Jerry Drew and Phil Dunham in the featured roles. Lucille Hutton supplies the feminine atmosphere.

Marshall Neilan expects to begin shooting Colleen Moore's next photoplay at the First National studios in Burbank. Gerald Duffy is doing the script of the film, the title of which will be announced within a few days. Larry Kent is leading man.

In George Davis' new Educational-Mermaid comedy, "Seeing Stars," the leading lady is Molly Malone, while in Larry Semon's initial Educational vehicle, Dorothy Raynor has one of the principal feminine roles, and is assisted by Lillian Leighton, Peggy Taylor, Jerry Jarrette, Charley Heakin, Jack Lipson, William Dennis and Pasley Noon.

Belle Bennett will be seen as a principal in Tiffany's version of the Martha Ostenso novel, "Wild Geese," and the rest of the cast will be announced shortly.

Fairbanks has finished work on "Over the Andes," his new production for United Artists. Actual filming began on May 28th. The new York premiere has been set for November. F. Richard Jones directed.

Paul Whitman is finishing "Smith's Holiday," another of the domestic comedies with Mary Ann Jackson, Ruth Hiatt and Raymond McKee. Two others in the cast are Lucille Miller and Otto Fries.

The Jarring Note

A defect in the appearance of a picture on a screen is something like a smudge on the face of a public speaker. It detracts from the story and from the talent of the actors---no matter how excellent they may be.

Each defect in projection costs the theatre a certain amount of money. For it is the cause of more or less dissatisfaction and the eventual loss of patronage. That is one reason why the most successful exhibitors claim that poor projection actually costs more than the very finest.

A smudge on a speaker's nose is sometimes unavoidable and is excusable. But defects in projection are never excused by the audience. For they can be avoided always.

Replace all defective parts of your projectors now. Or if your projectors are badly worn replace them with new Simplex Machines. The cost will be much less than the loss they will otherwise cause.

"jesse james"

ranking with "Underworld," "Chang," "Way of All Flesh," etc., as one of the big specials of the year!

the long run that wrote b'way history!

¶ Way back last June, "Way of All Flesh" came to the Rialto Theatre, Broadway. A resounding hit from the very first performance. ¶ 501,000 in all laughed and cried and applauded over "Way of All Flesh" at the Rialto. And more than 15,000 have seen it twice or more! ¶ After 12 weeks of record-breaking business, the picture was taken off September 16th. Taken off, because iron-clad contracts forced the playing of another picture at the Rialto on the 17th. ¶ Business the 12th week was as good as the 1st. Not a sign of faltering. But a contract is a contract. ¶ 12 weeks in New York. 6 tremendous weeks in San Francisco. Equally big in key centers everywhere. ¶ "Way of All Flesh." Mighty masterpiece of the world's greatest dramatic star, Emil Jannings. Like no other picture ever made. And "Underworld", "Chang", "Beau Geste", "Firemen, Save My Child", "Hula", "Barbed Wire" and the rest. ¶ Not only the marvel ot the industry—the envy of every other producer—

MERCHA

No. 552 — Straight from the President of the Univer

A MAN who ought to know what he is talking about, because of his long and practical experience in the picture business, has just told me that while I may have some faults, he thinks I am "the greatest merchandising producer this business has ever known."

Well, my greatest source of pride lies in the fact that I have built up, in Universal, a merchandising outfit from stem to stern—men who know the value of a dollar; men who are practical; men who are not day dreaming or theorizing; men who keep their eye on the ball and follow through!

I have been a merchandiser all my life. And it doesn't make much difference what line of business a man is in, if he has got something to sell he has got to make it salable and then he has got to show his customers how to sell it to their customers. He has got to follow through until his product, whatever it is, reaches and satisfies the ultimate consumer.

He has got to do all this with a minimum of waste. He has got to be willing to work like the very devil and has got to surround himself with men who are equally willing to forget the time clock.

The direct and net result of such an organization of merchandisers is bound to be a profitable one for everyone connected with it and everyone doing business with it.

The exhibitors who have dealt longest with Universal have made the best net profit on their investment. Their poorest years have been better than the best years of some of their less alert competitors.

Making money for the other fellow—as Universal has always done—has resulted in building up a good will which has never been equalled in the history of moving pictures.

Good will is bound to result from good merchandising and good merchandise. Selling you good merchandise and letting it go at that is not enough. My aim is not only to sell you a steady supply of good merchandise but a steady supply of good merchandising methods.

From the time we first consider the purchase of a story, down through all the processes of making the negatives and the positives and all the advertising matter, every step we take is based on sound merchandising practice.

It is the simplest possible rule for sure-fire business success. It is not the sky-rocket method. It is the steady, never-failing Universal method.

"KINOGRAMS presented the best reel"

HOW THE NEWS REELS COMPARE

An Appraisal of Six Releases by Six Companies in the Current Week

News reels reviewed—Pathe—M-G-M—International—Kinograms—Paramount—Fox

(NOTE—The News Reel is the newspaper of the screen and this appraisal service is made from a newspaper point of view. General interest of the sum total of contents, news enterprise on big events, competence of the titling and exclusions or "beats" are all elements that enter into this judgment. The verdict is a newspaper view.)

All six newsreels had the American Legion in Paris with Pathe and Kinograms the best because of better connective scenes. The parade element was alike. Paramount added the publicity feature of having its film taken by airplane from the arriving steamship, but the material was not as comprehensive as Pathe or Kinograms. All six newsreels showed the Washington airplane-parachute event with nine parachute drops from one great plane, 2 seconds apart. Kinograms won on this one with close-ups of the men as they dropped from the plane.

The annual or semi-annual friend of the newsreel—the diving Brownies at Manchester, New Hampshire—were used by International, M-G-M and Kinograms effectively with the latter using slow motion, but the stuff was dark.

The historical railroad show at Baltimore—which appeared in Kinograms the previous Saturday—was covered by all the others in this week's Wednesday reel.

A prize of one horsehair cigar lighter is awarded to M-G-M for its title in the Railroad pageant which, showing an ancient engine, reads: "In the olden days these were much enjoyed."

The new big anti-aircraft target tests subject at Aberdeen, Md., was better handled by Kinograms because the titling actually told the story.

Pathe and Kinograms were the two to have the arrivals of Jimmy Walker and Champion Gene Tunney, both effectively presented.

M-G-M ran to novelties exploiting their own officials in a Lindy arrival in California and to which Kinograms gave the news kick by showing that Lindy was back to his starting point after 20,000 miles of air travel.

M-G-M showed a nannie goat walking a narrow plank, designated as a tight rope.

Recapitulation—Kinograms presented the best reel with Pathe a close second. Fox, International, M-G-M and Paramount followed in the order named.

—The Appraiser.

MOTION PICTURES TODAY, in its issue of October 1st, starts a weekly comparative appraisal of all news reels. The first appraisal ranks

"THE SPICE OF THE PROGRAM"

Service at the Vital Point

SEVEN thousand theatres in cities and towns of 1,500 population and over use the newspapers, daily or weekly, to advertise motion pictures. This is the vital point of contact with the public—in the actual selling of entertainment to the millions of picture patrons.

Every newspaper ad. calls for a definite amount of material. In addition to display copy, the exhibitor and the newspaper need, and must have, "readers" and other text matter for the movie page or the theatre house organ.

The Booking Guide and Studio Directory, soon to be published by Motion Picture News, has been designed to meet every requirement of theatre management in its relation with the newspaper.

It will be a 100% service book that will be used day after day and week after week. It will be practical in contents and efficiently arranged so that it can serve the greatest number with the least effort and waste of time.

It will be in the hands of men who want and must have service and merchandising help. It will make money for the producer, distributor and exhibitor and that kind of book is bound to be popular.

It will also be a distinct service to the photoplay editor. Motion Picture News will place in the hands of the newspaper a book which will aid in the newspaper's task of informing the public about pictures and people—a department of newspaper service which is highly important and growing more so every day.

And it is all in the interest of exhibitor service and newspaper service to the great public upon whom depends the industry's prosperity and future.

Service at the vital point of contact is real service. That's what The Booking Guide and Studio Directory will be.

The Parley and the Public

The Bigger Meaning of the Trade Practice Conference

By William A. Johnston

WE approach the trade parley of Monday next with an open mind. It is a most important meeting. It may prove a momentous one. That is our hope.

A bureau of the Government, after years of painstaking investigation, points to certain trade practices and stamps them as unfair and undesirable. Then, and intelligently, the industry is invited to assemble its family and clean up its house.

As we say, we hope that this can be done, that at least substantial progress can be made.

But it's a good deal to expect—of a new and formative industry.

* * * *

Our family gatherings thus far have been stormy ones. Producers, distributors and exhibitors have accused each other of practically every species of business oppression. For the past fourteen years the files of Motion Picture News will indicate a fairly steady and often violent warfare between the producing, buying and selling branches of the business.

The industry, in other words and these of a homely simile, has bellyached its way along. And there are still bellyaches.

* * * *

Now, the best doctors today are more concerned with the cause of bellyaches than with the distressing symptoms. It is one thing to alleviate pain, but quite another to remove it. To remove it you must remove the cause, and the cause is often quite subtly apart from the disease itself.

That, it seems to me, is exactly the case today with the motion picture industry and its various ills.

Nothing much will ever be accomplished until that which causes the ills is corrected.

Take block booking for instance.

It is not conceivable that the producers and distributors put their heads together and invented block booking in order to advance their own interests at their customers' pain.

Block booking in itself is not an evil. In other words, it may simply be the offering of pictures wholesale, instead of individually, by which we mean picture by picture at different times in the year.

There can be no question, however, that the abuse of block booking is wrong. When it is accompanied by coercion, in the form of threats to build theatres or other coercive measures, it can only be considered an evil.

No one invented block booking; just as no one invented bellyaches.

Block booking, if it is an industrial ill, is simply the outgrowth of an uneconomic structure of the entire industry.

* * * *

The production scheme today is flatly uneconomic.

The schedules of the various studios are not based upon demand, but too largely upon matters of supply.

Consequently too many pictures are produced, and consequently too many unsalable ones are produced.

So the producer distributor, to save himself, sells his goods in block; and the exhibitor, because he is a poor buyer, falls in with the scheme. So it becomes a trade practice.

Now, the thing obviously to do is to regulate production.

And the way to do that is to have production based upon and controlled by demand, so that the public will be pulling the

Carl Laemmle—Merchant

ONLY last week I was talking with one of the country's big business men. He had very little to say about the picture industry—but that little said a lot.

"It seems to me," said he, "that you need merchandising men."

Then he spoke of Marcellus, the newly appointed head of Johns-Manville. He said that when the firm of J. P. Morgan and Co. wanted to lift a business out of the doldrums they put Marcellus in charge. Witness National Cloak and Suit, Montgomery, Ward & Co. and now Johns-Manville.

Now Mr. Marcellus, it appears, is not a Cloak and Suit man, nor a mail order man, nor an asbestos products man.

"He is," said my informant, "a merchandising man."

* * * *

It strikes me as a remarkable coincidence that at the very same time Carl Laemmle was evidently concentrating upon this very same large and salient matter.

In this issue of Motion Picture News, he rings the merchandising bell in the picture business.

His statement takes the form of a two-page announcement, and to me it is one of the most momentous so far published to this trade.

Read it—and ponder. For, as certain as daylight, the salvation of this industry, and we are now on the eve of new alignments and practices, will be the efficient merchandising of pictures.

* * * *

What is "merchandising"?

Simple as A B C. Merchandising is getting goods to the public.

Says Mr. Laemmle:

"I have been a merchandiser all my life. And it doesn't make much difference what line of business a man is in, if he has got something to sell he has got to make it salable and then he has got to show his customers how to sell it to their customers. He has got to follow through until his product, whatever it is, reaches and satisfies the ultimate consumer."

I particularly like the sentence: "He has got to follow through until his product reaches and satisfies the ultimate consumer."

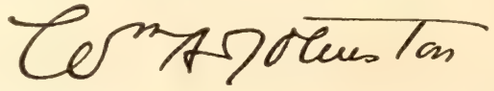
That means: selling pictures not simply to the exhibitor but through him to the public.

It means: supplying the exhibitor not merely with salable pictures but also with ideas to make the picture salable.



It means, incidentally but importantly, the use of trade papers to this very end, the advertising of pictures not merely at the exhibitor but through him to the public.

* * * *

Carl Laemmle has always been a merchant, he brought a merchant's mind into the business and he means to keep it there.

It is only fair to say that he is not the only leader who is thinking along these enlightened lines.

But he is one of a very few, altogether too few.

Five New Firms Obtain New York State Charters

New companies incorporating in the motion picture business in New York state during the past week, and filing the necessary papers with the department of state at Albany, included the following: Wolcott Palace Theatre Corporation, Wolcott, $50,000, Byron H. Garrett, Syracuse; Harold C. and Florence A. Whitford, Wolcott; Aywon Exchange, Inc., capitalization not stated, Melvin Hirsh, Irving Wernick, Bert Kulick, New York City; B. Small, Inc., $10,000, Benjamin and Henrietta Small, Abraham Maurer, Hempstead; Robert V. Newman Productions, Inc., $10,000, Nan Ross, Norma O'Connor, Lillian Langsam, New York City.

Palace Theatre, Athens, Sold to E. A. Schiller

The Palace Theatre, the leading motion picture and vaudeville house in Athens, Georgia, was sold last week for $80,000 to Edward A. Schiller, vice-president of Loew's Inc., New York; Andrew Erwin, of Athens; and L. B. Joel, also of Athens. The property comprises a building facing on College Avenue and extends back to Washington Street; it was sold by the Georgia Securities Company as part of the assets of the defunct Georgia National Bank. The three purchasers of the property held a lease on the Palace, which they have operated since its opening in 1921.

W. C. Fields Receives Slight Fracture

W. C. Fields, Paramount comedian now engaged on "The Side Show," was struck by a truck and dragged several feet while riding a bicycle along a concrete road. It was believed that he had been seriously injured, but x-rays, taken at the Hollywood hospital, revealed that only a slight fracture of third cervical vertebra had been suffered; this injury, while severely painful, does not threaten the comedian's life. He will be confined to the hospital for four or five weeks, it is thought.

Five Additions to "U" Theatre Chain

Five more theatres have been added to the Universal chain, announces Dan Michalove, general manager of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc. The Empire and the Colonial theatres at Winchester, Virginia, came into the Universal fold on October 1st. Three more were acquired in Duncan, Oklahoma, the Palace, the Ritz and the Follies. It is possible that a third house will be taken over in Winchester.

Preparing for "Wedding March" Premiere in N. Y.

Paramount officials are now beginning the preparations for the premiere in New York of the Von Stroheim production, "The Wedding March." J. S. Zamecnik has been signed to write a special musical score for the film. The cutting job on the production has been almost finished; Fay Wray, Paramount player, has the leading feminine role opposite Von Stroheim.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

WE are much interested in observing the energy and enthusiasm with which Bruce Gallup is tackling his job as President of the A.M.P.A. He has only recently assumed the office, following the annual election, but he has some ambitious plans, which deserve to succeed.

The A.M.P.A. has performed a distinct service as a general forum for the industry. Its annual dinners are events. In other ways, also, it has earned attention.

The value of the organization can, however, be much greater, in our opinion, and this is said without any intention of reflecting upon what it has already done. A return to its original purposes would seem to be in order; and, to this end, we feel sure that all its members will co-operate.

As we understand it, the original purpose of the A.M.P.A. was, in general, the improvement of advertising and publicity standards. This work is being done—and very effectively—in another way, at the moment. Would it not be well, in the interest of restoring initiative, to return this function to the A.M.P.A., as an organization? If that were done, it seems to us its usefulness would be greatly increased.

Recently, the A.M.P.A. has given more attention to social affairs than to anything else. These have their place; we would be the last to decry them. But, in addition, the A.M.P.A., as an organization, might well work more seriously for the advancement of publicity and advertising standards.

This step would, we believe, serve to create greater interest among the members of the organization. Our best wishes to Mr. Gallup for a successful administration.

IS the reign of the happy ending and the clinch fade-out coming to an end? Jesse L. Lasky believes it is. "The motion picture public, having tasted of unhappy endings, for a change finds them highly palatable and a new path is thereby opened for the artistry of the producers," says Mr. Lasky.

He points to three Paramount pictures, which are recognized box-office successes, and all of them end unhappily: "Underworld," "The Way of All Flesh" and "Children of Divorce."

Mr. Lasky thinks the public now demands logical endings. We believe he is right. Further than this, there is an entire new era in picture entertainment, as we pointed out last week, in connection with "Sunrise" and the Movietone.

LARS MOEN, for several years on the editorial staff of Motion Picture News, and who has just finished producing "The Quest of the Rainbow," a series of six two-reel productions in Technicolor at the Cosmopolitan Studios, will leave shortly for Europe, where he expects to remain for some time.

His European headquarters will be in Paris, but he will proceed immediately to Berlin where he is under contract to do one feature production for a leading German concern. He also expects to spend some time in England this Winter, where production is very active at the present time.

OUR Berlin Correspondent, H. Fraenkel, reports that he just learns from very reliable sources about a highly important American-Russian deal being more or less imminent. Some pourparlers have taken place already, and it seems to have been decided to call a meeting of leading American executives and the representatives of the Russian film organization at the end of this year or early next year at the latest.

It goes without saying that the possibilities of the Russian market are almost boundless, although, at the present moment, its monetary value is practically nil.

On the other hand the Russian film organization (which is well known to be the governmental Sovkino) is very keen on getting an opening for their product on the American market.

It is a well-known fact that most of the latest Russian productions have enjoyed a considerably high artistic standard, although very often the screen seems to have been used only as a medium for publicizing political tendencies. Lately, however, there have been several high-class Russian features without any political tendency at all, it is said.

According to a report of our Berlin Correspondent it seems to be not at all unlikely that some joined American-Russian productions will also be the outcome of the above-mentioned negotiations which, it is believed, are to take place shortly.

THE old-time exhibitor triumvirate is united. Sydney Cohen, Sam Berman and Charles L. O'Reilly are, with others, serving on the Trade Conference Committee of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce. Cohen, Berman and O'Reilly for several years directed the destinies of exhibitor organization; and Jimmie Walker, now Mayor of New York, was the other member of the group as the brilliant, fighting National Counsel of the M.P.T.O.A.

MARY PICKFORD'S new picture, "My Best Girl," reviewed in our issue of last week by Edwin Shallert, was given a preview the other night in a town near New York City. We happened to be there.

The picture was put on at 9.30, unheralded, of course, except as a preview of a new film, identity not given until it flashed on the screen. Audiences in this particular theatre are thoroughly representative and, therefore, are excellent preview material. The picture got a great reception; in fact, we should say that it made a distinct hit.

Mary has turned aside from some of her previous stories, of which too many perhaps had been cast in the same mould, and gone in for surefire comedy-drama, with a strong pathos element, and a real love-story.

The picture appeals to us as one of the best box-office attractions Mary has ever made. It seems sure to click—an opinion easy enough to arrive at in view of the audience reaction.

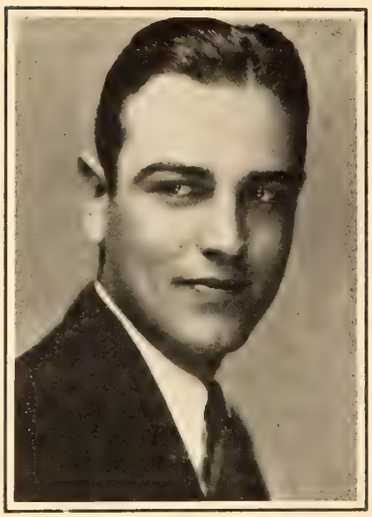
TWO prominent actors in Hollywood have recently moved out of the first flight into no work at all. The reasons assigned are different, but Hollywood has been hearing it freely charged that producers were urged to compact to give no screen roles to either. One of the actors, a famous leading man for years, is said to have antagonized a leading producer, with the result that he is now off the screen and in vaudeville.



The other actor was a star and wanted to leave his affiliation to make pictures on his own. In this, he is said to have been blocked, so that his drawing power with the

ONE of the biggest Coast studios is having a difficult time getting started on the filming of a stage play, for which a lot of money was paid. The screen adaptation has been rewritten several times, and the picture was actually started once, but recently studio officials ordered camera work halted and the script revamped. A prominent supervisor has now been put on the job.

ONE of the Broadway picture palaces devotes a good deal of time during its shows to advertising coming attractions, in the most approved manner of the neighborhood house. It goes further and uses another form of "house ad," to the extent of considerable footage. For the first few "frames" of this ad, the audience is patient; then begins to get restless; finally, somebody applauds, and the climax is reached when hisses start all over the house.

IT was reported this week that the booking of Gilda Gray's new picture for United Artists might go to the Roxy instead of the Rivoli or Rialto, which are the U. A. FORMULATION of a general convention abolishing import and export prohibitions and restrictions in the larger countries will be sought by the Council of the League of Nations at a diplomatic conference to be held in Berne October 17, in which the United States will participate through representatives of the State and Commerce Departments and the United States Tariff Commission. The meeting is in furtherance of resolutions adopted at the World Economic Conference in Geneva last May, favoring the elimination of barriers to international trade.

Europe's economic recovery has been materially retarded by the high tariffs, import and export restrictions, licenses, and other barriers to the free interchange of commodities. While the majority of these barriers are aimed by each country at neighboring and competing states, some have also served to restrict and make difficult American trade with Europe.

It is possible that there will be included in the general discussion of the free interchange of commodities some consideration of motion pictures. A large number of countries have adopted restrictions primarily aimed at American films, such as quota schemes, while others have adopted high tariffs as a barrier to imports. The free international movement of motion pictures, however, would be one of the most bitterly opposed projects which could be brought up at the conference.

There is no doubt that, consciously or unconsciously, motion picture films spread the propaganda of the country in which they were produced. The great increase in our sales of clothing, furniture, automobiles and other products in South America is attributed largely to the influence of the American pictures shown in the Latin countries. Naturally, the same demand for American products follows their exhibition in other countries. Motion pictures are the unofficial ambassador of good will for American manufactures.

goods instead of having the goods blindly pushed upon the public.

The abolition of block booking will not regulate production any more than stopping a bellyache will remove the cause of it.

The ill will break right out again—in the same or another spot.

Block booking is an industrial bellyache.

And so are the other bad symptoms.

But they are symptoms only.

And only an economic readjustment of the industry—to the end that public demand for its goods remake its structure—will ever change its operating ills.

However, as we state, we are hopeful of the outcome of this conference. It will bring about a discussion of trade practices which may be deemed to be unfair, and if it does not correct all of them, it will, unquestionably, establish this great, vital fact:

That the industry must be run in the interest of the broad public and not for the mere financial gain or exploitation of a few personalities. It will, we believe, show once and for all that the power of the industry must be used in behalf of the public.

Trade Parley Opens October 10; Delegates Selected

Will Be Industry's Most Representative Gathering; Some Exhibitor Delegates May Be Challenged as Not Independent

WITH exhibitor delegates virtually all selected and important film executives arriving from the Coast, the stage is set for the opening of the Trade Practice Conference in New York, October 10. Sessions will open Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Bar Association Building, West Forty-Fourth street, with Commissioner Abram F. Myers, of the Federal Trade Commission, presiding.

It is expected the meeting will be the most representative gathering of the industry on record. Heads of all important companies will be present in person.

Discussion in advance of the Conference centered about the personnel of exhibitor delegates. In some quarters it was said that some of these might be challenged by other exhibitor delegates on the ground that they were not independent exhibitors.

It is understood that the Trade Commission, during the week, was passing on the qualifications of the delegates and was scrutinizing their affiliations, but an attitude of absolute silence was maintained by Commission officials.

A permanent committee will be named by the Trade Commission to enforce the code of ethics for the industry which will be agreed upon at the Conference. This committee will begin operations immediately after the parley. The first meeting of the Conference, it is believed, will be directed by M. Markham Flannery, representing the Government, and will consist of listing the accredited representatives of the two groups—producers-distributors, and exhibitors.

The two groups will then hold separate meetings and elect chairmen, after which they will continue in separate session and draw up a code of ethics. Both groups will refer to Mr. Flannery problems for his opinion as to the Government's attitude. Stenographic reports will be exchanged between the two groups.

As this issue went to press, a number of important executives had already arrived from the Coast for the parley. These included Jesse L. Lasky and Walter Wanger, of Paramount; Louis B. Mayer, of M-G-M; Harold B. Franklin, of West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Fred Beetson, of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, the Hays organization on the Coast.

Two Social Functions

Two social functions will be held in connection with the conference. A Get-Acquainted Dinner will be given on Monday, October 10, at the Hotel Astor by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, at which all visiting delegates will be guests of the T. O. C. C.

A Good-Will Dinner Dance will be held by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America on Saturday, October 15, at the Astor, tendered to the representatives of the Trade Commission. There will be 1500 invited guests. President R. F. Woodhull is general chairman of the dinner committee. David R. Hochreich has been appointed executive manager of the affair.

The regular monthly meeting of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce on Sept. 29 was devoted entirely to preparation for the conference. At the conclusion of a very thorough discussion, a committee to lay out plans and present the case of the New York exhibitor was appointed. The committee consisted of the following:

J. Arthur Hirsch, chairman; Sydney S. Cohen, Louis F. Blumenthal, William Brandt, Samuel I. Berman, Charles L. O'Reilly, Harry Suchman, Leo Brecher, Hyman Rachmil and A. H. Schwartz. Ex-officio: Sol Raives, president; Max Barr, treasurer; Marty Schwartz, editor, "Organization"; and Nathan Burkan, counsel.

It was decided to place every department of their organization at the disposal of the independent theatre owner delegates that will attend. Hotel reservations will be made upon request and delegates will be asked to use the T. O. C. C. offices for the sending and receiving of mail and for conferences and meetings.

Facilities will be given all delegates to meet and consult together.

A set of resolutions is being prepared, explaining fully the position of the New York independent theatre owners on the matters in question.

"The Committee will welcome suggestions from visiting delegates and independent theatre owner organizations, National or local, and assure them of our sympathetic interest and cooperation," said a statement.

"Any visiting theatre owners whether they are delegates or not are invited to report immediately on their arrival to the T. O. C. C. offices, 908 Times Building.

Few Theatres Damaged By St. Louis Tornado

Most Theatres Have Resumed Business With Trade Practically Normal

ST. LOUIS filmdom escaped practically unscratched in the terrible tornado which swept a path through Central Western and Northeast St. Louis and Venice, Granite, Madison and East Alton, Ill., in the early afternoon of Thursday, September 29. So far as can be ascertained, no one actively connected with the film industry was killed or seriously injured.

Shows that resumed business last Thursday and Friday nights report receipts were about sixty to seventy per cent below normal. Improvement was shown on the following Saturday, and business is now about back to normal.

After a careful canvass of the theatre owners in St. Louis and other cities in Missouri, it was decided by the General Committee, having in charge the tornado sufferers' relief work, to handle the situation within the state without requesting outside aid.

At first it was believed there was need for a general appeal. But this movement, started in places, has been countermanded. The St. Louis people generally express, through the Relief Committees, their appreciation for the many substantial evidences of good will and sympathy which came to them from different parts of the country, and desire to sincerely thank all for the same. It being able to handle the situation in Missouri they fortunately will not require outside aid.

President Fred Wehrenberg, of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Missouri, sent the following telegram countermanding his previous message to the M. P. T. O. A.

"The Citizens' Committee, as a matter of civic pride, refuses to accept outside. So kindly disregard telegram of September thirtieth. Kindest regards. Will see you at Conference.—Fred Wehrenberg."

The St. Louis theatre owners, led by Spyros Skouras, head of Skouras Brothers Enterprises and the St. Louis Amusement Company; Fred Wehrenberg, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, and Joseph Mogler, president of the St. Louis Motion Picture Exhibitors League, were among the very first in the city to arrange for the raising of funds for the relief of the victims of the storm. A monster benefit show was held at the Coliseum in which all the leading motion picture companies and vaudeville organizations participated.

The general admission price was $1, and reports are that about $2,500 was raised for the relief fund. Virtually every penny taken in goes to the aid of the storm victims. The artists, musicians, motion picture machine operators, stage hands, ushers and others on the theatre's staff donated their services free of charge.

Other theatres in St. Louis will hold benefit shows this week. Relief fund contribution boxes have been installed in the lobby of every theatre in the city.

A check up of the storm zone reveals that the Congress Theatre is in such bad shape that it will probably never reopen; however, it is the only amusement circuit house that has not resumed since the storm.

The large sign in front of the Missouri Theatre has been taken down because the wind weakened supporting cables, making it a menace to patrons.

Many other houses suffered minor damages.

Trade Parley Opens October 10

Rialto, Baltimore; Herman Blum, Idle Hour, Baltimore; Harry Crandall and Harry Bernstein.

From several sections came news of definite programs mapped out by exhibitors for presentation to the Conference; from others delegates will come uninstructed.

The Michigan delegation will arrive armed with a full list of what the M.P.T.O. of that state deems to be unfair practices. It is in entire accord with the decision handed down by the Commission, especially with the order which held block-booking to be illegal.

The M.P.T.O. of Massachusetts will meet late this week to prepare its platform for the conference.

The Ohio M.P.T.O. believes the parley will result in benefits to the independent exhibitor. No detailed statement was issued regarding the remedies the organization will seek, but a thorough canvass of the exhibitors of the state has been made, seeking their ideas for presentation to the conference.

The delegates of the M.P.T.O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware will come uninstructed, but will be accompanied by an advisory committee of twelve, who will consult with them as the conference develops.

The M.P.T.O. of Maryland will stress the slogan of fair play and the Golden Rule and is optimistic that the conference will be successful in healing differences between producers and exhibitors.

Vera Veronina Barrymore's Lead in "Tempest"

Greta Nissen, originally announced as John Barrymore's leading lady in "Tempest," his next production for United Artists, will not be the star's leading lady in the film; instead, the role will be portrayed by Vera Veronina, the Russian actress.

J. C. Brown New National Mgr. at Cleveland

J. C. Brown has been appointed manager of the Cleveland, Ohio, branch office of the National Theatre Supply Company, succeeding Geo. W. Armstrong who, on account of ill health, will take a vacation of two months, after which he will return to the organization in another capacity, probably in the National One-Contract Division.

Mr. Brown will prove a most able successor to Mr. Armstrong in the management of the Cleveland office, owing to his long and varied experience in the theatre equipment field, having been at one time manager of the Southern Theatre Equipment Company offices in Atlanta, Ga., and in the equipment business on his own account in the Southern states.

Immediately before being transferred to the Cleveland office, Mr. Brown held an executive position in the purchasing department of the General Offices, and in a supervisory capacity among the various National offices.

The Cleveland branch office is rated as one of the best offices of the National Organization from the standpoint of sales volume, and it is predicted that its record for both sales and service will be satisfactorily maintained under Mr. Brown's direction in the future.

Old House Operated While New One Builds

A construction feat has just been accomplished at Thirty-ninth Street and Woodland Avenue, Kansas City, where a new and larger motion picture theatre has been erected over an old one without discontinuing operation of the theatre for a single night. The construction work was in progress more than twenty-two weeks. The new theatre structure of the new Colonial Theatre, of which H. H. Barrett is manager, is higher and occupies twelve additional feet of ground on either side of the old building, which had stood there since 1909 and was erected while the latter was still standing.

When the new building was completed the old one was removed from within, bit by bit, up until the formal opening of the new theatre this week. The seating capacity of 660 persons has been doubled through the addition of a balcony and the additional width on each side.

"Jazz Singer" Premiere Will Be Radioed

THE Broadway premiere for a motion picture will be broadcast for the first time at 8 P.M. October 7th when Station WRNY will enable radio fans to take part in the showing at the Warner Theatre in New York of "The Jazz Singer," in which Al Jolson makes his screen debut. The radio program will last one hour and the entertainment to be broadcast will treat of the celebrities attending the opening and their greeting over the air and the preliminary portion of the evening's program. Albert Howson of the Warner Theatre will be master of ceremonies and will preside over the microphone.

"Jesse James" to Play at Rialto Theatre in N. Y.

"JESSE JAMES," Fred Thompson's first vehicle for Paramount, will play an extended engagement at the Rialto Theatre in New York City immediately following the close of "The Magic Flame," the present attraction at the 42nd Street house.

A story by Frank M. Clifton supplies the material for the Jesse James film. Jesse E. James served as technical director for the production while the supporting cast included Nora Lane, Montague Love, Mary Carr, James Pierce, Harry Woods and William Courtwright. Lloyd Ingraham wielded the megaphone.

Vancouver Film Exchange to Have Formal Opening

Vancouver, B. C., has a wonderful new film exchange building which is about to be formally opened. Each of the film distributing companies in Western Canada has co-operated in the construction of the substantial new premises, which are of reinforced concrete with special film vaults, suites of offices and other facilities. The building is fire-proof from bottom to top, and is one-story in height, all offices having street frontage.

Col. John Cooper, Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, is going to Vancouver to officiate in the formal opening of the building, which, according to experts, is one of the finest of its kind in the world. Vancouver film exchanges were formerly grouped in the Leigh-Spencer Building, 553 Granville Street.

Propose Stricter Laws to Restrain Carnivals

A proposed ordinance has been submitted to the Minneapolis city council which would compel all carnivals operating in the city to pay a weekly license fee of $250 and would prohibit the operation of ferris wheels, aerial riding devices, and games of chance. This is a direct result of an accident in which two people were hurt while riding in a ferris wheel at a carnival in north Minneapolis. It is hoped that if the council does pass this ordinance similar legislation will follow throughout the Northwest.

Change in First National Releasing Schedule

On October 30th, First National will release "Gun Gospel" instead of "The Gorilla." The other four films listed for October are "The Rose of the Golden West," "American Beauty," "The Crystal Cup" and "Breakfast at Sunrise."

Theatres Resume Operating in Fulton, Missouri

The ban on public gatherings in Fulton, Mo., placed as a precaution against the spread of infantile paralysis has been raised by Mayor Charles M. Wilson. The picture shows have resumed operations.

Sam L. Warner Dies at Los Angeles Hospital

Succumbs to Pneumonia After Short Illness; Was Vice President of Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

SAMUEL L. WARNER, vice-president of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., died at the California Lutheran Hospital, Los Angeles, early Tuesday, October 5. Mr. Warner, who was taken ill two weeks previous to his death, had undergone two operations for sinus trouble. He appeared on the road to recovery when on last Saturday complications developed, including pneumonia.

Mr. Warner was forty years old at the time of his death. At his bedside when the end came were his wife, Lina Basquette, whom he married in 1925, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Warner, and Albert Warner, his brother. Harry Warner, another brother, arrived in Los Angeles soon after the end came, accompanied by medical specialists from the East in response to a call from the coast that Sam's condition was critical. A third brother, Jack, who was in New York to attend the opening of "The Jazz Singer," was also on his way to Los Angeles when his brother succumbed.

For the last six months Sam Warner has been in Hollywood in connection with the production of Vitaphone pictures. Previously he had his offices in New York, where he was in charge of the exhibiting branch of the Warner Bros. organization before the company bought out Vitaphone.

He is survived by his wife, Lina Basquette, their daughter, born in October, 1926, Mrs. B. Warner, three brothers, Harry, Albert and Jack Warner, and three sisters, Mrs. Lou Halper of Los Angeles, Mrs. Dave Robbins of Youngstown, O., and Mrs. Harry Charnas of Cleveland.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2:30 P. M., Sunday. The Rev. Dr. Edgar F. Magnin will officiate, and interment will be at the Home of Peace Cemetery in Los Angeles.

Samuel L. Warner

Sam L. Warner was one of the pioneer picture showmen, first engaging in the business at the head of one of the earliest "road show" film enterprises. That was through the small towns of Ohio and Pennsylvania, and he had as his partner his brother, Albert. The show was "The Great Train Robbery," which was the picture that first aroused his interest in films and the picture business as the field in which he decided to make his career.

Born in Baltimore, Md., Aug. 10, 1887, he showed a natural liking and ability for show business when in his early teens. His first occupation in amusement enterprises was in a position at an amusement park at Sandusky, Ohio.

After playing his road show tour with "The Great Train Robbery," Sam and his brother Albert set themselves up as exhibitors, renting a store in Newcastle, Pa., and turning it into a theatre. The house had a seating capacity of 91 persons, folding chairs rented from an undertaker's establishment furnishing the seating accommodations. When the undertaker had a call for a large number of chairs, those of the theatre were commandeered, and the theatregoers at the Warner picture show were forced to stand through the performance.

In 1904, Sam, Albert and their two brothers, Harry and Jack, joined hands and organized the Duquesne Amusement and Supply Company, a booking company, and thus the Warner Brothers, who were later to organize and conduct one of the large producing and distributing companies, took the second step toward their ultimate goal.

Later they became interested in picture production, making features for states rights' distribution. Their first outstanding success in this branch of the industry was the film version of James W. Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," which they made in co-operation with Mark M. Ditenfass. From that point on the Warner Brothers continued to progress, and their organization became more resourceful and larger. In 1925 they purchased the old Vitagraph Company. Their large studio in Hollywood continued to expand its operations and, with their own exchanges for distribution instead of the franchise or state right system employed previous to the purchase of Vitagraph, the Warner company took its place among the large producing and distributing companies, making as many as forty regular feature releases, and some special productions each year.

During all these activities, in which the Warner concern constantly grew in size and importance, Sam Warner took an active part in the formation of the production policies which he and his brothers planned and executed. Some time [illegible] intensely interested in the "sound pictures." He is said to have been largely instrumental in the Warner Bros. taking over Vitaphone.

Stanley Acquires Site for Theatre and Office Building in Syracuse

THE Stanley Company has completed plans for the erection of a 16-story theatre and office building to cost about $2,500,000, in Syracuse, N. Y. The building will occupy a downtown site recently acquired by Stanley.

This project carries out plans in formation by the Mark Strand company previous to the latter's absorption by Stanley. The new project will be the Stanley company's only direct theatre interest in Syracuse, for while the Syracuse Strand Company has a booking affiliation with Stanley, the arrangement stops there. A group of Buffalo and Syracuse interests control the Syracuse Strand organization, which is not a subsidiary of the Stanley-Mark Strand Company.

"U" Buys "Broadway" for Record Sum of $250,000

New York-London Photoradio Employed for First Time to Secure Movie Rights to a Play

A THEATRICAL and motion picture deal involving $250,000 and introducing something new in the signing of contracts was clinched this week when Universal Pictures Corporation purchased the motion picture rights to "Broadway," the successful play by Philip H. Dunning and George Abbott. In the Universal home office, Jed Harris, producer of the play, communicated by radiophone with Carl Laemmle, the Universal president, at the Hotel Savoy in London. Mr. Laemmle enthusiastically commended the purchase of the play, which Universal has long been after.

As it was necessary to have the Universal president's signature on the contract, the Radio Corporation of America made use of the photoradio to transmit the legal contract. This is the first time, it is believed, that the radiophone has been put to such use by the motion picture business. The eleventh page of the contract was transmitted to the Savoy in London, where the staff of the European Motion Picture Company was banqueting Mr. Laemmle. In turn, the contract was signed by Mr. Laemmle, his signature being witnessed by Sam Harris, editor of Cinema, the British trade journal, and by Carl Laemmle, Jr. The signed contract was then re-transmitted by photoradio to R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of Universal, the signatures of Philip Dunning, George Abbott, Jed Harris and Crosby Gaige being duly affixed. The entire operation took six hours. "Broadway" will be one of Universal's most important specials for 1929.

New Philly Theatres to Cost $1,681,600

PERMITS for the construction in Philadelphia of theatres to cost $1,681,600 have been issued by the Bureau of Building Inspection and it is stated that the total for 1927 will far exceed last year's total of $1,855,000. Not long ago theatrical and building circles claimed that $25,000,000 of new theatre construction was planned for this city and the present total of $1,681,600 clearly indicates that only a small portion of the projects planned have been started.

Only two of the various theatres planned for the new theatre Rialto extending along Market Street from 15th West to the Schuylkill have been started, although several other sites have been selected for the construction of motion picture houses, and the awarding of contracts on these houses will no doubt boost the total for the year to the highest in many years. One large firm, it is stated, plans to erect a theatre on Market Street representing an investment of $5,000,000.

Cruze to Make Special for De Mille

James Cruze will make a special for De Mille-Pathe to be entitled "The Red Mark," a story based on prison life in the penal colony of New Caledonia. Julien Josephson will make the adaptation. It is expected the picture will be a special. It may reach roadshow proportions.

Christie Gets Injunction on Infringement

A permanent injunction was entered this week in the Federal District Court at Boston in the action brought by Christie Film Company against Paramount Manufacturing Company, Maurice M. Green, Irving I. Green, and Don DeMatteo, all of Boston, for alleged infringement of the copyright to "Tillie's Punctured Romance," a new production which is being made by Christie Film Company for release through Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation.

The decree restrains the defendants from possessing copies of "Tillie's Punctured Romance," from making or causing copies to be made in whole or in part, from exhibiting, selling or offering for sale any copies of the picture or any imitation thereof, and from in any manner infringing the Christie copyright.

The decree contains a finding that the Christie Film Company is the owner of a valid copyright to "Tillie's Punctured Romance" and directs that prints seized by the Federal Marshal be turned over to the complainant.

Arthur Butler Graham, general counsel for the Christie Film Company, said that anyone violating the injunction would be punishable for contempt.

Plans Announced for Two New Georgia Theatres

Plans to build two moving picture theatres, construction of one to begin within 30 days in North Highlands, are announced by L. W. Hargett, owner of the Dixie Theatre, and Edwin Tolbert, manager. The first house to be erected will cost $35,000, and will be located in the Thirtieth Street section. After it is put into operation, it is planned by Mr. Hargett to construct a smaller theatre in the Jordan City section, he stated.

The North Highlands Theatre will have a seating capacity of 1,200, according to Mr. Hargett. The building will be of brick construction, 125 feet by 45 feet, with store space on each side of the entrance, where there will be an arcade. The theatre will have a balcony. The site of the new house has been selected, it was stated, but its exact location has not been revealed, except that it will be near Thirtieth Street.

The two new houses that are planned will form a circuit with the Dixie, pictures being shown at each of the three.

Carewe Launches Work on "Ramona" for U. A.

Edwin Carewe, who, with Inspiration Pictures, is filming "Ramona" for United Artists release, has begun actual work on the picture and has selected his staff for the production. Louis Jerome will be general business manager, Leander de Cordova will be chief assistant to Carewe, Richard Easton will be Cordova's chief assistant, Robert Kurle and Al Green will be cameramen, Ruby Skelly will be personal secretary and Albert Benham will have charge of the script. Supporting Dolores Del Rio in this production are, Carlos Amor, a first cousin of the star, Michael Visaroff, Russian character actor, and Jean, a Scotch collie.

Seitz to Direct Holt in Columbia's "Tigress"

George B. Seitz will handle the direction of "The Tigress," Columbia's first production featuring Jack Holt; Dorothy Revier will be the feminine lead. Production starts immediately. This will be Seitz's third production for Columbia for the season and will also mark Miss Revier's first appearance for Columbia this season.

Gets Jail Sentence for Transporting Fight Films

WILLIAM SIEVERS, formerly manager of the Grand Central Theatre in St. Louis, Missouri, was surprised by Federal Judge Faris last Tuesday, October 3rd, when he was sentenced to serve three months in Warren county jail, Warrenton, Missouri, and pay a fine of $1,000 upon pleading guilty to interstate transportation of the Tunney-Dempsey fight films. It was Sievers' second appearance before Judge Faris on the same charge as on August 19th he pleaded guilty to bringing Dempsey-Sharkey fight pictures to Missouri from Chicago and was fined $600.

Pictures of the Tunney-Dempsey contest are now being shown at three Orpheum circuit theatres in St. Louis and also in Kansas City and St. Joseph houses. Sievers had expected to again pay a fine.

Gaynor and Farrell in Fox' "Lady Cristilinda"

Production has started at the West Coast studios of Fox Films on "Lady Cristilinda," which will have Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell in the leads, with Frank Borsage at the directorial helm. Phil Klein wrote the screen adaptation from the play by Menckton Hoff, while the scenario was done by Marion Orth. Alberto Ragbliati, winner of the Italian beauty contest for men conducted by Fox Films, will also have a part in the production.

Will Float Issue for Five Paramount Theatres

Allied Owners Corp. Sells $9,500,000 Real Estate Bonds to Halsey and Stuart Group

IN an announcement from Allied Owners Corporation, a subsidiary of Realty Associates, it is revealed that Allied has sold an issue of $9,500,000 first mortgage real estate 6 per cent bonds to a group headed by Halsey, Stuart and Co., and including Graham, Parsons and Co. and Bonbright and Co. The proceeds of the issue will be utilized to balance part of the cost of five new theatres which the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation has leased.

The Allied Owners Corporation will construct the five theatres, four in Brooklyn and one in Birmingham, Alabama. The largest of the new group will be an eleven story building at De Kalb and Hudson Avenues, Brooklyn. The theatre will seat 4,000. A 3,900-seat house will go up at Flatbush and Tilden Avenues. At Jamaica Avenue and Merrick Boulevard, a 3,500-seat theatre will be built. At Saratoga and Pitkin Avenues, a theatre of three thousand or four thousand seats will be erected. The plans for this latter house have not been completed as yet by Paramount.

The Birmingham house is expected to be finished within 60 days; it will be a five story structure which will contain a 2,500-seat theatre.

These properties have been leased by Paramount at a net annual rental equal to about 10 per cent of the cost of the sites and buildings, such rental payments starting as soon as a structure has been completed—but in no event later than December 31st, 1928. The report indicates that the corporation will take care of all expenses in connection with the operation of the buildings. Their rentals, maintenance and operating expenses will constitute a direct obligation of Paramount.

At or prior to the maturity of the first mortgage bonds, the corporation has agreed to buy all properties subject to the mortgage and, as part of the purchase price, either to assume or to pay Allied Owners Corporation an amount sufficient to redeem such bonds.

Norma Shearer Married to Irving Thalberg

The marriage of Norma Shearer to Irving Thalberg, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive, was solemnized last Thursday afternoon, September 29th, at The Garden, the groom's home in Beverley Hills. Dr. Edgar F. Magnin performed the ceremony.

Only members of the family and intomate friends were in attendance. Miss Shearer's brother, Douglas, gave her away, while Louis B. Mayer was best man, and Sylvia Thalberg, a sister of Mr. Thalberg, stood as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Edith and Irene Mayer, daughters of Louis B. Mayer, Marion Davies and Bernice Ferns, a friend of the bride from Montreal. King Vidor and Jack Conway acted as ushers. Immediately after the wedding, the couple departed on their honeymoon.

Canadian Film Industry May Seek Tariff Relief

Practically every industry in Canada has its application before the Federal Board of Tariff and Taxation at Ottawa for relief from tariff or for increase in protection during the past year.

There is now an intimation that the moving picture distributors of Canada will jointly seek relief from the duty on imported films from both the United States and Great Britain, and also on the importation of undeveloped film stock and raw film.

Studio Policy Resulting in Greater Efficiency, Better Films, Says Lasky

TODAY the picture studios in Hollywood are making better productions, with an efficiency and economy unknown to the industry before the adoption by Paramount last winter of a new production policy, declared Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president of Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, on his return to the Paramount home office this week from his activities at the Paramount Coast plant launching new films.

Incompetents have been weeded out of the studios, stated Mr. Lasky. Fresh, eager personalities are coming to the fore, replacing dwindling stars and directors. "We have built a producing organization at the studio which is young, resourceful, new in its viewpoint and keen in its showmanship," said the Paramount executive.

Though the proposed salary cut was abandoned it had its effect in the creation of a new state of mind throughout the studios, thinks Mr. Lasky, who further stated: "Today the production of motion pictures rests upon as efficient and sensible a foundation as that of any other business you can name. I am proud of Hollywood. I am proud of its workers. Their loyalty to this business can never be questioned in the face of the progress we have made this summer towards sane, sensible operation."

Twin Cities' Strike Still On

No Settlement of Labor Diffculties Reached; Police Unable to Trace Bombers of Minneapolis Exchange

MORE than 500 musicians, stage hands, and motion picture operators of Minneapolis and St. Paul were still out on strike this week, with settlement of their differences no nearer solution than it was a week ago.

The week was marked by the bombing of the Paramount Famous Lasky film exchange in Minneapolis Friday evening. The bomb blew out every window in the plant, and broke many in the neighboring buildings. The explosion was tremendous, and could be heard all through the loop. Six men were arrested shortly afterwards at the headquarters of the striking unions, but the police released them later and admitted that they had had nothing to do with the bombing. It was thought, however, that the bomb may have been planted by strike sympathizers. Ben Blotcky, manager of the film exchange, said that he had had no labor troubles in his plant.

The strikers picketed the theatres all week. Some stench bombs were thrown in the theatres, causing some members of the audience to walk out, but the theatre owners promptly offered a reward of $500 for the arrest of the offenders, and this helped put a stop to the practice. The theatres were busy all week whipping recruit orchestras into shape, and although the music was hardly up to standard, it managed to get by. In fact the theatre representatives were loath to admit that the strike had affected their business at all, although with union men boycotting the theatres the strike must have kept down attendance some.

Fred Keightly, commissioner of conciliation of the United States department of labor, arrived in Minneapolis this week, and went into conference with Mayor Leach and representatives of the strikers. He said that no immediate settlement was in prospect. The Minneapolis Federation of churches, through its committee on social service, was endeavoring to bring about mediation between strikers and the theatre men. They took this action at the request of some of the strikers.

Shubert May Build New Boston Theatres

INDICATIONS in Boston are that the next de-luxe motion picture house may be built by the Shubert interests, and not by the Fox Films interests, as had generally been anticipated.

Lee Shubert's new holdings in Boston, in the heart of the theatre district, include not only the Plymouth Theatre on Stuart Street, a legitimate house, but eight parcels of property immediately adjoining. These parcels are leased, but the properties purchased are not structures which would be purchased for investment alone. It is doubtful if the income from all of them, with the possible exception of the theatre, more than pays expenses.

Since the Shubert interests acquired control of these Boston properties, a holding corporation has been organized headed by Judge J. Albert Brackett, general counsel for the motion picture exhibitors in New England. Associated with him are Guy E. Healy and Anna F. Driscoll of Malden, Mass. The holding corporation is called the "129 Stuart Street, Inc." of Boston, with 2.000 shares of no par value.

With the Shubert legitimate houses in Boston already so large that oftimes more than one of them are dark, it is thought improbable that the Shuberts would continue to acquire property for additional play houses.

"Henry and Polly" Head Pathe's List for Oct. 16th

"The Second Honeymoon," the initial release of the new Pathe comedy series patterned after the series made famous by Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Drew, is the lead-off for Pathe's program of ten subjects for the week of October 16th. Other releases scheduled for the week are: "Smith's Cook," "The Lateral Pass," third release of the "Football Sense" series of Grantland Rice, who is also represented by a Sportlight, "Up the Ladder;" "Doomed to the Arrows," eighth chapter of "The Hawk of the Hills," "Lindy's Cat," an Aesop film fable, Topics of the Day No. 42, Pathe Review No. 42, and Pathe News, Issues 86 and 87.

The leads of "The Second Honeymoon" are Taylor Holmes and Leah Baird. The roles in "Smith's Cook" are enacted by Mary Ann Jackson, Ruth Hiatt and Raymond McKee. Pathe Review No. 42 presents: "Social Notes from Zululand," "The Snake," "The Flower Isle of the Pacific" and "The Sea of the Silver Kings."

Al St. John Signs New Contract With Educational

Al St. John, acrobatic funster whose screen career began with Buster Keaton, Fatty Arbuckle and Mabel Normand, has again been engaged by Educational to play the featured role in a series of two-reel comedies. His first vehicle under the new contract will be an automobile comedy, to be directed by Stephen Roberts. Several well-known direct track drivers have been signed for the race sequences. Estelle Bradley will be St. John's leading lady, while Glenn Cavender and Phil Dunham will have supporting roles. St. John of late has been supplying comedy in feature productions.

Balaban and Katz Acquire Two Chicago Theatres

Balaban and Katz have taken over active control of the Senate and Harding theatres, the two leading Lubliner and Trinz houses in Chicago, which are to be made part of a new presentation circuit, which includes the Norshore. The attractions will alternate among these three houses.

Disputes Between Mgrs. and Operators Ended

Final agreements on the new season's wage scale were reached last week following a conference between Atlanta theatre managers and representatives of the Motion Picture Machine Operators. Operators in houses of the first classification were granted a $10 a week increase over last season's prevailing prices, and two operators were stipulated for each booth. In turn, operators conceded to extend their working hours from 11.00 to 11.30 P. M. An increase of $5 was granted to operators of houses belonging to the second classification. Operators in suburban theatres were granted a $2.50 increase on a weekly basis for the season of 1927-28 with a promise of an additional increase of a like amount for next season. Only one operator is required in each of the suburban houses.

An agreement between Jacksonville local No. 511 of the machine operators and Willard C. Patterson of the Universal Chain Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., smoothed out Jacksonville's labor difficulties. Operators will continue during the 1927-28 season at the same scale which prevailed last season, with a guarantee of $40 per week for next season. The contract covers a period of two years from September 5th, 1927.

The labor disputes in Orlando, Florida, were also definitely settled, agreements being reached by means of which the machine operators and stage hands employed in Orlando theatres will receive a slight increase in wages.

Ten Features From Paramount During October

Ten feature productions, including three of the company's major pictures, will come from the Paramount exchanges during the month of October. The three films of a "special" nature are "The Rough Riders," "The Way of All Flesh" and "Underworld," which will be issued on October 1st, October 1st and October 29th respectively.

The other productions and their release dates are as follows: "Figures Don't Lie," October 8th; "Shootin' Irons," October 8th; "Shanghai Bound," October 15th; "A Gentleman of Paris," October 15th; "Jesse James," October 22nd; "Now We're in the Air," October 22nd, and "The Woman on Trial," October 29th.

Manager Invites McNamee to Appear at Theatre

Thomas Carroll, manager of the state theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, has made an offer to Graham McNamee, ace radio announcer, to appear at his theatre for any week he is not engaged in broadcasting. Carroll thinks that as a broadcaster, McNamee is a wonderful actor.

"The Traveling Salesman" Dix' Next for Paramount

Richard Dix' next picture for Paramount, after "The Gay Defender," will be "The Traveling Salesman," an adaptation of the play by James Forbes. The director or supporting cast has not been announced.

Jersey Will Protest to Commission

BECAUSE it has no representative as a state on the arbitration board for this zone, the M.P.T.O. of New Jersey will have no delegate at the Trade Practice Conference. The organization will appeal to the Federal Trade Commission for the right to be represented by counsel at the Conference.

This was decided upon at a meeting held this week, with the final course of action to be determined upon at another meeting prior to the trade parley.

Camera Work Finished on Five New F. N. Pictures

Photography has been completed on five of First National's new pictures. Two films have gone into work and three more are scheduled to get under way before the end of the month. The cutting room is again working at full force.

Alexander Korda finished "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," and the cutters now have it in hand. John Dillon completed "Man Crazy," a new Dorothy Mackaill-Jack Mulhall vehicle.

"No Place to Go," Mervyn LeRoy's initial picture, which co-features Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, is well along in the titling and editing. "Home Made," starring Johnny Hines, has been finished, and the star and his producer, C. C. Burr, are now in New York conferring on a new vehicle for the comedian. Ken Maynard's "Gun Gospel" is ready to emerge from the cutting room. Filming has just started on "Sailors' Wives" and "Down Went McGinty."

Paramount's Four New Comedies of Varied Types

The four Christie comedies which Paramount has scheduled for October are a varied group, the atmosphere of each two-reeler being entirely different from its fellows.

"Hot Papa," the first featuring Jack Duffy, is a tale of love and finance in a small town, while "Oh Mummy," starring Jimmy Adams, concerns Egyptian antiques, pullmans and policemen. Bobby Vernon's "Wedding Wows," tells of the woes of mixed brides and bridegrooms and the fourth and last of the October comedies entitled "Seared Pink" and starring Anne Cornwall has an atmosphere Southern and Colonial with modern jazz an enlivening motif.

"Isle of Forgotten Women" a Columbia Sept. Release

"The Isle of Forgotten Women," starring Conway Tearle with Dorothy Sebastian in the chief feminine role, has been selected as the third Columbia Picture release for September. The other two are "By Whose Hand?" and "Sally in Our Alley."

$135,640,162 Spent for 1926 Theatre Building

Labor Bureau Statistics Show Expenditures for Amusement Places Exceeded 1925 Figures

EXPENDITURES for theatre construction throughout the country during 1926 exceeded by more than $19,000,000 the amount spent during the previous year, according to figures recently compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics in Washington.

While no segregation of motion picture theatre construction is made by the Bureau, it is known that theatres are in the majority among the construction projects coming under the head of "places of amusement." The total number of places of amusement for which building permits were issued in 294 cities in 1926 was 967, to be erected at an estimated cost of $135,640,162. This compares with $116,283,961 expended for construction of 1,047 places during the previous year. Thus with a fewer number of projects in 1926 than 1925, more money was spent for construction of this type of building, an indication of the fact that theatres are being built on a more elaborate scale as to size and design.

New York City, of course, led the country in theatre building, the bureau's figures showing construction last year of 34 places of amusement in the Bronx, costing $5,579,250; 51 in Brooklyn, costing $21,861,000; 31 in Manhattan, costing $9,637,500; 30 in Queens, costing $3,868,750; and 15 in Richmond, costing $304,300; a total of 161 with an aggregate cost of $41,250,800, comparing with the 1925 figures of 166 costing $33,044,267.

Outstanding items in the reports are: Chicago, 32 places of amusement costing $13,960,500; Philadelphia, 18 costing $5,110,000; Los Angeles, 45 costing $4,272,845; St. Louis, 41 costing $707,850; Miami, 46 costing $866,338; Buffalo, 10 costing $1,112,000; Cincinnati, 4 costing $2,275,000; Cleveland, 15 costing $1,520,500; Des Moines, 5 costing $1,217,765; Detroit, 15 costing $3,199,166; Jacksonville, 6 costing $1,732,000; Milwaukee, 10 costing $1,816,486; New Haven, 11 costing $2,744,000; Oakland, 10 costing $1,023,374; Omaha, 6 costing $1,671,000; Pittsburgh, 8 costing $2,114,900; Portland, Ore., 10 costing, $1,002,000; Providence, 6 costing $2,930,600; Rochester, 7 costing $1,105,000; Seattle, 14 costing $4,130,500; Sioux City, Ia., 5 costing $1,882,200; South Bend, Ind., 7 costing $1,200,000; Washington, 3 costing $1,097,000; Yonkers, 6 costing $1,379,000. All told, 27 cities spent more than $1,000,000 each on new amusement construction last year, and 13 spent between $500,000 and $1,000,000 each.

First Nat'l Wins Victory in "Miracle" Suit

FIRST National Pictures and Al Woods were granted a temporary injunction restraining J. Robert Rubin, counsel for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, and Joseph Menchen from producing "The Miracle" and from interfering with First National's production of the picture. Justice Frankenthaler of the New York Supreme Court handed down the decision.

Mr. Menchen and Mr. Rubin were not favorable towards First National's suggestion to agree to the appointment of a referee. So the motion for injunction before Justice Frankenthaler was pressed. The injunction goes into effect at once and the case will go on the regular court calendar where it will probably not come up for about five months.

The dispute over the rights to the Max Reinhardt's drama without words began last winter.

Four F B O Features and Four Shorts for November

During November F B O will distribute four new features and four short subjects. "Judgment of the Hills," with Frankie Darro and Virginia Valli, directed by Leo Meehan, will be released on November 6th. "Hook and Ladder No. 9," in which F. Harmon Weight directed Cornelius Keefe, Dione Ellis and Edward Hearne, will be the feature issue for November 13th. On November 20th, "The Bandit's Son," starring Bob Steele and directed by Wallace Fox, will be ready for exhibitors. "The Harvester," produced by Leo Meehan with Natalie Kingston and Orville Caldwell in the leads, will be shown on November 23rd.

The short subject releases will be "Mickey's Eleven," starring Mickey Yule, to be issued on November 7th, and "Fleshy Devils," a Fat Men comedy, to be ready for November 14. Two "Newslaffs," produced by Bill Nolan, will be issued on November 13th and 27th respectively.

Eveland Film Corp. to Invade States' Right Market

The Eveland Film Corporation has a three reel production, produced abroad and entitled "The Ilim of Rimne" (Ilim of Rimne), now ready for the state right market; all territories are available except New York. The film was made in Poland with the cooperation of students of a Yeshiva college there.

The Eveland Film Corporation also has about 60 reels of scenics produced in Poland.

Evelyn Brent and Dorothy Sebastian With Tiffany

Evelyn Brent and Dorothy Sebastian are working at the studios of Tiffany Productions, Inc. The former will be seen in [illegible] of the principal roles in "Women's Wares," which has just been completed by Tiffany. Miss Sebastian, who was loaned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will play one of the leading roles in "The Ghost Ship," suggested by the story by Jack London, "White and Yellow."

AMPA "Roundup" Feb. 4th

Annual Naked Truth Affair at Astor to Have Wild West Flavor—Booking Reservations

THE spirit of the Wide Open Spaces, featured by all the wild west cowboy atmosphere that can be crowded into the Grand Ball Room of the Hotel Astor, New York City, will pervade the annual Naked Truth affair of the AMPA for 1928, to take place on the evening, and night, of February 4th, according to an announcement issued by the organization following a special meeting of the Board of Governors this week.

The next TNT dinner and frolic, therefore, will be advertised, presented and celebrated as The Naked Truth Roundup of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

The first step in carrying out the Wild West keynote was taken when the committee in charge issued invitations to every cowboy star of the screen, and the report is, that, to date, acceptances have been received from almost ninety per cent of the celebrities who portray the ultimate in the arts of hard ridin' and quick shootin' for the delight and excitement of the screen fans.

Accompanying the cowboy stars will be their leading women, if all goes according to the schedule as planned by the AMPA committee in charge.

Though the Naked Truth Roundup is four months away, Bruce Gallup and his fellow members of assisting committees have the program sketched out in complete form; plans are progressing rapidly, and the announcement is made that TNT history shows that reservations, no matter how ample, are never equal to the demand, and, therefore, the recommendation is made that all who wish to be among those present at the Roundup make their reservations early. Reservations may be obtained by addressing Mr. Bruce Gallup at United Artists, 729 Seventh Ave.

To Build in Twin Cities

Fox Plans Theatres of 5000 Seats Each to Enter First Run Competition With F & R-Publix Houses

FOX will invade Minneapolis and St. Paul with new theatres, one in each city, and each of a seating capacity of about 5,000, to be built along modern lines and operate on a de luxe basis with Fox pictures as the backbone of the programs. The move will provide representations in the Twin Cities for this company's product, and will introduce a competition that was practically eliminated when the F & R-Publix deal was recently concluded.

It is said that a representative of Fox is now considering sites for the theatres which the company proposes to build, in accordance with a decision which has been under advisement for some time, owing to dissatisfaction over the lack of representation for the company's product in both Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The increasing first-run prominence which will accrue to Paramount through the F & R-Publix deal brought to a decision the plan to build which for a long time has been under consideration by Fox.

The first-run situation has been unsatisfactory for some time so far as the Fox product is concerned, though representation was obtained through arrangements made by James R. Grainger shortly after he became general sales manager of the company. Previously Fox was virtually without any first-run outlet in either Minneapolis and St. Paul. Then, about two years ago, a first-run was obtained in Minneapolis through a deal made by Grainger, the result of which put Fox pictures into the Aster, a small first-run. This did not prove adequate, however, and this year the Fox product was sold 100 per cent to the Pantages in Minneapolis. But no representation has yet been obtained in St. Paul.

While there are several first-run theatres in the Twin Cities, and a new house, the New Minneapolis, is now under construction by the F & R-Publix interests, Fox does not believe that these towns are overseated with Class A houses.

"U" May Publish Story With Film's Release

UNIVERSAL is considering an entry into the publishing field in connection with the Arthur Somera Roche serial story "Fallen Angels," which recently appeared in the Red Book Magazine, and which is to be made into a Universal picture during the coming season. The Laemmle organization is considering the acquisition of book publishing rights to the story, so as to launch a special and elaborately gotten out edition of the book simultaneously with the picture's release.

Edward Montagne, scenario editor for Universal, who arrived in New York from Los Angeles several days ago, would not go into details concerning the "Fallen Angels" book, but admitted that the plan is under discussion.

Lloyd Chooses "Speedy" as Title for New Film

"Speedy," a title suggested by Sidney R. Kent, general manager of Paramount, will adorn the frontispiece of Harold Lloyd's newest picture for Paramount. Mr. Kent offered his suggestion to Lloyd several weeks ago, while the comedian was confined to his bed suffering from a severe cold. Mr. Kent's title was chosen out of nearly 10,000 submitted to Lloyd from all parts of the country.

18 Short Subjects for Paramount in October

Paramount will issue 18 subjects during October—ten short features and the regular bi-weekly issues of the Paramount News.

"Hot Papa," a Christie comedy starring Jack Duffy, heads the list; its release date being October 1st; accompanying it will be "Koko the Kop," an Inkwell Imps cartoon. Following on October 8th will be "Oh, Mummy," a Christie comedy featuring Jimmy Adams, and "Tired Wheels," a cartoon. "Fantasy," a Mintz two-reeler, and "Koko Explores," another Inkwell Imps number, will be released on October 15th. On October 22nd will come "Wedding Wows," a Christie comedy with Bobby Vernon, and "Topsy Turvy," of the Krazy Kat series. The final October releases will be "Scared Pink," a Christie featuring Jack Duffy, to be issued on the 29th along with "Koko Chops Suey," another of the Inkwell Imps cartoons.

Charley Chase Comedy on Pathe List for Oct. 9th

A Hal Roach comedy starring Charley Chase and entitled "Now I'll Tell One," is the principal comedy offering on the Pathe short feature program for the week of October 9th. Also included in the group for this week are "All Bull and a Yard Wide," an Aesop Film Fable, "Demons of the Darkness," seventh chapter of "The Hawk of the Hills," Topics of the Day and Pathe Review No. 41, and issues Nos. 84 and 85 of the Pathe News. In the Chase comedy are featured Edna Marian, Lincoln Plummer and Stan Laurel. Chase's brother, James Parrot, directed. The weekly issue of the Review presents: "Sea Cats," "Zoo Neckers" and "The Father of Icebergs."

Emerson and Loos Will Return Within a Year

Anita Loos, author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," and her husband, John Emerson, arrived in New York last week from Los Angeles. Information imparted by them included the announcement that they will retire from all active work within a year, by which time a new Loos novel, "Gentlemen Marry Brunettes," will have been completed. They are going on a three months' trip throughout Europe and will supervise the production "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" in all those Continental cities where it is playing. They expect to return to the United States and Palm Beach some time before Christmas to edit and title Paramount's version of the Loos play which they helped launch into production at the Paramount studio.

Von Stroheim Will Cut "The Wedding March"

Eric Von Stroheim will do the final cutting on "The Wedding March," the Paramount special which Josef Von Sternberg has cut to 17 reels. Von Stroheim, it is understood, will attempt to reduce the footage to nine reels. The Paramount special is set for release in November.

The Kinegraphone, the latest machine to enter the field of talking motion pictures, and a product of the General Electric Company of Schenectady, N. Y., was given its first public demonstration last week at the State Theatre in Schenectady, N. Y. It is being exceptionally well received.

JESSE L. LASKY, vice-president of Paramount, and Walter Wanger, general production manager of the company, arrived in New York last week from California to confer with home office officials on the new Paramount product.

A FOUR-WEEK trip that took him through the principal exchange centers of the United States has just been completed by Irving Briskin, Sterling Pictures secretary.

EDGAR B. HATRICK, vice-president and general manager of William Randolph Hearst's motion picture companies, returned Friday, September 30th, from a visit of six weeks to the West Coast studios.

Katterjohn Finishing His Association With Param't

Monte Katterjohn, is completing a two year association with Paramount Famous Lasky's Department of production. As home office associate to the general manager, he participated in reorganizing the production personnel.

Mr. Katterjohn leaves this month for a six weeks' vacation in South America, and will announce new connections upon his return.

Gotham Has Completed One-Quarter of Schedule

With the completion of "Blondes By Choice," last week, Gotham Productions completed one quarter of its program for the current season. This is exclusive of the two specials starring Mrs. Wallace Reid, the second of which will be started at the termination of the actress' personal tour of first run theatres.

Twelve pictures are scheduled for the season, and of this group three have been finished and an additional one—"The Cheer Leader"—will get under way within a fortnight. "The Fruit of Divorce," to star Percy Marmont, will get under way shortly afterwards.

Paul C. Bryan Managing Fox Atlanta Branch

The vacant post of manager of the Atlanta exchange of Fox Films, emptied because of the untimely death of George R. Allison, has been filled by the appointment of Paul C. Bryan, according to an announcement from L. B. Remy, Southern Division manager for Fox Film Corporation.

Mr. Bryan first came to Atlanta from his home in Fitzgerald, Georgia, where he had been connected with the Associated Press. As he was in Canada at the outbreak of the war he joined the British army, and during his stay in France won five merits of distinction.

Hector Turnbull Joins Pathe Studio Forces

HECTOR TURNBULL, affiliated with Paramount as a writer and producer since the earliest Lasky and De Mille days, has terminated his connection with Paramount Famous Lasky to become associate producer at the Cecil B De Mille studio.

Up to the time of Mr. Turnbull's connection with B. P. Schulberg as a producer, Turnbull was in charge of all production at the Famous Players Lasky studio on the West Coast.

Key City Reports

New York City

EXTREMELY hot weather and Jewish holidays cut the figures of a week which may be considered an average one for Broadway houses. Last Saturday and Sunday were unusually torrid, the thermometer reaching 87 degrees, with the result that there was a general exodus to nearby beach resorts. Considering these handicaps, all box offices held up pretty well.

The Roxy with "The Loves of Carmen," another good box office picture, again sent the figures for that house well over the hundred thousand mark. The picture is being held over this week. Fox' new special, "Sunrise," which opened a week ago last Friday at the Times Square theatre with a diversity of opinion regarding its box office success, turned in a strong week. The Mussolini Movietone film is bringing in Italian trade to help along.

At the Capitol, "The Big Parade" brought such a satisfactory trade at popular prices that the picture is being held a third week, which will be right on the heels of a new presentation policy that will go into effect. The Capitol is buying plenty of newspaper space on this.

Pola Negri's picture, "The Woman on Trial," kept things going in good shape at the Paramount. At other Publix houses, "Wings" and "Underworld" both did well, the former still showing very strong. The latter goes out of the Rivoli at the close of this week. The Strand also felt the general unsatisfactory conditions but did a fair business with "Rose of the Golden West."

"Old San Francisco" will end its fairly long run at Warners theatre, to be followed by "The Jazz Singer," featuring Al Jolson. The "Patent Leather Kid" continues to do well at the Globe while "The King of Kings," "Les Miserables" and "The Student Prince," all big specials, are going along at a very fair rate. United Artists "Magic Flame" is also doing what may be termed satisfactory business at the Rialto.

The 600 seaters, the Embassy and Cameo, both got by with "The Garden of Allah" and "Potemkin," respectively. Hugo Riesenfeld and "Out All Night" made it a very good week at the Colony.

Chicago

CHICAGO motion picture theatre patrons appeared to have gotten back to their habit of attending the movies regularly and business in most theatres throughout the Chicago district, was normal last week.

At the Chicago the new stage band policy stimulated attendance and a big week was reported with "After Midnight" as the screen feature, Miss America in person, big stage show, "Orange Blossoms" and a Spitalny musical feature "Tomorrow." "Firemen, Save My Child" proved a laughing success at the Roosevelt and drew in good crowds. "Swim, Girl, Swim" on the screen and a good Paul Ash show, "Jazz Minstrels of 1928," kept business up to average at the Oriental. McVickers, which carried over "The Way of All Flesh" continued to do fair business. The Orpheum with "One Round Hogan" and Vitaphone hit the public's fancy and good business was the result. At the Monroe "What Price Glory" and Movietone continued to prove strong.

The Uptown had a good week with the Duncan Sisters in person and "Topsy & Eva" and Frankie Masters and his band and other acts on the stage. "Framed" was the feature at the Sheridan with Verne Buck and his band on the stage and business was normal. The Granada offered "The Fighting Eagle" as its screen attraction and business held up nicely.

At the Capitol, "Tell It To Sweeney" Vitaphone, Del Delbridge and his stage band, combined to bring in an average box office return. The same was true at the Avalon, where "When a Man Loves," Vitaphone and Buddy Fisher's band constituted the program. At the Tivoli, "Camille" and popular Benny Kreuger's stage band did a big business.

St. Louis

WITH the St. Louis metropolitan area working as it has never labored before to rescue its dead and wounded from the ruins of the industrial plants and homes laid waste by the fearful tornado of September 29, the theatre receipts of the week ending on September 30 would not be a fair indication of the drawing power of the motion pictures featured. Although few of the theatres in the city were damaged by the storm, many of them have been hit hard by the destruction in their immediate vicinity.

At the Missouri Theatre the feature picture of the week was "Chang" and it did nice business up to the day of the big storm.

Down at the Ambassador "American Beauty" was on the screen but Ed Lowry's stage show "Banjomania" was the big drawing power. And it had some box office pull. Ed. has arrived big during his four weeks' "try-out." Skouras Brothers have retained him for a year.

The Loew's State Theatre had "After Midnight" on the screen and it was doing nicely up to Thursday's tragedy.

The St. Louis Theatre's screen attraction was "Love's of Carmen" while the West End Lyric showed "The Brute" and the Capitol had a double feature program, "Metropolis" and "Alias the Lone Wolf."

Ottawa

ALL exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, registered satisfaction with the box office results when the week of September 26 had become history. The local stock company has resumed but this has made little difference to the straight picture patronage.

"Beau Geste" for second run at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, again proved the hit of the week, with heavy business throughout the day every day. This picture looks good for a big third run locally.

Another hit was the Tunney-Dempsey fight picture at the Centre Theatre where it was shown seven times daily by Manager Don Stapleton, but this was not enough to satisfy so he held it over for the week of October 3. "The Joy Girl" was the fiction feature of the Centre programme. The talk was about the fight film.

The neatest picture in some time at B. F. Keith's Theatre was "Ten Modern Commandments." Everybody said they liked it and they told others besides Manager J. M. Franklin, judging by increasing business.

The most popular picture in months at the Imperial was "Swim, Girl, Swim," with Bebe Daniels, and this theatre was really a very busy place—in direct contrast to some mid-summer weeks.

Over in Hull, Quebec, the re-opened Laurier Theatre gained favor with the crowd by presenting "Resurrection," an attraction that seemed to please. At the Eden Theatre there was fair trade with "Her Father Said No."

Minneapolis

STAGE hands, operators and musicians were all on strike this week, and the theatres had to shift as best they could, but despite this fact, many of them reported business was quite up to normal.

The State, for example, enjoyed a very good business with "Smile, Brother, Smile." Dayton's semi-annual style revue was an added attraction, and helped business considerably. "The Rough Riders" at the Strand had a good week, and was held over for a second one. "Beau Geste," running for a second week at the Garrick, showed to fair audiences, while "Moulders of Men" at the Lyric made a very pleasing showing. Pantages found that "Loves of Carmen" was an excellent drawing card, and gave it the advantage of some good exploitation. The Hennepin - Orpheum played "The Gingham Girl" as its film attraction, and the Seventh Street theatre "The Great Mail Robbery." The Lagoon, Rialto, Lyndale and Loring—neighborhood houses—found business quite up to expectations with such pictures as "Camille," "The Stolen Bride," "Twelve Miles Out" and "Special Delivery."

The radio show, held at the new municipal auditorium, drew thousands of persons, and undoubtedly drew many away from the theatres.

New Orleans

THE past week was a banner one for the moving picture theatres in New Orleans, as it has been for several weeks straight. Not only did the best picture do the best business but the mediocre as well.

"Don Juan," coupled with a Publix stage show drew theatre-goers to the New Saenger in large numbers. The stage show was not up to the usual standard and the big business done by this huge Canal street playhouse can be attributed to this Warner Brothers production. Members of the fair sex predominated.

Right on the heels of the New Saenger for first honors was Loew's State, with "Smile, Brother, Smile," presented in conjunction with five excellent vaudeville acts. Manager Rodney D. Toups and his press agent were on the job as usual and the picture got quite a bit of exploitation.

At the Palace Theatre "Seventh Heaven," was held over another week. This Fox production has been the talk of the town. "Cradle Snatchers" was the feature at the Liberty Theatre and this house did its usual good business. Although "The Blood Ship" had its local premiere at the New Saenger Theatre the week previous, crowds flocked to the Trianon Theatre to see it.

"Marriage," at the Orpheum Theatre, coupled with the Ziegfeld Follies Shadowgraph and other Orpheum Circuit acts, drew capacity audiences to the University Place theatre all week. The Crescent Theatre offered "The Black Diamond Express," but it was the musical comedy show which drew.

"Convoy" is still drawing large crowds at the Lyceum, despite the fact that it had its local premiere at Loew's State.

Salt Lake City

THE downtown theatre business in this city has averaged fairly good last week. Weather conditions have been favorable, having been somewhat unsettled and slightly cooler.

"Topsy and Eva" did a fairly good business at the Paramount Empress. A stage offering by the Elliott Sisters was also presented here.

"The Fighting Eagle" at the Gem, was a strong drawing card and capacity houses were the rule during the week. This production was used as a special offering during the Fall opening of the Gem.

In addition to the regular vaudeville bill at the Pantages of this city, the feature picture "The Blood Ship" was the week's offering and, according to the report of the management, it was very well received as a whole.

"Paid to Love" topped the vaudeville bill now being shown at the Victory Theatre and since the inauguration of this new policy they are unable to take care of the crowds, it is announced.

Lon Chaney in "The Unknown" did a big business at the Rialto,, a second run house, according to report.

The feature picture at the American Theatre last week was Syd Chaplin in "The Missing Link" which did well but scarcely came up to expectations as far as box office receipts were concerned.

Albany, Schenectady & Troy

"BEAU GESTE," playing for the week at the Mark Strand, in Albany, easily carried off first honors from the standpoint of drawing power. In fact this picture ran far better than "The Way of All Flesh," and came within an ace of establishing a new attendance record for the year. At the Mark Ritz, "The Woman on Trial" played to but fair business and did not pull them in as was anticipated. At the Leland theatre, "The Unknown" proved an excellent business getter. One of the best shows of the week, "Lonesome Ladies" did very well at the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, although the overflow from the neighboring Mark Strand undoubtedly helped out. At the Grand, "Slightly Used" appeared to please.

For some unknown reason, "The Way of All Flesh" flopped badly at the Troy theatre, although this same picture ran to exceptionally good business only two weeks ago in Albany. It was noticeable, however, that the audience at the Troy theatre, last week, was made up mainly of persons not frequently seen at motion picture theatres and who appreciated the fine acting of Emil Jannings. At the Lincoln, in Troy, "Mockery" did only fair business. At the State theatre, in Schenectady, "The Stolen Bride" coupled with the Kinegraphone, the first public demonstration made by the General Electric Company, played to exceptionally good business. There is one thing that must be said of Schenectady at the present time, and that is that burlesque is scoring heavily and no doubt costing the motion picture theatres considerable business.

Milwaukee

RAIN, one solid week of it, a steady down-pour, was what theatre managers in Milwaukee had to compete with this last week. Some theatres found business only fair, and at others it was considered just about average.

Patronage was so good at the Garden, where "Old San Francisco" and the Vitaphone shared honors, that the picture is being held over for a second week. The Alhambra finishes its second week of "Beau Geste" and reports the second week's business upheld the first week's record. The Wisconsin played to fairly good houses showing "The Road to Romance." Johnny Hines brought in fairly good business at the Strand in "White Pants Willie." "For the Love of Mike" featured at the Merrill was also a fair drawing card. "The Bush Leaguer" on the Orpheum bill was very well received.

Business was a shade better in the theatres in the outlying sections this week than it was down town. The Oriental and the Uptown theatres both did very well with "Hula." Good business was reported at the Milwaukee where "The Stolen Bride" was featured. The Venetian drew good crowds with the "Lone Eagle." "Barbed Wire" at the Tower and Modjeska was fairly well received.

Cleveland

A WEEK of warm weather put rather a crimp in the local theatre business, although there were several bright spots along film row. The critics and the ledgers did not quite agree. Critics were loud in praise of "Stark Love" and "Moana of the South Seas," shown on the same program at the Cameo, and of "Bill," a French-made picture, coupled with "Nanook of the North," on the program at the Little Theatre. The public voted for "The Road to Romance" at the Allen, however, and for "Camille," in its second week at the Stillman. "The Road to Romance" beat the average attendance at the Allen. "American Beauty," played to big houses at Keith's Palace, where Mildred Harris Chaplin was appearing in a sketch. "Topsy and Eva" got its just deserts at the State where it got by with just a fair average. "Madame Pompadour" did well at Keith's East 105th St.. "The Lone Eagle," was a success at Reade's Hippodrome, where it played to good houses both matinee and evenings. The Park did just moderately well with a repeat engagement of "Hula." And the Circle had fair business with a return of "Moon of Israel," which had previously played two weeks at the Cameo.

Picture theatres had real competition from the legitimate theatres last week.

San Francisco

"BEN HUR," opened at the California Theatre, to such a large crowd that all could not be let in the first night. The crowds continued to fill the house during the week. "Out All Night," shown at the Granada Theatre, together with Fanchon & Marco specialty act, also proved very popular.

"Jade Ideas," proved fairly popular at the Warfield Theatre, the presentation act "Jade Ideas," greatly helping. "The Cat and The Canary," shown the second week at the St. Francis Theatre, continued to bring crowds to that house, and it will be held over.

"Cheating Cheaters," at the Imperial Theatre, proved popular. While that house was not filled, it was well represented with people. "Dance Magic" was also popular at the Golden Gate Theatre, which together with the vaudeville acts crowded that house. "What Price Glory," because of its exceptional popularity at the Pantages Theatre, will be held over a second week. This is the first time a picture has been held over there for six months.

The Union Square Theatre filled that house with the pictures, "California or Bust" and "The She Beast."

In the residential houses, good reports for the past week were made by those showing the first class second runs. In the Wigwam Theatre, crowds were there to see "White Pants Willie" and "You Never Can Tell," a musical comedy. "Rough House Rosie," drew well at the Coliseum, as did "Paradise" and "Dixie Flyer" at the Casino.

Baltimore

BUSINESS started off very well in Baltimore for the week beginning Monday, September 26, but during the latter part the city was struck by a heat wave which sent the thermometer up and a good many people were kept away from the movie houses, except those cooled by refrigerating plants. Another event which may have had some influence on the patronage at movie was the holding of "The Fair of the Iron Horse," at Halethorpe, near Baltimore, by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad company.

The biggest business for the week was done naturally at the new Stanley theatre just opened, with "The Stolen Bride." Waring's Pennsylvanians and Carlos and Valeria. But Loew's Century ran it a close second with "Hula" and Al Moore and his orchestra and Century dancing girls. Considering the hot wave, the business done at Keith's Hippodrome with "The Romantic Age" and five acts of vaudeville, was very good while at Whitehurst's Garden "The Lone Eagle," with five acts of vaudeville, proved a fair drawing card. The second week of "When a Man Loves" was a good one at Warner's Metropolitan, warranting it being held for a third week, while "The Magic Flame" came off with only fair business at Loew's Valencia during the second week. "The Chinese Parrot" at the New Theatre with a stage attraction did a less than fair business. "Lost at the Front" went over about fair at the Rivoli, with Whitey Kaufman and his orchestra also on the bill. The Maryland Theatre, the Keith-Albee house here, pulled fairly good crowds throughout the week with "Heaven on Earth."

Los Angeles

PANTAGES for the second week "packed them in" with "What Price Glory." This picture is run in conjunction with vaudeville as is "The Satin Woman" at the Forum, which is pleasing a satisfactory audience at each show.

An increase of attendance at Grauman's Chinese showing "King of Kings" and at Carthay Circle screening "Seventh Heaven," follows the announcement that both these popular picture will close soon.

The Uptown theatre last week did excellent business. "The Bush Leaguer" shared honors for popularity with Gene Morgan and his band on the stage.

At the Metropolitan "The Woman on Trial" played to just average business.

"Rose of the Golden West" proved a box office winner at Loew's State. A share of the success of this picture probably was due to attractive advertising about the town.

The Criterion had an average good week with "Camille" which is now entering on its third week run.

Very good business was done at the Million Dollar where "Ben Hur" played for the second week.

Atlanta

ATLANTA theatres' box-offices on the whole suffered a slump last week with the return of warm weather.

John Barrymore and Dolores Costello held the banner box-office in "When a Man Loves" at the Metropolitan. Manager John Crovo reports a record week over the past seven months' business. "Out All Night" drew an average crowd to the Capitol. Loew's Grand boasts of a good week with "After Midnight." Keith's Georgia played "Alias the Lone Wolf" to a very good business, although not meeting expectations.

"The Rough Riders" drew good reviews from local critics and patrons seeing it, but failed to be the box-office bet to which it was entitled. The Rialto, also, suffered with "Sally in Our Alley," playing the first part of the week and "Arizona Nights," the latter. Both pictures, however, were well received by patrons seeing them. The Tudor had a mediocre week showing "The Ice Flood" the first three days and "Tumbleweeds," the last three. Business at the Tudor stands fairly steady each week.

Boston

A CONSIDERABLE falling off at the theatres was a noticeable feature of the week, especially during the Jewish holiday season at the beginning of the week. Towards the close of the week conditions commenced to assume a normal attitude again.

Paul Whiteman in person, leading his orchestra at the Metropolitan, and the film feature, "One Woman to Another" filled the Metropolitan at all shows for one of the best weeks of the season but this was about the only theatre reporting even an average business.

"Chang" was shown simultaneously at four theatres. Towards the end of the week receipts showed marked improvement at these houses. It is becoming more and more common for several of Boston's down town houses to show one film simultaneously although the showing has always brought with it a shade of doubt as to the wisdom of the move.

The "Road to Romance" at Loew's State was deserving of a better week than it received because Boston likes that sort of comedy drama.

Although "The Big Parade" has played and played Boston, it continues to be as great an attraction as ever and at popular prices at Loew's Orpheum this week it received fully as much favorable attention as ever.

"When a Man Loves" was featured at the Twin Houses, Modern and Beacon, but it was well along in the week before the usual Barrymore crowds turned out.

"We're All Gamblers" played to average houses towards the last of the week at the Fenway but the early week business was nothing to brag about. "The Blood Ship" fared a little better at the Keith-Albee Boston Theatre. "The Way of All Flesh" continued to be a drawing card at the Exeter Theatre with "Stranded" as the other feature. "Beau Geste" at the Lancaster fared well in comparison with the other theatres although the program was pretty long with the added feature, "Soft Cushions," being given.

Tampa

THE Tampa rolled up a nice record last week. The first half had "Camille" and it proved an excellent draw. The good business continued the last half also, but the entire credit for the draw cannot be given to the feature, "The Blood Ship." Thursday was a special day featuring a film of Tampa's 116th Field Artillery.

The opening week of the Victory under the new policy of super features a full week at popular prices was satisfactory. "Beau Geste" was the picture used. It seemed to be well liked.

Good business continues at the Strand. This house has had an exceptionally good business this summer and seems to be able to keep them coming no matter what the pictures are. Last week they used "One Woman to Another" the first two days, "Smile, Brother, Smile" the next three and "The Heart of Salome" the last two. The Franklin maintained their average with their three changes, "The Slaver," "Rich But Honest" and "The Terror of Bar X."

Kansas City

A WEEK of rain kept attendance down to the "average" mark in Kansas City this week. At the Newman Bebe Daniels, in "Swim, Girl, Swim," drew good all week, but not what the picture might have done in more favorable weather, in the opinion of the management.

"The Way of All Flesh" at the Royal did a good second week's business, the picture having received much beneficial publicity during the first week's run. At the Pantages "What Price Glory," although playing to good crowds, was held down.

"The Gingham Girl" at the Liberty kept up pretty near the normal attendance figures all week, which can be said of "The Country Doctor" at the Mainstreet. At the Globe the Duncan Sisters in "Topsy and Eva" did not do so well the second week, being well below the first week's attendance.

Central Pennsylvania

UNSEASONABLY warm weather made material inroads on the normal attendance at the picture shows in Harrisburg for this time of year but not to the extent of causing anything like a serious slump.

Three of the leading downtown theatres, by odd coincidence, offered attractions based on sports for their backgrounds. At the Colonial the main feature was "The Drop Kick."

At the Victoria Bebe Daniels was offered in "Swim, Girl, Swim," another athletic film play. The play was well liked by audiences somewhat depleted by reason of the hot weather.

An attraction with golf for the background was the sporting feature shown at Loew's Regent. "Spring Fever" was the play. The attendance was fairly good considering the unfavorable weather conditions. An added stage attraction, consisting of "songs al a carte," by Lillian Morley and Rae Leeder, stimulated business somewhat.

The film attraction at the State was "Alias the Lone Wolf," the last three days of the week, and proved acceptable to the patrons. "What Price Glory," at the National, at the regular prices of admittance, brought satisfactory box office results.

Oklahoma City

ALTHOUGH it was State Fair Week in Oklahoma City, and Lindbergh also was a big attraction for a day, the theatres had good attendance. This was partly due, no doubt, to the large amount of out-of-town visitors here for the occasion. Then, too, the weather was rainy for four days and this helped theatre business.

"The Big Parade" was here all week at the Criterion Theatre and did a splendid business. This is the third time it has played the city, but the first time at popular prices.

"The Drop Kick" also did a nice business at the Empress all week. The first two days of the week are usually good but this picture was playing to capacity houses the last night.

"The Loves of Carmen" kept the screen all week at the Liberty Theatre, and was well liked. The drawing power of the stars, Dolores del Rio and Victor McLaglen was especially strong coming the week after "What Price Glory" played here.

"Annie Laurie" made a satisfactory showing at the Capitol the first half the week. "The Climbers" finished out the week to an average attendance.

Des Moines

WET weather has affected business in Des Moines as well as all over the state. It has not only been wet but cold with a sudden drop of temperature that sends everyone to cover.

At the Des Moines, "The Rough Riders" would certainly have done better business under other circumstances. It was very well liked. At the Capitol "The Poor Nut" met with divided opinion. Half of the crowds liked it very much and the other half couldn't see it at all. The business was fair with a very fine stage attraction "Persian Gardens" also on the bill from the Publix Shows. At the Strand the first half of the week "The Life of Riley" did very nicely, while "One Woman to Another" did just fairly well for the rest of the week.

Tampa

(Previous Week)

LAST week was "Prosperity Week" in Tampa. The business people, press and Board of Trade have made quite an effort to get people here from the surrounding territory, and they have succeeded in pulling some real good crowds. The theatres, however, do not seem to be feeling any benefit, and are doing just about the average business. The Free attractions seem to be having the draw.

The Tampa had "Swim, Girl, Swim" as their feature attraction for the first half. Business was very good Sunday, but the Labor Day celebration cut into Monday's receipts. The four days registered about average. "We're All Gamblers" pulled very good the last half.

The Strand had "Madame Pompadour" Sunday and Monday and, in spite of the Labor Day celebration, the Monday's receipts topped Sunday by a few dollars. "Soft Cushions" did nicely for three days, but felt the effect of the free attractions. "Nevada" finished the week to average business.

The Franklin kept up their average with "Tracked by the Police" the first three days. "Married Alive" did a little better than average for two days, but the addition was due to Mac's Country Store stunt, which he started this Wednesday. "The Heart of the Yukon" was the feature the last two days, and it held the receipts to average.

Des Moines

(Previous Week)

"HULA," playing at the Capitol Theatre, was expected to draw bigger business than it did. Audiences here do not accord the star the same enthusiasm that they did in an earlier release. The box office showed a good report, but it was more largely due to the stage show attractions. At the Des Moines the business was not so good either, although "The Way of All Flesh" was praised by those who saw it. The star's name was not enough to draw the business, and the film was considered too much of a preachment to be good entertainment. "Nevada," playing at the Strand, did a splendid business making some house records. The big crowds were also attracted, no doubt, by a price cut both afternoons and evenings at the Strand. The last half of the week "The Clew" did very well at the Strand, and the audience seemed to like it.

Salt Lake City

(Previous Week)

WEATHER conditions have been unusually cool for this time of the year, especially in the evenings, here, and the motion picture theatres have all enjoyed splendid business for the past few weeks.

The Paramount Empress Theatre had a good week during the showing of "The Stolen Bride," and a stage presentation billed as "Paul's Symphonators." Packed houses were the rule.

"The Prince of Headwaiters" played to big crowds at the Victory. An added attraction which was a great drawing card was a fall Fashion Show arranged through a tie-up with one of the leading department stores in this city, and which presented living models attired in the latest wearing apparel.

Newsreel Resume

Studio Briefs

Mort Blumenstock, writer at First National Studios, did the titles for "The Crystal Cup." This picturization of the novel by Gertrude Atherton co-features Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, and was directed by John Francis Dillon. Blumenstock has many pictures to his credit as title writer, including "The Poor Nut," "The Sunset Derby," "The Perfect Sap" and "Twinkletoes."

John Francis Dillon, noted film director, has just signed a new long-term contract with First National Productions Corporation, according to announcement by Watterson R. Rothacker, managing director and vice-president.

Young David Rollins, Glendale school boy, who was given an important role in Fox Films' version of "The High School Hero," David Butler's production, did such a good job of acting that he has been signed on a five-years' contract by Fox Films.

Ralph Forbes, who was placed under contract a year ago by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has been given a new contract by M-G-M.

At the Pathe West Coast Studio, formerly known as the Metropolitan, the Allene Ray-Walter Miller serial unit, Monty Banks' company and the Jack Donovan Western feature company, are occupying the stages with current productions, while the Lester F. Scott, Jr., stars, Buffalo Bill, Jr., and Buddy Roosevelt, and Leo Maloney's outfit are busy at their individual studios.

With the role of Lorelei Lee finally cast, Paramount is losing no time in assigning the remainder of the roles for its production of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Trixie Friganza is the latest player to be added to the cast.

Mack Sennett, who is releasing three brands this year, has a trio of units busy before the cameras. Ruth Hiatt, Raymond McKee and Baby Mary Ann Jackson are in the throes of another of "The Smiths" domestic comedies. Daphne Pollard, Mack Swain and a bevy of bathing beauties have just completed the first of the new Sennett Girl Comedies, each of which will be a two-reeler. Madeline Hurlock has returned from the East, and is starting a new Mack Sennett brand comedy with Billy Bevan, Vernon Dent and others of the contract players in support.

As soon as she has completed her role in "Roulette," May McAvoy will be starred by Warner Bros. in "If I Were Single" (temporary title), in which Andre Beranger will be seen in the support. Roy Del Ruth will direct this story by Gregory Rogers.

For the second time within the year Dorothy Sebastian is to play the featured feminine role opposite Tim McCoy in one of the latter's western productions, it was announced last week by Irving G. Thalberg, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executive. Miss Sebastian, who played with McCoy in "California," will next be seen with him in "Wyoming."

Jean Doree, blonde comedienne, has been signed up for Stern Brothers Comedies, and will be seen the coming season in support of such stars as Sid Saylor, Charles King and others. She is now playing opposite Charles King and Charles Dorety in "Blonde Babies," a new two-reeler of the "Mike and Ike" Comedies.

A wire from the headquarters of Sterling Pictures in Hollywood, sent by Joe Rock, head of production at the studio, announces that he has signed Jobyna Ralston, former Harold Lloyd leading-woman and recently feminine co-star with Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery," to play the leading role in "Pretty Clothes."

George B. Seitz is directing Conway Tearle, Dorothy Sebastian, Gibson Gowland and Alice Calhoun in "Isle of Forgotten Women." "Say It With Sables," on which Louis J. Gasnier is at work, is Claire Windsor's initial Columbia vehicle. Pauline Garon is presented in "The College Hero," "By Whose Hand?", starring Ricardo Cortez, has left the Columbia cutting rooms and is now on its way to New York for early release.

Universal's frantic search for a typical "Kelly" to appear in the farce comedy, "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris," which is soon to start production under the direction of William Beaudine, was ended this week with the announcement that the coveted part would be played by J. Farrell McDonald.

Richard Tucker and Lee Moran have been signed for important roles in the Universal-Jewel production "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," which will star Laura La Plante with Glenn Tryon in the leading male role.

The production schedule at First National's Burbank studios lists Warner Fabian's novel, "Sailors' Wives," as the next vehicle for the screen team of Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes. Filming is expected to start by the end of the present month, upon completion of "No Place To Go" in which these players are now acting under the direction of Mervyn LeRoy and the production management of Henry Hobart.

The cast of First National's "Louisiana" was augmented by the addition of seven players last week. They were: Armand Kaliz, Boris Karloff, George Bunny, Andre Lanoy, Emil Chautard, George Stone, Paul Vincenti and Raymond Turner. Cullen Tate is assisting George Fitzmaurice, the director, who is on location at Henneme Beach, Osnard, California.

Lloyd Hamilton has returned to the Educational studios after a vacation of three months. He resumed production on the series of eight comedies which he is to make for Educational this year. Norman Taurog directed the rotund comedian in his new two-reeler "New Wrinkles." Toy Gallagher was his leading lady.

Franklin Pangborn, stage comedian, is being featured in support of Marie Prevost in "The Girl in the Pullman," a Cecil B. DeMille production which will be released through Pathe. Erle C. Kenton is directing.

Gladys McConnell, who was leading woman in Harry Langdon's "Three's a Crowd," will again be with the comedian in his next First National comedy, "The Nineteenth Hole." This is not a golf comedy, as its tentative title might indicate.

Fritz Feld has been signed to play the role of a one-eyed peddler in John Barrymore's "Tempest." Feld acted the role of The Piper in Morris Gest's "The Miracle." Prior to the release of "Tempest," he will be seen in Norma Talmadge's "The Dove." Ulrich Haupt, actor of the drama, has also been signed for a role in "Tempest."

Work has started on Tiffany's "Night Life," according to news from M. H. Hoffman, the Tiffany president, who is on the Coast. The cast includes Alice Day, John Harron, Eddie Gribbon, Walter Heirs, Patricia Avery, Earl Metcalfe and Lionel Braham.

David Rollens and Dione Ellis have the leads in "Love is Blonde," the fourth Fox Imperial. Zion Meyers is directing. William Kernall and Max Gold did the story and scenario. This will be Rollens' first work under his new Fox Films contract. Supporting players are William Gillespie, Larry Stears, Henry Armetta and Bobbie Steele.

Eddie Cline is directing a Pathe comedy about airplanes which features Daphne Pollard and Madeline Hurlock with the Sennett girls. In the cast also are Lige Conley and Joe Young.

Jack Holt has joined the galaxy of names now under the Columbia banner. The Columbia picture starring him will mark his first appearance since severing his seven-year association with Paramount.

Earl McCarthy, a new player at the Educational lots, will have the leading role role in Dorothy Devore's new comedy, on which she is now engaged under the direction of Norman Taurog.

Three directors are filming Cameo comedies for Educational. Mark Sandrich and Jules White have been directing this brand for some time, and Harry Sweet, a third director, was recently added to the Cameo unit.

Late additions to the cast of "The Shepherd of the Hills," a First National picture now in the making, are Romaine Fielding, Eugenia Besserer, Otis Harlan, Joseph Bennet, Ena Gregory and John Westwood. Molly O'Day and John Boles will have the principal romantic roles, while Alec B. Francis will have the title role. The company under Albert Rogell, the director, will go to Cedar City, Utah, to film exterior sequences.

"Off Again"

(Educational—One Reel)

JACK LLOYD, Betty Boyd and Wallace Lupino are the trio in this Cameo comedy which Robert Dillon directed. Jack and Betty are newly married and their transports of bliss are abruptly shaken with a telegram from the roughneck Lupino, who promises to knock the new husband's head off for winning his girl. Because the couple have changed their address they feel safe, but Lupino encounters Jack on a bus and flies into a rage when the cigar which he had taken from Jack's pocket explodes. He pursues the luckless and smaller party all over a seaside amusement centre, pausing only when a group of girls ogle him. With the girls to occupy the tough one's mind, Lloyd is forgotten and that worthy can sigh gratefully and find recompense in the company of the charming Betty.

These Cameos generally have plenty of quick-moving incidents to bolster them up. "Off Again" has a fair number of laughs. It will probably be found competent enough to satisfy the neighborhood type of audience seeing it.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Salmon Run"

(Fox—One Reel)

AN interesting subject is this Varieties picture which shows the salmon in his native haunt. The photography is splendid, showing the game fish in his struggle up the waterfalls to reach the spawning ground. It is so well done you are rooting for the fish to make headway. Slow motion pictures enhance the value of the picture. A fish escalator provided by the government also lends a novel touch. The subject is both instructive and entertaining.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Rail Rode"

(Paramount—One Reel)

THIS animated cartoon of Krazy Kat, George Herreman's character, was produced by Charles B. Mintz for Paramount. As there is not much in it that could be termed clever or ingenious, it deserves but an average rating. Except for a constant display of the elasticity of the bodies of various cats, mice and geese, and a few incidents relating to a prancing locomotive, there is little offered in the way of cleverly contrived situations. You know these cartoons can be most amusing—can provoke admiration because of their nimble wit and the art of the cartoonists—work so often freighted with artistry both in execution and individual quirks of the characters. Large chunks of foolishness can be made doubly impressive and effective in causing chuckles, when backed by artistry, and the lack of this seems to be one reason why this particular cartoon is mere filler and nothing more.

The animated work has to do with a railroad, its action being taken up with the pursuit of a locomotive and its mouse-engineer by a lone cat operating a hand truck. The Tom chases the mouse up and down a scenic railway, finally catching his elusive foe.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Eats For Two"

(Educational—One Reel)

FLIRTATIOUS hubbies and equally flirtatious wives carry on here. If not new, the gags in this one reeler are fairly amusing and are sufficiently effective to satisfy the none too ardent fan. Phil Dunham and Al Thompson get into a mess by taking each other's wives out to lunch and being spotted by their respective better-halves, Lucille Hutton and Derelys Perdue.

Naturally you have the looks of guilty consternation, the attempts of the husbands to bluff their way out of the jam and the comic developments resulting therefrom.

Jules White directed the quartet and got fairly good response. This Cameo may not elicit hearty guffaws, but considering the fact that it is an oft-told tale seen many times before, it shapes up favorably.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Hot Stuff"

(Universal—One Reel)

SLAPSTICK and knockabout stuff dominate this one-reeler that can be recommended for those who like plenty of action crammed into a single reel. It moves very fast, and has a few gags that should be good for laughs. The editor of the Sap Center Clarion takes pride in his appointment as chief of the local fire department, and immediately starts looking for a fire. A false alarm proves a disappointment to the chief, and he refuses to answer the next alarm until he learns the fire is in his own house. Some humorous rescues follow through a second story window, but eventually it is learned that all of the smoke is the result of a burned roast chicken, over which the cook has fallen asleep.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Red Warning"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

NEWTON HOUSE, Edmund Cobb and Gloria Gray are the featured players in this western featurette, a none too logical story, and not too well directed. It is a brief tale of the early settlers and their trials with the Indians. There is much fighting, with the Indians invariably getting the worst of it though they outnumber the whites to an amazing extent.

A renegade white inspires the Indians to plunder the pioneers. Billy Dale, his father and sister stand off the whole band, though the elder Dale is "badly hit." Edmund Cobb dashes to the rescue and the quartet, barricaded in a hut, give desperate battle in a renewed Indian attack. Things look badly for them until young Dale rides madly to the nearest settlement and brings relief just as the Indians are rapidly closing in about the hut. There is enough of suspense and action to make it attractive to those who like this type of picture.

"A Fighting Finish"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is another of the Collegians series of lively little two-reelers that abound in snap and action. The story is not as good as some that have gone before, but it is interesting, nevertheless, and it fairly exuberates youth. George Lewis is the star, and this time he is called upon not only to bring victory out of apparent defeat to his college, but to save the whiskers of the dean.

The dean has bet his whiskers that Calford will win the ice skating relay from the rival college, despite the fact that he has banned Ed Benson from the race for failing to turn in a theme. Ed has done just this thing. But Don Trent, his rival, has consigned it to the waste basket, from where it is rescued by June Maxwell's pet dog. The theme shows up during the running of the relay, and Ed is located in time to win in the final heat, also with the assistance of the pet dog.

"Now I'll Tell One"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

CHARLEY CHASE has been putting out such uniformly good comedies it should be expected that he would fall down slightly on occasions. This is one of those occasions. It is not a total bust by any means. In fact it is fairly good, but not just up to the standard set by Charley.

The story gives promise of developing into a lively one until they inject the character portrayed by Stan Laurel, that of a correspondence school lawyer. It is not humorous as it was undoubtedly intended it should be, and all it does is slow up the action. This is no fault of Laurel's. The character simply does not fit.

Chase injects considerable humor, with the comparatively small opportunity given him, but he is capable of much better things. The story revolves around the divorce suit of his wife, whose unscruplous lawyers weave a network of lies for her. A foreigner among the courtroom attendants becomes riled at Charles and takes a punch at him. Charley's wife joins up with him and they give the foreigner a good beating, as a result of which the divorce complaint is dismissed.

"Picking on George"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

GEORGE is the victim of an overzealous press agent who would achieve some newspaper publicity for his actress client. Between them they lure him to the room of the actress and he is in a somewhat compromising position when her stalwart husband puts in an unexpected appearance. George makes his getaway, but not until after the press agent has taken a flashlight of the proceedings, which subsequently is reproduced in the paper and seen by the husband.

Friendly hubby later recognizes George on the beach from the picture, and gives chase, but is foiled amid many complications, which offer some comedy. It all ends happily when George dives off a cliff and lands on the seat of "sweetie's" car. There are a few humorous situations in the picture and coupled up with a lot of action it is passably good.

"Pathe Review No 42"

(Pathe Magazine—One Reel)

THE usual interesting array of subjects is presented in this issue of the Pathe Magazine, which includes: a highbrow dance party by Zula Islanders (boy, how they do shake their feet!); the "Snake," a term for the winding tow of coal barges in English waters, and showing the fast way by which the load is transferred from barge to ship; flowers of Hawaii and their bloom in slow motion, and some fine shots of tarpon fishing in Florida waters. It's a good number.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"The Lateral Pass"

(Pathe Sportlight—One Reel)

THIS is the third release of Grantland Rice's "Football Sense," showing "Chick" Meehan's method of training the gridiron warriors in backfield shifts, the forward pass and the lateral pass. The backfield are dressed in white and with slow motion it is not difficult to trace the movements of the players. These are shifty tricks, the result of much study, and are most interesting. A great number for this time of the year if your audience is interested in football. It's really "inside stuff."—E. G. JOHNSTON.

Sunrise

A Screen Triumph—Magnificent In Every Way

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE expectations that Murnau would accomplish something genuinely worth while after "The Last Laugh" have been realized. The German director's first American picture furnishes proof positive that real thought can be translated for the silver sheet. He not only depicts a very moving and gripping drama but he goes further and actually shows what motivates his characters. A simple tale which borders upon tragedy, Murnau, through a genius for establishing his points, builds his story by way of suggestive treatment. Here is a story which could have been easily ruined had it been produced in a mechanical manner.

Murnau doesn't become brutal although he does make one shudder through his grasp upon the realities. He paints the moods of a mind swept with passion for a temptress—a mind which seeks a solution for a stressful problem.

This is all told with fine originality which is shown through the novel camera effects, the marvelous lighting and the manner in which the players are handled. Murnau is a real story teller—and his characters take form right before your eyes and tell the story through terms of suggestive thought and action. No picture has ever been treated like this one. No group of characters have been drawn more genuinely. A story which stands in a niche by itself.

The Cast: George O'Brien, Janet G[illegible] ston, Bodil Rosing, J. Farrell MacDonald, Ralph Sipperly, Jane Winton, Arthur Housman, Eddie Boland. Director, F. W. Murnau. Photographers, Chas. Rosher and Karl Struss.

THEME: Drama of triangle with husband's passion for other woman being overcome through an awakening of his love for wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Gigantic street sets; moods of characters brought out realistically; camera effects; scenes on lake; intensity of action; acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Go limit. Play up Murnau and Gaynor. Bill as one of outstanding triumphs of screen.

DRAWING POWER: Properly presented, should be sell-out.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films.
Length, about 12 reels. Release date undetermined.

Ideas somewhat new to the Western are pressed into service in the Fox Films release, "Silver Valley."

An abundance of comedy is in evidence in these shots from "A Sailor's Sweetheart," a Warner Bros. feature.

Broadway Madness

A Broadway Gold Digger Goes Suburban

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IT is hard to conceive a real Broadway gold digger such as Marguerite De La Motte portrays in this story falling for the the type of country boy in which Donald Keith is presented, but—believe it or not—she does, and she does it in such a way that she makes you like it and her.

There is a strong bit of drama in this well moulded story, and it is all most logical, though it may not read so. Miss De La Motte acquits herself most creditably both as the hard hearted gold digger and the repentant love-worn girl who falls for the barn-yard simplicity of the likable country youth.

She is the cabaret performer who is substituted as the heiress to an estate of a quarter of a million dollars left by the owner of a rural farm in Connecticut and rightfully belonging to the son of the deceased farm owner. The estate is held in trust for a period of two years, which time this gold digger must put in on the farm. It is easy to imagine she is not overdoing her boredom. And it is just as easy to imagine how readily the boy could fall for her. What could be sweeter than their romance, which follows?

The story has everything that goes to make a good screen play. There are romance, comedy, suspense, action and much of incident that holds the attention throughout, and it is well directed and well produced.

The Cast: Marguerite De La Motte, Donald Keith, Betty Milburn, Margaret Cloud, George Cowl, Louis Payne, Robert Dudley, Orral Humphreys, Thomas Ricketts, Alfred Fisher, Jack Haley.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The night club scenes. The pathetic sequence in the theatrical rooming house. The romance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The popularity of the leading players. The Broadway night life scenes.

DRAWING POWER: Should go well in any house.

Produced and distributed by Excellent Pictures Corp.
Length 6,945 feet. Released October 1st, 1927.

A Sailor's Sweetheart

Good Cast Does Not Measure Up Any Too Well

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

ONE glance at the cast of seasoned troupers in this picture and it is absolutely reasonable to anticipate a barrage of laughs, but either this reviewer sold himself too well in this respect, or else something went wrong along the route, for, after all is said and done, it seemed just a very ordinary effort on the part of everyone concerned. True, there are some real flashes of humor from Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook at times; this much was to be expected. Several other attempts seem very much forced. John Miljan gives a very fair impersonation of a man gone balmy, while Myrna Loy is seen but a few times with but little to do. The picture may do for not too exacting people.

A number of old gags are employed to get the story under way. It has to do with a spinster, who, having inherited a fortune, secretly arranges a wedding and honeymoon with a crook whose specialty is separating old maids from their money. Back at the school, a two-faced old professor also plots to secure some of the money. Things happen aboard the boat. The spinster-teacher intercepts a note from another wife of her husband's, knocks out the latter and leaps overboard with a sailor in pursuit. Both are rescued by bootleggers, then arrested by revenue agents and handcuffed to one another. In this way the pair arrive back to the school to go through some harrowing experiences before all is straightened out.

The Cast: Louise Fazenda, Clyde Cook, Myrna Loy, William Demarest, John Miljan, Dorothea Wolbert and Tom Ricketts. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

THEME: Comedy-drama of romantic spinster-teacher who marries crook. Circumstances hand-cuff her to a sailor who she finally marries.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Nothing to get excited about in entire picture except the work of principals at times.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up the cast.

DRAWING POWER: Second and third class trade.

Produced and Distributed by Warner Bros. Length, 5,685 feet. Released, Sept. 24, 1927.

Still excerpts from the Excellent Pictures release, "Broadway Madness."

A beauty of detail and forceful, gripping acting are to be noted in these shots from the Fox Film special, "Sunrise."

Silver Valley

A Mix Vehicle of Thrills

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

TOM MIX takes the air for the big thrill of his latest picture, and, as usual, he puts it over in the true Mix style. There is nothing half-way about a Mix thrill. When one is called for it is delivered, and in the right way. Escaping from the crater of what was supposed to be an extinct volcano, Tom and the girl are still in a desperate plight and at the mercy of the villain and his gang when the airplane comes to the rescue, picks Tom up in flight, and Tom, in turn, suspended from a rope ladder, grasps the girl from the back of the horse as they fly off to safety.

It is well done, this airplane rescue, and just about saves a picture that is otherwise hardly up to the Mix standard. Tom starts as the inventor of a new type airplane, which refuses to fly, so he gets himself a job as sheriff and is called upon repeatedly to thwart the unsavory villain, who, like Tom, is in love with the visiting authoress, on hand to get local color for her new novel.

There is a realistic volcano scene which lends an additional thrill to the photoplay, as the entire mountainside is blown up. Tom and the girl are riding desperately for the one crevice through which an exit to safety may be made, and they reach it in the nick of time.

The Cast: Tom Mix, Dorothy Dwan, Philo McCullough, Jocky Hoeyi, Tom Kennedy, Lon Poff, Harry Dunkinson, Clark Comstock. Directed by Ben Stoloff.

THEME: Western melodrama of fights, flights and romance, in which the hero rescues the girl from the hands of the villain.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The blowing up of the mountain side. The rescue in the airplane. The robbery of the stage coach.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The star's name with the promise of the usual number of thrills.

DRAWING POWER: Should go well with Mix fans.

Produced and Distributed by Fox Film Corporation. Length, 5,011 feet. Released, October 2, 1927.

A Gentleman of Paris

Right Up Menjou's Alley—A Snappy Number

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THERE'S a bright little picture in store for those who like their Menjou—one which approaches the same high level as "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter." It's sophisticated and bright and dances merrily along on a tight skein of comedy—with the artful Adolphe acting in his inimitable style. If you penetrate its plot you will be forced to admit it's all quite absurd, but no one is going to hunt for gaps and flaws in considering the zippy play of situations and incidents.

The star, as the title indicates, plays another gay rascal of the Paris boulevards. He has conquered more than his share of feminine hearts—those who dance lightly through life—as well as a young innocent from the provinces. The latter is the rogue's fiancee and when she and papa come up to town unexpectedly and surprise the rounder—well, his valet (as faithful as any Dobbs or Jenkins) saves him from much embarrassment.

The valet is an expert in handling the amours of his master, so much so that none of the ladies become suspicious. It is all told with adroit comedy—the kind that releases a quiet chuckle rather than one teased from the tonsils. It has its twists—one of which involves the valet's wife. The scene is a wee bit racy, but Menjou is suave enough to sneak it over. Yes, indeed, it is a smart picture.

The Cast: Adolphe Menjou, Nicholas Soussanin, Arlette Marchal, Shirley O'Hara, Ivy Harris, Lorraine Eddy. Director, Harry D'Arrast.

THEME: Romantic comedy of gay rogue of Paris who gets involved in several heart affairs, but is saved through the diplomacy of his valet.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Even building of plot. Surprises and twists. Moment when fiancee surprises her lover. Episodes involving valet. Tone and quality of sets. Menjou's easy acting. Sly humor.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Menjou and mention that he also appeared in Chaplin's "A Woman of Paris." Bill as typical Menjou picture.

DRAWING POWER: Wherever Menjou is popular picture will draw. For high class houses with select clienteles.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, October, 1927.

A play of strong human emotions is discernable in these scenes from "The Woman on Trial," a Paramount production.

Three's a Crowd

Poorest Langdon In A Long Time

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HARRY LANGDON has been working too steadily producing his pictures instead of taking his time and concentrating upon fresher ideas and gags. If he made his screen appearances six or eight months apart the intervening period could be devoted toward better workmanship. The new comedy is not so hot and lags far behind "The Strong Man." There's scarcely an up-to-date gag in it and the story runs along in a slip-shod way without any semblance of continuity. Langdon is too finished a comedian to be projected in a work of this calibre. Perhaps he's taken on too big a burden in trying to be the chief cook and bottle-washer of his productions. Directing this effort himself, it appears as if he concocted it as he went along.

There are a few funny spots in it, but they are overwhelmed by the sad ones. The comedian with the droll personality and the mark of pathos on his countenance allows himself to become unduly tragic here. He's gone Chaplin—with the result that his own inimitable style is often buried. The pathos looks labored—and the comedy lacks spontaneity.

The star plays a lonesome chap of the tenements whose only companion is a rag doll. Eventually he meets the Girl. After many strong bids for pathos everything ends tip-top for Harry. There will be those who will see it because of the Langdon fame, but they can't truthfully admit that it's a wow.

The Cast: Harry Langdon, Gladys McConnell, Cornelius Keefe. Director, Harry Langdon.

THEME: Comedy of lonesome chap who after pining for romance eventually meets the Girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Langdon's pantomime. Titles. Sets and atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease title. Play up Langdon as one of few top-notch comedians.

DRAWING POWER: Langdon's popularity will draw them. For any house.

Produced and distributed by First National Length, six reels. Released, October, 1927.

The Nest

Clever Reproduction of Stage Success

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

MOTHER love is the theme that dominates this very modern story of pampered children and a self-sacrificing parent. It is an adaptation of the stage success by Paul Geraldy and it has lost nothing in its transposition to the screen. In fact, as a screen drama, it is the equal of, if not better than, the stage presentation.

The story is a powerfully dramatic one that unfolds smoothly and proceeds to its destination directly without the injection of side issues or comedy relief, for which Director Will Nigh and Scenarist Charles E. Whittaker are to be commended.

Pauline Frederick is the devoted and self sacrificing mother of the two very modern children of riches. She has rarely been seen to better advantage. Her devotion is pathetic. She could easily have overdone it and made it ridiculous, but she didn't. Her work as the rejuvenated mother was quite in contrast with that of the indulgent mother, who had first neglected herself for love of her selfish children, but it was equally as good.

Miss Frederick has the advantage of a splendid supporting cast, every member of which does his or her work well. Holmes Herbert is exceptionally good as the devoted friend of the widow, as are Reginald Sheffield as the easily led son and Ruth Dwyer as the selfish semi-flapper daughter. Jean Acker, too, shines as the vamp.

The Cast: Pauline Frederick, Holmes Herbert, Thomas Holding, Ruth Dwyer, Reginald Sheffield, Rolland Flander, Jean Acker, Wilfred Lucas. Directed by Will Nigh.

THEME: Drama in which self-sacrificing mother becomes rejuvenated in time to rescue her selfish son from the clutches of a gambling house proprietor and a vamp, and her daughter from her own self-indulgence.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The gambling house sequences. The cafe scenes. The meeting of the mother and the vamp. The love and self-sacrifice of the mother.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The star's name and the successful play from which the screen story was adapted.

DRAWING POWER: Good for any type house.

Produced and distributed by Excellent Pictures Corp. Length 7,393 feet. Released September 1st, 1927.

Drama, pathos and disappointment come into the life of the lonely little figure around whom revolve the happenings in "Three's a Crowd," a First National production

Gay satire and suavity of manner are employed by the principals in the Paramount picture, "A Gentleman of Paris."

The Woman On Trial

Well Suited for Pola—Moderately Entertaining

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HAVING done pretty well by Pola Negri with "Hotel Imperial," Mauritz Stiller takes her in tow again and guides her through a likely melodrama—one in which she makes a strong bid for sympathy. She is on trial for murder in a French court. Naturally the heart appeal is right in the bag for Pola. As stories go it shapes up as moderately interesting. The director uses the cut-back method in building the plot, but gets away from the obvious plan by refraining from flashing to the woman on the witness stand. To emphasize her testimony he resorts to subtitular quotations.

The story is the usual sentimental one of a woman who married through convenience to save a tubercular lover. When the rich husband discovers the liaison he attempts to frame her to win the custody of the child. The characters are sharply contrasted and as the cutbacks and testimony develop it is easy to guess the verdict.

It is logically told and builds progressively. There are some poignant scenes which bolster it enough to make it quite moving at times, especially that of the reunion of the heroine and her lover after years of separation. Miss Negri gives a sincere performance and succeeds in establishing a sympathetic bond with her audience. The late Einar Hansen delivers some eloquent pathos as the sick lover. The film isn't a world-beater, but it'll do fairly well.

The Cast: Pola Negri, Einar Hansen, Arnold Kent, Andre Sarti, Baby Brock, Sidney Bracy, Bertram Marburg, Gayne Whitman. Director, Mauritz Stiller.

THEME: Melodrama involving a murder with the accused standing trial and winning her freedom.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The manner in which director constructs the scenes. The frame-up. The reunion of the lovers. The capable acting. The atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as worthy of Negri's talents. Use teasers of the plot. Make a noise about the unwritten law, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw if Negri is still attracting the crowds. Suitable for average houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players. Length, seven reels. Released, September, 1927.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Barbed Wire"—Paramount, Berlin, Germany

Morgenpost: "The first European showing of this picture caused great emotion in auditorium."

Der Tag: "Their performance was perfect. . . . Pola Negri staggering. Brook picture of harsh manhood . . . and in almost tragic-comical part of the clown, Clyde Cook delighted auditorium and it answered with storms of laughter."

Kinematograph: "The settings excellent, battle scenes were made with clever realism and much spirit, the prison camp brilliant and individual types are great, the whole a strong and lasting success."

"Out All Night" — Universal, Colony Theatre, New York City

Journal: "Denny can be depended upon to turn out one amusing comedy after another. And his latest is no exception. Good entertainment. Denny has his usual breezy grin and Miss Nixon is extremely decorative."

News: "Titles exceptionally well written, and photography adequate. Seiter has turned out snappy, thoroughly satisfactory job. . . . . Marian Nixon holds place nicely. She's delightful to look at and gives charming performance."

Evening World: "Is extremely comical."

Evening Graphic: "Twenty-four hours of speedy fun. 'Out All Night' actually funny.

Mirror: "Happy example of lighter form of amusement. Comedy quite long and fairly complicated. But persists in giving beholders a good time, and seldom stops to rest more than a moment."

Telegram: "Audience gave vent to lusty approval."

"Sunrise" — Fox Films, Times Square Theatre, New York City

Times: "Murnau proves himself to be an artist in camera studies, bringing forth marvellous results from lights, shadows and settings. Proves himself to be a true story teller. . . . Inspired performances. . . . Murnau proves by 'Sunrise' that he can do just as fine work in Hollywood as he ever did in Germany."

Daily News: "Magnificent—marvellous—99¾ perfect. . . . Not even in our fondest dreams of what a 99¾ perfect picture might be, did we expect anything as remarkable as 'Sunrise.' Stands alone as film of films. The best of this year, last year, and all the other years that have given themselves over to cinemakind. . . . Has remained for Hollywood to be birthplace of Murnau's most powerful, most poignant, most wonderful screen drama."

Evening World: "Murnau took simple little tale and made it one of most poignant things ever seen on any screen. . . . He swayed audience at will, playing upon heart-strings and transporting them through the gamut of emotions. . . Murnau wizardy also spread to members of cast. O'Brien is made to show here that he has the making of one of greatest actors upon the screen."

American: "Camera effects, always interesting, often amazing in their beauty and originality. . . . O'Brien has proved beyond question of doubt that gods have showered histrionic talents upon him and he uses them to best advantage. . . . Janet Gaynor has native poise and restraint that it has taken older actresses years to acquire. . . . For years after most of cinema successes of today are forgotten, 'Sunrise' will be re-issued wherever movies are shown."

Morning World: "Something you positively must see before leaving New York. . . . Man who made 'The Last Laugh' has journeyed from Berlin to Hollywood and has retained his style, his individuality and his genius for projecting thoughts of men and women upon a white sheet. . . . It is a great show that Fox has offered, one which everybody in this town owes it to himself to see."

Journal: "Amazing picture. So tremendous in its power, so engrossing in its dramatic magnificence, that it stands alone as example of art of motion pictudes. . . . Janet Gaynor exquisitely appealing. . . . O'Brien gives remarkably fine performance. 'Sunrise' is superb."

Daily Mirror: "Murnau, as is his custom, put touches of a master director in 'Sunrise.' Excellent camera work, sets unique in appearance and better acting than Janet Gaynor and O'Brien ever did before, also did their bit for picture."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Stacy Theatre, Trenton, N. J.

Times: "Held over another week to meet popular demand, vivid picturization of great stage success, is expected to shatter all attendance records. . . . A wonderful picture . . . and if any individual honors are to be given they should go to McLaglen. His performance is indescribably effective."

News News: "Thrill of 'What Price Glory' is one of best things movies have ever given birth to. Held spectators almost spellbound. . . . Picture is enacted well-nigh perfectly. McLaglen and Lowe leave nothing to be desired. Dolores Del Rio gives lifelike and fascinating performance."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Strand Theatre, Scranton, Pa.

Republican: "Is an improvement over its stage version which thrilled American audiences from coast to coast, and to any who would care to enjoy two hours of good, wholesome entertainment, try Strand this week."

"Rose of the Golden West"—First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

American: "Thrilling film of romance. Abounds in action, drama and romance. Mary Astor puts rose into golden west. Never before have we seen her look so utterly ravishing. Mary a vision to behold. Photography, beauty of natural locations and exquisite sets alone worth price of admission. Action aplenty, fine riding, breath-taking rescue and everything that goes toward making a thriller of entirely different type than those we have come to associate with this particular period. Our new fall hat is off to Fitzmaurice, who directed."

Evening World: "Very entertaining piece of work. Goes over with bang. Fitzmaurice has managed to embellish work with overtones of novelty. Story intriguing, works up to stirring climax and altogether convincing. Is recommended for entertainment."

Journal: "Set is romantic period, photoplay has colorful moments. Plenty of action. Mary lovely to look at, every one wears picturesque costumes and backgrounds effective."

Morning World: "Altogether good edition of semi-historical romance conveyed to silver sheet. Scenes beautifully shot, and consequently film has trappings to put over this type of story. Moments of excitement also carefully worked out. Mary Astor looks superb. Modern camera brings to picture all glamor and pageantry attributed to those times."

Telegraph: "As rich and beautiful as its name. Appealing cast. Fitzmaurice has faculty of combining all elements necessary to realization of dreamy, pictorial beauty. One has pleasure of gazing upon fragrant loveliness of Mary Astor. Picture appealing in beauty and offers some real acting."

Sun: "Handsome costume picture. Fitzmaurice can always be relied upon to offer handsome settings, clothes and tastefulness in photography and production. These virtues are part and parcel of 'Rose of the Golden West.' Story well constructed and sufficiently full of action. Mary Astor . . . tempestuous, fiery actress."

Herald Tribune: "Never have we seen anyone so ravishingly lovely as Miss Astor. Photography gorgeous. 'Rose of the Golden West' a beautiful production."

Times: "Amusing situations. Composition of scenes has received thoughtful attention. Mary Astor charming. Love excellent. He senses humor of yarn."

Mirror: "Charm which is Mary Astor's, whimsical histrionics by [illegible] tumes, and excellent horsemanship."

"The Red Raiders"—First National, Hippodrome Theatre, New York City

News: "The younger generation will get a kick out of 'The Red Raiders.' Hair-raising western stuff. Offers splendid thrills. Scenic effects well conceived."

Herald Tribune: "Riding such as we never saw before. Picture is exciting and a fine production."

Times: "The boy who delights in exploits of General Custer, Buffalo Bill and other heroic figures of those days will find joy in 'The Red Raiders.' Excellent riding by Maynard. Scenic effects particularly good. Fighting scenes expertly handled and Indians do extraordinarly well. Maynard is good looking as well as remarkable horseman. He does not enlist double for dangerous stunts."

World: "An Indian picture which required great deal of research, money and patience to reproduce upon films. Director has made valiant effort to capture something of post-Civil War terror which attached itself to opening of West. Maynard a picturesque figure. I should say this would please all youngsters, and for that reason is worth while film."

Morning Telegraph: "Thrilling as any Buffalo Bill show. Fast-moving, red-blooded action. Will have you clinging to arms of your chair. Maynard has rolled up a great following among the fans."

American: "There is much to recommend. First of all, there is Maynard's reckless riding, with all dare-devil stunts done in close-up. Scenic effects and photography excellent. Few more beautiful shots have been filmed than those depicting Indians riding in circular and geometrical designs over far-reaching hills. Intensely interesting. Maynard excellent rider and a good 'looker.' Picture is bound to entertain you."

Evening World: "Grips one and holds interest. So-called 'Westerns' certainly still have their appeal. Maynard does best work in story."

Journal: "All thrills of old-time wild west days. Maynard rides superbly, and with his horse, Tarzan, gives customers their money's worth. Gorgeous scenic shots against which Indians whoop it up during exciting raids."

Mirror: "A dashing, colorful out and out melodrama and a lot of fun. Beautiful riding and camera helps with effective angles. Maynard has a trained horse, a striking animal, whose grace and speed offer amusement in themselves."

"White Pants Willie"—First National, Worcester, Mass.

Telegram: "One of those pictures made to order for lovers of clean comedy. Hines is star of piece and no theatregoer needs to be told that it contains plenty of laughs.

New York & New Jersey

LOEW'S Oriental Theatre, at Bensonhurst, a new 3,000 seater, to present vaudeville and feature pictures, combined, will open Thursday evening, October 13, with a single performance, with all seats reserved. The regular policy of continuous shows with no seats reserved will be adopted the following day. N. T. G., announcer of WHN and a galaxy of celebrities from the night clubs, will take active part in the opening ceremonies. Two other important openings on the Loew chain will take place October 15 at Houston, Texas and October 28 at Kansas City, Mo.

Two more local theatres will be added to the ever-increasing Loew theatre circuit in New York City, if a rumor circulating around film row this week be true. The houses in question are located in the Bensonhurst section of Brooklyn and are said to be the Marlboro and Benson, both owned by Rapf and Rubin. The Marlboro is practically a new theatre, only recently being opened to the public. The Benson is slightly older.

Although it has been said that Publix Theatres had abandoned to a large extent its proposed construction of theatres in certain neighborhood sections of New York City, according to the report of a Brooklyn film salesman several large signs have recently made their appearance on a fence surrounding a plot in the downtown shopping district of Brooklyn to the effect that: "On this site is being erected the Brooklyn Paramount theatre." This part of Brooklyn is fast becoming the scene of some lively competition for it embraces activities of the Strand, the Keith-Albee, Loew's Metropolitan, the former Keeney holdings, now Loew's, and the Orpheum; the latter recently reverting to its one time policy of high class vaudeville. The Keith-Albee, since Sept 1, has included feature pictures in its program—thus directly competing with Loew's Metropolitan—and if the new Publix theatre project goes through, planned, it is said, to seat 6,000, matters will be livelier than ever.

The long delayed opening of the Elton theatre, New Utrecht avenue at 43d street, Brooklyn, recently took place. The manager's name is Stanzler and he is said to have been formerly connected with the Sheffield theatre, one of the R. & R. circuit. According to report, the Elton will remain for the present under control of its builder, Mr. Schwartz.

I. Katz, formerly a partner in the Rosenzweig & Katz theatre chain, is the new owner of the Stilwell theatre, Brooklyn. Mr. Katz is also said to be building a 600 seater on Cortland street, downtown New York City.

John Bemis is the new manager of Leon Rosenblatt's Lyceum theatre, Bayonne, N. J. Mr. Bemis was, until this appointment, connected with the Newkirk theatre, Brooklyn.

The Park-5th Avenue theatre, 5th Ave. and 44th Street, closed during the Summer for repairs, will reopen Oct. 7 with a program consisting of pictures and vaudeville. This house is owned by Barr Brothers.

New private offices are being constructed on the fifth floor of 1600 Broadway where the Pathe and P. D. C. exchanges are located. They will in all probability be occupied by the Manager Wolf, of the New Jersey district, George Dillon, one of the Eastern sales executives, and Al Sawtell, of the Pathe non-theatrical department. With Mr. Dillon's removal from 729 7th Avenue to 1600 Broadway, the consolidation of the Pathe and DeMille sales forces seems practically complete.

The latest report concerning the handsome new Universal theatre, New Utrecht avenue, Brooklyn, is that it will open October 9th with a change of pictures and vaudeville twice a week.

Sale of two Long Island theatres recently took place when Herman Britwar acquired the Regent theatre, Bayshore, and the Babylon theatre, Babylon, from the Brewster's. The date of transfer was Oct. 1, according to report. Mr. Britwar states that he and his associates will do everything possible to modernize these theatres. In addition to a complete renovation for each house, orchestras will also be added to the musical program.

Moe Rosenthal has reopened his theatre at 500 Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, and in the future it will be known as "Moe's Scenic." Moe has given the house its usual summer overhauling.

The Hughes theatre, 187th street and Hughes avenue, the Bronx, will reopen October 12. This theatre has recently been modernized.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Seider have returned from their honeymoon spent in Canada.

The Stanley-Fabian circuit have broken ground for their new theatre to be built in the ferry district of Hoboken, N. J.

Messrs. Gottlieb and Goldmark will reopen their 4th Avenue theatre Oct. 8. The house will be run, for the present, two days a week. The Paradise theatre, 4th avenue, Brooklyn, is also operated by this firm.

The M. P. T. O. of New Jersey, held a board of directors' meeting in the offices of 735-Seventh avenue on Tuesday of this week.

It was not Al Moley's fault that the New York Giants did not win the National League pennant for if boosting a team would have turned the trick, the Giants would have been miles ahead of their nearest competitor at the close of this season. Anyway, now that the Pirates have annexed the title, Al and his sidekick, Ed Seider, are turning their attention to other matters. One is, making a drive for more customers for Prudential Delivery trucks. They picked last Monday's stormy evening for the first trip.

Messrs. Schartz and Gold's Tiffany theatre, located on Chester street, Brooklyn, closed during recent weeks for remodeling, reopened last week.

M. R. De Costa is now managing F. G. Wilson's Endicott theatre, Bensonhurst, Brooklyn.

Lawrence Cox, formerly with Loew's 83d Street theatre, is now in charge of the Regun theatre, 116th Street and Lenox Avenue, New York City.

M. Livoti recently opened the Belvedere theatre, Brooklyn.

Manager J. H. Phillips, of the Eagle theatre, a Salkin house at 1852 Third Avenue, New York City, will direct a real wedding ceremony on the Eagle's stage on October 15th at 8.30 p. m. when a Yorkville couple will sign on the matrimonial dotted line. Neighborhood merchants are cooperating in the matter of gifts for the bride and groom. This ought to be a good business builder.

New England

THE long expected changes in Pathe and Producers, which have been expected since the two exchanges joined forces, materialized during the week, when four salesmen of the combined outfit handed in their resignations.

Eddie Connolly, who handled Pathe comedies in Western Massachusetts; Charles McGee, who covered New Hampshire and Vermont for the DeMille unit; Charles Wilson, short subject salesman in Western Massachusetts, and Ben Rogers, feature representative for Pathe, are the quartet.

It is doubtful if their places are filled, as consolidations and rearrangements of efforts on the part of the sales force will probably cover the territories.

Frank Collier will manage the Washington Street Theatre, Boston, which is scheduled to reopen within the next month. The theatre is practically a complete new house, so extensive has been the remodelling. When the city of Boston widened Kneeland street it cut off part of the Washington street theatre, which loses some 250 seats as result. The building was largely rebuilt and the theatre reconstructed, rearranged, refitted throughout and repainted.

James O'Hara, shipper at the Pathe-DeMille exchange, Boston, is spending his vacation in his old home town of Fitchburg, Mass.

Pathe Exchange held its annual outing Saturday at Houghton's pond in the Blue Hills reservation of the Metropolitan Park system. The pond now goes by some Indian name which nobody was able to spell, hence it is called by its former name. The repast was served by a caterer. There were athletics for both the boys and girls with prizes of a humorous nature for the winners. The married men won the baseball battle 15 to 3. The committee in charge consisted of James A. Curran, Frank Wolf and Charles Heath.

Beau Hartford, of the Pathe sales force, who formerly sold comedies in Rhode Island and the Cape territory, is now covering Western Massachusetts, handling all short subjects.

A visitor who was warmly welcomed to Film Row during the week was Charles W. Perry, a former manager of the Pathe exchange at Boston, who is now special representative for Paramount-Famous-Lasky.

Timothy Donahue, assistant cashier at Pathe-DeMille, has the sympathy of many friends in the death of his mother, in Worcester.

Si Bunce, who is operating theatres in Buffalo, Tonawanda and Milford, was in Film Row during the week, renewing friendships. He formerly operated the Hudson exchange.

Joseph Kelly, who formerly operated the Boston-New Hampshire Film Delivery Co., has quit that end of the business to join the sales force of Tiffany and is covering Western Massachusetts.

Frank Layden, who operates the Olympia at South Boston and other theatres and who has returned to duty after a serious illness which confined him to the hospital for seven or eight weeks, had unexpected duties thrust upon him. Charles Wilson, who had been carrying on Leyden's duties during his illness, was himself stricken the day Leyden returned and is now confined to his home by illness.

Ray Averill is managing the Olympia Theatre at Providence, succeeding Thomas Dooley.

Albany

WILLIAM SMALLEY, of Cooperstown, made a rather unusual purchase last week when he bought an old-time fire engine for $25, to use in exploiting a certain picture being shown over his chain of a dozen or more houses.

Before Tony Veiller, manager of the Mark Ritz, in Albany, left last week for a month at Lake George, where he hopes to better his health, he spent nearly a half day along Film Row, endeavoring to borrow a rifle. Mr. Veiller is planning to emulate his friend, Louis Buettner, of Cohoes, champion woodchuck hunter in central New York.

Frank Breymaier is as happy as can be these days, handling the Wedgeway theatre in Schenectady, playing burlesque and pictures. Mr. Breymaier has been in the game for many years and nearly every week meets some of his old time friends with a burlesque troupe.

Looking as sturdy as an oak, the old veteran, Pop Linton, of the Olympic in Utica was in town during the past week. He was accompanied by his son, and between the two they booked many pictures for the winter.

Clayton LaPoint, who is associated with Lew Fischer, at the Crandall in Chatham, arrived along Film Row last week, sporting a brand new derby. Mr. Fischer accompanied his partner on the trip.

No one has yet been appointed change, to succeed Miss Renee Craas manager of the local Bond exven, who leaves on October 15, to be married.

Miss Virginia Fair is the new organist at the Standard Theatre in Carthage. The young woman is a graduate of the Eastman School of Music.

Matters are certainly running smoothly these days between the exchange managers of Albany and the exhibitors served. Last week's session of the Albany Film Board of Trade lasted exactly thirty minutes.

A. J. Pincus, who has been acting as western feature salesman for the Pathe office in Albany, resigned last week and has not announced his future plans.

Harry Hellman hopes to have his new theatre, the Paramount, in Albany, in shape to open on or about October 15. Neal Hellman, the son, will assume management of the house upon its opening.

Moe Streamer, of United Artists, was in town during the week and also paid a visit to some of the Schenectady exhibitors.

S. E. Feld, a well known salesman at the Pathe exchange, has been ill during the week with an attack of bronchitis.

Julius Byck, who conducts the theatre at Tannersville and who does all of his buying at the Albany exchanges, has adopted a winter policy of three nights to the week. The summer resort towns in the Catskills and Adirondacks are now back to normal population and the theatres in these places are now running but a few nights each week. The Aspinwall, a hotel at Lenox, which entertained its guests with pictures this summer, closed last week.

Students at Union College have been selected by W. W. Farley to serve as ushers at the State and Strand theatres in Schenectady.

According to Bob Pierce, who runs the Capitol theatre in Ilion, business has taken a slump in the typewriter city, due to a lay off in some of the big factories. The Temple theatre, which is also owned by Mr. Pierce, and which has been closed for some time, may be opened, however, for Saturday night only.

Bill Benton, of Saratoga Springs, has made arrangements to feature news pictures taken this week of the Saratoga Sesqui-Centennial.

Cards received here from Pete Dana, former booker for the Schine circuit, and who left Gloversville to accept the management of a theatre in Buffalo, brought the first news that Mr. Dana is now associated with Tiffany in one of the midwestern cities.

Richard Tweedy, organist at the Troy theatre, was married during the past week, his bride being Miss Laura H. Ruback, of Troy. The bride is a graduate of Wellesley, and a member of one of Troy's amateur dramatic clubs.

Max Milder, director of buying and booking for the Schine organization, was in New York city during the past week.

Business was rather quiet along Albany's Film Row during a portion of the week, due to the holidays. While all of the exchanges remained open, there was a noticeable absence of both managers and salesmen.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McNamara, of Valatie, were in Albany on a buying trip last week. Mrs. McNamara does all the booking for the theatre. Mrs. G. M. Briggs, of the Tyler in Pittsfield, Mass., was also in town booking. Clarence Dopp, of Johnstown, was also at several of the exchanges.

The news of Walter Hayes' sudden death in New York city came as a distinct shock to the theatres as well as the film exchanges in Albany, for Mr. Hayes had many friends in the capital city. Before making his home in New York, Mr. Hayes resided in Buffalo, and was a frequent visitor to his theatre in Albany and Troy. Both Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Stanley houses in these two cities, and A. deWolf Veiller, manager of the Mark Ritz, attended the funeral on Thursday.

Jerry Sussman, district advertising sales manager for Paramount, was in Albany last week, going over matters generally at the local exchange.

Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy theatre, was laid up for a portion of last week with a bad attack of the grippe.

Harry Lazarus, owner of the Broadway and Auditorium theatres in Kingston, is away on a hunting trip this week, and trying out a new dog which he recently purchased. Mr. Lazarus found time enough to visit Albany's Film Row last week.

The Van Curler was reopened in Schenectady last week with Wm. Shirley in charge. In addition to feature pictures, the Vitaphone has also been installed and will occupy a prominent part in each day's program.

Charles A. Smakwitz is handling the Mark Ritz in Albany, during the absence of Tony Veiller, and is looking after the Albany theatre as well. Mr. Smakwitz is handling all of the advertising of the Stanley local chain in connection with his other duties.

A tentative date for the opening of the new Rochester theatre has been set for October 31. Specially carved marble is being imported from Italy and finished and polished in a Vermont mill for use in the new house. The interior decoration has been completed. The house will be one of the most beautiful in the western part of the state.

Claude Fish is busy this week in superintending the erection of a new marquee and sign at his American theatre in Schenectady. A new lobby floor is also being laid.

Canada

V. ARMAND, for many years chief projection operator of the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been appointed supervisor of projection for Famous Players houses in Western Canada, his territory extending from Fort William, Ontario, to Vancouver, B. C. This announcement was made by H. M. Thomas, Vancouver, Western Division manager of Famous Players.

Mr. Armand recently returned from a trip to British Columbia where he inspected new F. P. houses at Nelson and New Westminster and also the projection equipment of the chain of eight theatres in Vancouver, B. C., recently acquired by the company.

A trip has also been made to Montreal, Quebec, by Mr. Armand for the purpose of examining the Sentry Safety Device which has been installed in the Capitol, Palace, Loew's and other theatres there.

John McManus of Toledo, Ohio, has been appointed manager of Loew's Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, in succession to Jules Bernstein, who had been manager of the Toronto house for the past 15 years and who has been promoted to an executive post in the head office of Loew's, Inc., New York City.

Mr. McManus is well known in Toronto theatre circles, having been assistant manager of Toronto Loew's for four years prior to his appointment as a full-fledged theatre manager elsewhere.

Children have been excluded from the moving picture theatres of Fernie, B. C., until further notice because of the discovery of the presence of infantile paralysis in the city, the order having been issued by the medical health officer.

While Captain Frank Badgley, M. C., director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Studio, Ottawa, was not able to attend the fall meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at Saranac Lake, New York, during the week of September 26, he has followed in the footsteps of his predecessor, the late Raymond S. Peck, who was an officer of the Society for some years prior to his death last spring, by assuming the Canadian Government membership in the organization.

Capt. Badgley was busily engaged with the directing of a new Canadian Government film in the North country when the Society's fall convention was being held and could not get away to make his first bow before the Society.

Something in the nature of a crisis visited the cities of Ottawa, Hull and Aylmer on Friday evening, September 30, when all electric lighting services were disrupted through a break in the generator at the power plant at Chaudiere Falls, Quebec, the whole Canadian Federal district being thrown into absolute darkness.

There were capacity audiences in many of the local theatres at the time, the break occurring at 8.40 P. M., but there was not the semblance of a panic in any instance. The orchestras at B. F. Keith's, Regent, Centre, Imperial, Laurier, Eden, Francais and other theatres continued to play when the houses were thrown into blackness. The only illumination was secured through the flashlights of the ushers. Miss Marguerite Reeder, secretary to manager W. J. Hanlon of M-G-M, resigned her position last week to return to her home in Miami, Fla. She is succeeded by Miss Louise Askew.

Miss Alma Newton has been added to the personnel of M-G-M Atlanta office to succeed Miss Annabel Kilby, who was secretary to division manager Charles E. Kessnich.

W. G. Carmichael, United Artists Atlanta branch manager, was away from his office last week making a tour through Alabama.

Manager J. H. Butner, of Educational, spent the week in Florida.

C. L. Peavy, manager of F B O Atlanta office, made a trip to Tennessee last week.

Manager W. G. Minder, of Tiffany's Atlanta office, spent last week in New York on business.

A. Douglas Comeaux, auditor for Universal from the Home Office, left last Saturady for Jacksonville.

Nick Economou, operator of the Grand Theatre, Montezuma, Ga., has purchased the Grand, Reynolds, Ga., from C. H. Goddard.

J. W. Mangham, Jr., manager of Bromberg Attractions, visited New York last week.

R. A. Morrow, district manager for Pathe, recently called at the Atlanta office.

The new Strand at Ashville, Alabama, opened Thursday, September 29. The house was erected for Mrs. E. B. Johnson, and is being operated by J. R. Johnson. It is small, but well appointed, seating about 260 and facing on the Birmingham Highway. It will run two and possibly three nights weekly, using the best possible pictures.

The new Publix Theatre, the "Alabama," in Birmingham, is rapidly approaching completion. L. O. Larson, supervising construction, states that he believed the theatre will be ready to open by Thanksgiving, if not before. The house is a miniature of the Chicago Theatre, seating 2551, intimate style, beautifully furnished and lavishly decorated.

Dr. James Williams, operating the Palace, Jacksonville, Ala., is making preparations for his coming season. He has booked many big attractions.

J. Warren Andrews, of the Joe Steed Amusement Company, visited Atlanta several days the past week.

W. C. Alexander, Alabama representative of National Theatre Supply Co., visited Atlanta the past week.

The "Avon," new Highland Avenue theatre, will open within the next month. Manager A. Brown Parkes has closed with W. C. Alexander, of the National Theatre Supply Co., for all equipment.

Homewood, a new suburb of Birmingham, will have a new theatre within the next two months. A house to seat about 400 is being planned and will be operated by John W. Patton, Jr.

It is reported that W. J. Boshell has taken over the Lyric Theatre at Townley, which was formerly operated by C. B. Hendon. Mr. Boshell operated the Family Theatre, at Winfield.

Visitors to Atlanta's Film Row last week included Vance Marquis and George Garrard of the Orpheum theatre, Bartow, Fla.; J. M. McCarthy, Forsyth theatre, Forsyth, Ga.; R. E. Martin, Martin theatres, Columbus, Ga.; S. H. Boriskey, Independent Theatres, Inc.; A. H. McCarthy, Mildred Theatre, Barnsville, Ga.; Carl Cape, Colonial theatre, Buford, Ga.; D. E. Gray, Star theatre, Anniston, Ala., and J. L. Wadsworth, Rose theatre, Tuskegee, Ala.

Milwaukee

THE first bowling match of the season left a wake of lame backs and sore thumbs. The "Serials," piloted by Ed Zimmerman, tied the "Features" under captaincy of Art Schmitz for first place in the first match. Both teams took three games. The other teams appropriately named placed as follows: "Comedies" with Elmer Klase as captain, won two and lost one; the "Cartoons" with Walter Beier as captain, took one and dropped two; the "Scenics" with Charles Trampe as captain, and the "News Reels" under Steve Bauer, both lost three games. Geo. Beyer took honors for high individual score for three games with 537 to his credit. W. DiLorenzo took high individual honors for single with 232. Not bad for a start!

John Merrill, of the publicity department of Saxe Amusement Enterprises, has been transferred from work in the city to exploitation work among the houses in the state. Les Ernst takes Mr. Merrill's place in the offices in Milwaukee. Mr. Ernst was formerly a feature writer on the Chicago Herald Examiner.

The Elite theatre on Green Bay Avenue is being rapidly put into shape for the opening which Steve Bauer is planning for the 1st of November. The theatre is now undergoing extensive redecorating and remodeling.

John P. Adler of the Adler and Trio theatres at Marshfield was in the city for several days to get lined up for the new product.

The coming marriage of Miss Jean Eichman, secretary of the Pathe film exchange, has recently been announced. Miss Eichman was entertained during the week by the staff of the exchange at a shower.

L. J. McCarthy, manager of the First National, is on a two weeks' vacation, which he is spending in Portland, Oregon.

The Pathe sales force varied its routine somewhat by having its regular sales meeting in Green Bay last Sunday rather than in Milwaukee.

Frank Welter of the Grand at Wausau came down to the city for a visit at the exchanges.

M. Gilman, manager of the Princess theatre at Plymouth, was in the city early in the week on business.

W. Walsh, former First National salesman, has been transferred to Portland, where he will be booker and assistant manager of the Oregon exchange of First National.

Neil Duffy, of the Elite theatre at Appleton, was in the city on Tuesday, checking up on bookings for his house.

The Hollywood theatre was reopened on the 24th of September after having undergone rebuilding and redecorating. Three hundred seats were added to the theatre. A new organ was also installed. Sam Pylet has changed from a three show a day to a daily change policy.

S. Tunstall, formerly manager of the Garden, has purchased the Strand theatre at Manitowoc from George Herzog, according to word received in Milwaukee recently.

Aug. Berkholtz, of the Mermac theatre at West Bend, made a business trip to the city last week.

R. C. Wheeler, manager of the Lloyd theatre at Menominee, Mich., was a visitor at exchanges early last week.

O. L. Meister, manager of the Whitehouse theatre, made a short trip to Chicago recently.

Building operations are progressing rapidly on the new theatre at Cudahy, which is being built by Jake Disch. Mr. Disch is planning the opening just prior to Thanksgiving.

The New World theatre, on First Avenue, building of which was suspended for some time, is expected to open on the 1st of October.

"Dad" Walcott's Majestic at Racine, which is being rebuilt without closing down, will soon be completed.

San Francisco

G. R. TAYLOR, Paramount's local Ad Sales Manager, is receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, Thomas.

Harry Carney is now covering San Francisco for Columbia Pictures.

Friends were sorry to hear that J. E. Hickey, Fox salesman, when making a recent trip through Santa Rosa, was struck by an automobile and painfully injured.

Local Manager Seib of Pathe, has returned from a business trip to Los Angeles.

Mrs. Alice Henry, formerly with the Imported Pictures Corporation, and later with Columbia Pictures, is now with the Fox Exchange.

Joe Pecio, new owner of the Lincoln Theatre, Alameda, near San Francisco, was in the local exchange recently for a few days picking out high class pictures.

Jack and Betty Brower of Los Angeles, spent a few days in this city. They were on their way to Canada where they will spend a few weeks' vacation.

Al Chamberlain, the Crockett theatre manager and Harry Seipel, manager of the Oroville theatre, spent a few days on Film Row, recently, looking over the newest pictures. They purchased quite a few.

Mark Keller arranged for all the Golden State Theatres in Oakland which participated in the Air Mail Week celebration held from September 12 to 17th.

Eddie LaMontangue has returned from Hawaii and will be seen in the Berkeley theatres in his old man's garb.

R. A. McNeil, general manager of the Golden State Circuit, and Mrs. McNeil, recently spent a few days at Richardson Springs. Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Emmick joined them later, all returning together.

Mark Keller, District Manager of Golden State Circuit, was a recent visitor at Tassajara Springs, enjoying a needed rest.

Earl Cohen, 298 Turk street, together with Mrs. Cohen, has returned from his recent combined pleasure and business trip to the Middle West and the East. While in Chicago he witnessed the big fight.

I. M. Ware, together with Mrs. Ware, was a recent visitor to San Francisco where he and she called on the larger supply houses in the interest of their new Palace Theatre at Dixon.

William Peters, operator of the Lyric Theatre, Manteca, was in the city recently where he purchased some Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps, Hooker Rewind Cabinet, and other needed merchandise, to improve that theatre.

The Royal Theatre, Hanford, has installed new arc lamps and a new screen, as well as other supplies.

The new National Theatre, Marysville, will soon open its doors. It will have all the latest improvements and James Beatty is receiving the credit for making it so attractive.

Arc lamps have been installed in the Bijou Theatre, Visalia, as well as a new sunlight screen.

The Rivoli Theatre, Market street near 17th, which has been operated for some time as a 15 cent house, is undergoing renovation, and when completed will operate as a first-run Market street theatre.

Friends of Charles Dillard, assistant manager of the local branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, were sorry to hear of his death the latter part of August. He died from hemorrhage of the brain which paralyzed the respiration center. Dillard was well known in local and Salt Lake motion picture centers and was well thought of. His wife, Helen, survives him.

On Sept. 8th, the New San Mateo Theatre, San Mateo, Calif., passed from the direction of the Blumenfeld Circuit to that of Ellis J. Arkush and his associates, who control a chain of Peninsula Theatres.

Tom Kane, formerly at the Regent in San Mateo for the past two years, has been transferred to the New San Mateo Theatre and the Regent has been closed.

Minneapolis

H. M. CONWAY has been appointed special representative for Columbia Pictures corporation to cover the Minneapolis territory. He was formerly with First National Pictures. Mr. Conway will handle only Columbia product although working out of the Northwest Theatre Owners' office. C. H. Weeks, home office representative of Columbia, spent two weeks in the city recently working with W. A. Steffes, who is in charge of the distribution work for the Theatre Owners.

A Minneapolis visitor last week was Rudolph Flothow, general sales manager of Tiffany's short subjects. Another visitor was C. C. Ezell, home office representative for Warner Bros., who spent several days with Moe Wolf of the Minneapolis branch.

Recent changes in Minneapolis film exchange offices include the appointment of Art Roberts, formerly witth Pathe, to fill the vacancy left in the Tiffany office with the resignation of Walter Hildebrand as booker. Eddie Gavin has gone to the Fox office as salesman, a position which he formerly filled at the Universal exchange.

The town of Mabel, Minn., is planning to float bonds to provide for the construction of an Opera House and village hall.

Work was started last week on a new theatre in Huron, South Dakota, which Don Harris is building and hopes to have ready for occupancy by the fifteenth of November. The theatre, which is to be called the State, will contain 880 seats, including the balcony, and will also have a large stage, a new pipe organ, and complete modern equipment.

The Rialto theatre at Wessington Springs, S. D., has been sold to Mr. Stephan of Hitchcock, S. D., by F. R. Thompson. Mr. Thompson has purchased an interest in the State theatre at Fairmont, Minn., and will assist in the management.

Cecil Maberry, district manager for Pathe, visited Minneapolis recently, and in commenting on recent reorganization of Pathe said that no more changes are to be expected in the near future. W. R. Liebmann is to remain in charge of the Minneapolis branch office.

The Theatre Owners Association of the Northwest has moved its distribution offices from the Loeb Arcade to 606 Film Exchange building, Minneapolis. Frank Workman is in charge and work is going on smoothly again after the confusion of moving the films, advertising matter and accessories to the new location. The executive offices, which are under the management of W. A. Steffes, will remain at the Nicollet Hotel.

Budd Rogers, vice-president of Gotham Productions, spent part of last week conferring with W. A. Steffes, general manager of distribution of the film division of the Theatre Owners Association of the Northwest, regarding the distribution of the company's product. The theatre owners' organization is now handling this distribution in Minnesota, North and South Dakota.

The Metropolitan, Strand and Orpheum theatres in Grand Forks, N. D., will now be under the management of G. Gordon, according to the announcement of Bennie Berger, owner of the theatres. Gordon will be under Mr. Berger's supervision.

St. Louis

PLANS for the organization of an Amusement Trades Council are under consideration and were discussed at a meeting of the Central Trades and Labor Unions of St. Louis, Mo., on Sunday, September 25.

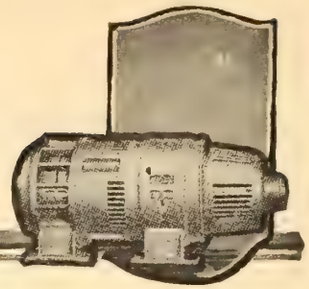
The proposed body would include musicians, motion picture operators, electricians, stage hands, waiters and bartenders and other organized employes of theatres, base ball parks and other amusement places, and also crafts engaged in the manufacture and distribution of materials and merchandise used or sold in places of amusement.

The purposes of the new body, according to Kreyling, are to obtain a better understanding between the various crafts and their employers and the settlement of all disputes through arbitration.

The Granada Theatre, Gravois and Elmwood avenues, St. Louis, Mo., the first neighborhood theatre in St. Louis to be operated with the same de luxe policy as the big first run picture palaces, was opened by the Skouras-Koplar chain at 6:30 p. m. Saturday evening, October 1. It is St. Louis' most beautiful neighborhood playhouse. It seats about 2,000 persons.

Theatres reported to have closed recently include: Bijou, Auburn, Ill.; Star, Hutsonville, Ill.; Idle Hour, Seymour, Mo.; Rex, Versailles, Ill.; Palace, Xenia, Ill.; and Palace, Marion, Ky.

Theatres that will re-open soon or have already re-opened include: Imboden Theatre, Imboden, Ark.; Palace, Richland, Mo.; McClure, McClure, Ill.; Gayety, St. Elmo, Ill., and New Liberty, St. Louis, Mo.



Charles Price is now the sole owner of the Star Theatre, West Union, Ill.

Charles Werner has sold his interest in the Washington Theatre, Belleville, Ill.

Projection

Optics, Electricity, Practical Ideas & Advice

Inquiries and Comments

Projectionists Active in S. M. P. E.

THE fall meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, recently held at Lake Placid, N. Y., gave ample evidence of the increased esteem in which projection matters are being held by the motion picture field generally.

In a society which hitherto had contained practically no projectionists among its members or among those attending its meetings, we find at this meeting that the fraternity of projectionists was excellently represented by Messrs. Townsend, Rochester; Gray, Boston; Greene & Yutzy, Minneapolis, and Gordon, Akron.

The participation of these men in the affairs of the meeting was not limited to their attendance because three papers—two by Townsend and one by Gray—did much toward making the projection side of the meeting a complete success.

An entire morning was devoted to projection and the ensuing discussion reached such lengths that it was found necessary to curtail it because of lack of time.

A New Condenser System

L. S. Townsend, chief projectionist of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., read two papers, the first dealing with a new condenser system for use, primarily, with high intensity arcs, and the second with a new light source of motion picture projection.

In his first paper, Townsend described a method of greatly increasing the operating efficiency of the high intensity arc by the use of condenser lenses. The results he described showed that he was doing with lenses alone just about what other people were trying to do by means of reflector arcs and high intensity lamps.

Without going into too great detail of this new system (his complete paper will appear later in the S. M. P. E. Transactions), it was described how a special lens combination consisting of a plano-convex collector lens measuring 6⅜ inches in diameter, and a parabolic converging lens of 7¼ inches diameter, resulted in the combination having a light collecting angle of 75 degrees. The working distances were 4 inches (from crater to first surface of collector lens) and 15 inches (from parabolic lens to aperture).

Greatly Increased Screen Light

This condenser set, when compared with one using 4½ inch diameter planoconvex collector lens and a parabolic converging lens, gave the following results:

An inspection of the above table will show that this new condenser set will give practically the same results as the reflector arc high intensity lamp. The reflector arc high intensity arc is claimed to produce, with 60 amperes, the same screen results as obtained from the old lamp on 120 amperes.

The new condenser, using lenses only, will, on 65 amperes, give much better results than those produced by the old lamp on 110 Amperes.

There appears to be no need to go through the laborious work of developing a new arc mechanism, since the one now available, and which has been found to be fully satisfactory, can be used with this new condenser.

Results with Relay

Townsend also described the results he obtained by using this new condenser combination in conjunction with the relay condenser as developed by Bausch & Lomb. These results also compared with the old 4½ inch collector lens system as shown in Table II.

With the relay system the same two condenser lenses as described before were used. The first working distance of 4 inches between crater and first lens was retained but the distance between converging lens and aperture was increased to 18 inches. In this case, the 18 inch distance was between the converging lens and the first lens of relay. The distance between relay lenses was 3½ inches.

The object of using the relay condenser set was to obtain perfectly even screen illumination which was not possible when the new condenser was used alone.

While the results with the relay show somewhat lower screen intensities than those obtained when the relay was not used, still the average of screen intensity readings was in favor of the relay set since the screen was evenly illuminated whereas without the relay the screen was bright in the center and fell off at the edges and corners.

Gray's Paper on Practical Problem

The paper read by Arthur Gray, chief projectionist of the Lancaster Theatre, Boston, stressed some practical problems of the projectionist and called attention to conditions now prevailing in connection with reels as sent out by exchanges, splices made by the same, and some observations on the causes and effects of so-called "buckled film."

In the discussion which followed, it was brought to light that the various kinds of film "buckling" were very numerous.

Gray's paper elicited quite a lengthy discussion, for it seemed as though every one of the Society's members had his own ideas as to the cause of film buckling and the method for eliminating it.

According to Gray, the claim that film buckling is a result of reflector arc operation is all wrong and that it is, in fact, the film which is wet—or has been wet and was not allowed to dry properly with the result that the edges dry more quickly than the center, thus causing the edges to shrink faster than the center. This, naturally, causes the film to "cup" or "warp," or "flex" or "chortle," according to the assorted names applied by the various members, each according to his own liking.

In fact, Mr. Dennison even went so far as to claim that the film actually "chuckles." After listening to the discussion of Gray's paper, the writer is inclined to agree with the aforesaid Dennison.

However that may be, film buckling in all its various phases is undoubtedly a serious thing and should be eliminated.

Hanover, Pa. To Have New 1100 Seat Theatre

Ground has been broken for a new 1,100-seat motoin picture at Hanover, Pa., and completion is looked for about March, 1928, according to a recent announcement by F. C. Bitner, operator of the Opera House, Hanover.

Messrs. Nathan and Louis Appell, well-known theatre circuit operators, of York, Pa., are interested with Mr. Bitner in the Hanover Theatre project.

Future Value of Negative Depends on Vault

Most everyone in the motion picture industry is familiar with the value of the finished negative. It represents the combined efforts of a staff of highly paid artists and technicians and its worth in the future is in proportion to the care and treatment a film vault will afford.

To meet these conditions, the Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., have their fireproof vaults equipped with humidifiers and electric heating devices, thermostatically controlled so that the proper atmospheric conditions will prevail at all seasons. All negatives are placed in separate metal containers and stored under what is considered the most ideal conditions of temperature and moisture, and with a maximum of safety.

An elaborate system of negative recording and checking provides for the maximum degree of accuracy in regard to ownership.

General Contract Let on Missouri Theatre

The general contract for the construction of a large theatre and hotel building on South Eighth Street, between Broadway and Cherry streets, in Columbia, Mo., has been awarded to the Simon Construction Company, of Columbia.

The project is being erected by The Tiger, Inc., a company formed by W. E. Smith, treasurer of the Exchange National Bank, of Columbia.

Plans for the new building were prepared by Alonzo H. Gentry, 201-204 March Building, Kansas City, Mo., and call for a hotel building nine stories with basement, fronting 102½ feet on South Eighth Street, with a depth of 100 feet.

The theatre will have a frontage of 82½ feet, and will have a seating capacity of 1,500. The hotel will have 116 rooms. The theatre will be of the atmospheric type.

Loew's Kansas City House Scheduled for Oct.

Out of a chaotic mass of scaffolding the interior of the new $4,000,000 Loew's Midland Theatre, in Kansas City, is emerging in a harmony of color and an elaboration of detail which seems to substantiate the pre-construction assertion that it will be one of the most ornate theatres in America. The seating capacity will be 4,000. Structurally the theatre is completed, or virtually so. The task which remains only partly completed is that of the decorator, designed by Emil Milnar and in the hands of Rambusch Decorating Company, of New York, O. E. Jansson being the representative of that company on the job. There are more than thirty panels in the theatre walls, in which mural paintings will be placed. The great dome of the ceiling will be 100 feet above the level of the orchestra seats. The opening of the theatre is planned for an indefinite date in October.

Harry Smoots To Build at Washington Court House

Harry V. Smoots, owner and operator of the Vine Theatre, Mt. Vernon, Ohio, has announced that he will build an $80,000 moving picture theatre at Washington Court House. The house will be located on Fayette Street, in the heart of the city. The work of razing the two-story building now occupying the site purchased by Smoots has already been started. Plans have been prepared by Harry Holdbrook, Columbus architect, and designer of the James Theatre, Columbus. There will be 775 seats, and all modern equipment throughout. Hoy Simons, of Mt. Vernon, has been appointed manager of the new house, which is scheduled to be finished December 1st.

Equipment for Iowa Theatres

The National Theatre Supply Company, of Des Moines, Iowa, made the sale of a picture machine Mazda-equipped to the Independence State Haspital at Independence last week.

Studio Briefs

Twenty Hollywood bathing beauties will be seen in a new Educational-Lupino Lane comedy which will also have Lane in the part of leading lady. Clem Beauchamp and Lane are to direct the picture. Wallace Lupino, Lane's brother, is also to enact a feminine part—that of heavy.

Al Rockett, First National production executive at Burbank, has signed Philip Bartholomae, playwright with the First National scenario department, to make the adaptation of "The Butter and Egg Man," which will have Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall in the leading roles. Richard Wallace wlil direct under the production management of Charles R. Rogers. It will go into work upon the completion of "Man Crazy" in which Mackaill and Mulhall are co-featured.

The cast for "The Cohens and the Kellys in Paris" is practically complete, now that Sue Carroll and Kate Price have been signed for important roles. William Beaudine will start next week at Universal City on the picture. In the cast are J. Farrell McDonald, George Sidney, Vera Gordon, Charles Delaney, Gertrude Astor and Gina Carrado.

Eddie Quillan, youthful comedian who appeared with Alice Day in her Pathe comedies, will be co-starred with George Davis in a new Educational-Mermaid comedy which is being produced at the Educational studio. Stephen Roberts is directing the comedy.

The Warner Bros. have acquired the screening rights to Rida Johnson Young's stage play, "Glorious Betsy," which will serve as Dolores Costello's next vehicle. Alan Crosland will do the direction. The script is now being written by Anthony Coldeway. Conrad Nagel will have the leading role.

George Fawcett appears in support of Milton Sills in First National's screen version of "The Valley of the Giants," the novel by Peter B. Kyne. Other additions to the cast are Yola d'Avril, Paul Hurst, Charles Sellen and Phil Brady. Doris Kenyon has the leading feminine role. Charles Brabin is directing the picture, now in the third week of production.

John McDermott is writing the original story and continuity for "Down Went McGinty," the George Sidney-Charlie Murray comedy which E. M. Asher is making for First National release. Work on the picture starts shortly at the First National West Coast studio.

Effie Ellsler, who created the role of Hazel Kirk in "Hazel Kirk," the stage play, is acting in Florence Vidor's "Honeymoon Hate," which Luther Reed is directing for Paramount.

In "Polly of the Movies," a forthcoming First Division Distributors picture which Scott Pembroke will direct, the leading players will be Gertrude Short, Jason Robards, Stuart Holmes, Corliss Palmer, Ross Dione, and Jack Richardson. The picture is being produced at the James Ormont studio. Production is scheduled to begin next week.

Film rights have been purchased by First National to the short story by Ida M. Evans entitled "The Pavillion Queen," which The Country Gentleman published in the July, 1927, issue.

Ed. Lowe, Jr., has just completed the adaptation of "Rebecca O'Brien," the fourth May McAvoy starring vehicle on the Warner Bros. program. The title of the production will probably be changed inasmuch as it has nothing to do with an Irish-Jewish theme. Miss McAvoy is completing "If I Were Single."

R. William Neill will direct "The Fruit of Divorce," a new Gotham production. Percy Marmont is expected to arrive shortly from England, where he has just finished a picture. Production on the Gotham production is sscheduled to begin sometime before October 15.

William Russell will have a prominent part in "The Comeback," Monte Blue's next picture for Warner Bros., which will also co-star Betty Bronson. According to word from the company's studio, the picture will get under way in the near future under Lloyd Bacon's direction. Clyde Cook is also in the player line-up.

The title of George Bancroft's initial starring vehicle for Paramount, under the new contract which he signed recently, will be "Honky Tonk." Josef von Sternberg will direct. This means that "Victory," the Conrad novel, will be postponed until later.

Charles Ray returns to United Artists as leading man in "The Garden of Eden," Corinne Griffith's production. Ray appeared under the United Artists banner in "The Girl I Loved" and "A Tailor Made Man."

John Aasen will appear as one of the giants in the circus scenes of "Side Show," the new Fields-Conklin comedy which went into production at the Paramount studio this week. James Quinn, Jack Luden and George Irving also joined the cast recently.

PANIC

A half-witted fool rises and stampedes to panic a theatre audience. He saw the screen reflection of a momentary blaze in the projection room.

What theatre, you say, can guard against a moron?

Your theatre can. Every theatre can. There can be not even the suggestion of fire in a theatre equipped with the SENTRY SAFETY CONTROL. It acts in a split second, acts automatically.

short features of a brand new type!

¶ Not only with specials like "Beau Geste", "Underworld", "Chang" and "Way of All Flesh", and stars like Harold Lloyd, Clara Bow, Dix, Emil Jannings, Beery-Hatton and the rest, is Paramount setting the business afire this fall. Paramount short features have leaped into instant popularity!

¶ "Your short stuff is distinctive and brilliantly different", writes one enthusiastic exhibitor. "At last I'm getting what I always wanted—Paramount quality in the whole show".

PARAMOUNT-CHRISTIE COMEDIES

BILLY DOOLEY

BOBBY VERNON

JIMMIE ADAMS

NEAL BURNS

ANNE CORNWALL

JACK DUFFY

¶ The Christie brothers are alive that it's a new world, demanding nothing but the very best. No wonder big first run theatres like the Paramount, Rivoli and Rialto, New York; Million Dollar, Los Angeles; Metropolitan, Boston; Stanley Circuit premier houses; and others t.n.t.m., are opening wide and handsome to Paramount-Christie comedies. Did you ever before see letters like these from customers:

¶ "I want to praise Paramount's two-reel comedies thus far released. They are outstanding. Very humorous, a laugh in every move." Montgomery Enterprises, Inc. Montgomery, Ala.

¶ "We have played seven Paramount two-reel comedies, two novelties and a half-dozen cartoons. I feel I ought to make comment on their excellent quality. Christie comedies are far superior this year and nothing has been spared in the way of money to get excellent casts, well dressed sets and sub-titling. Rarely, if ever, have we received such enthusiastic comments from audiences on short features. Such two-reel subjects are God-sends." Lewis Sablosky, Stanley Co. of America.

EDWARD EVERETT HORTON COMEDIES

¶ That droll laugh-maker, Edward Everett Horton, has caught on big all over the country. No one like him on the screen. He supplies a type of swift, smooth, classy comedy that today's smart public loves. Here are some typical comments:

¶ "The Paramount-Horton comedy, 'No Publicity', has just completed a three weeks' run at the Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia, which theatre, by the way, has not run a two-reel comedy in two seasons. Quality, excellent". Stanley Co. of America.

¶ And not only "No Publicity"—but "Behind the Counter", "Find the King", "Horse Shy", "Dad's Choice", and "Scrambled Weddings". Produced by Hollywood Productions.

¶ Krazy Kat cartoons, from the world-famous syndicated newspaper feature, always a high class screen short reeler. ¶ "Exceptionally funny this year," reports Stanley Co. of America. 26 K. K.'s on Paramount's 100% Program. Produced by Charles B. Mintz.

¶ Cartoon antics of Ko-Ko the Clown, Max and the other well-known Inkwell Imps are greeted with roars of delight wherever screened. ¶ "Paramount's Inkwells are superior to anything this cartoon producer ever turned out before," says Stanley Co.'s enthusiastic report on Paramount's whole short features line-up. Produced by Alfred Weiss.

¶ "It marks a new era in short features", said hard-boiled Variety in reviewing Paramount's striking and beautiful novelty, "The Elegy". "Congratulations on your novelty, 'A Short Tail.' Ran it over the Stanley Circuit and audiences applauded it—very unusual for short feature", reports Frank Buhler, managing director. ¶ Different, dramatic gems—Paramount novelties have already made a name for themselves and filled a gap. Besides the two above, watch for "Fantasy", "Toddles", "Frenzy", "Adoration". Produced by Charles B. Mintz. A mark of distinction for the theatre that shows them.

¶ Paramount News has achieved its high ambition. An ambition to serve the industry with a greater news reel, operating on entirely new lines. Organized on improved principles, larger world-wide staff, swifter means of news gathering and forwarding. Exhibitors marvel that a news reel could be so good, are amazed at our record of scoops. But there's no magic in it. Our system of operation produces scoops, exclusive features, lightning fast production of world and local news automatically. No wonder our contracts have already reached record figures. No wonder Paramount News has been the envy and despair of its rivals from the start! Read these comments:

¶ "We didn't have to be sold Paramount News after seeing the first issues. We asked for it. You are setting a pace that the other news reels will find it hard to follow. Emanuel Cohen has always produced a good news reel; now that he has the backing of Paramount, Paramount News will always lead the field." Lago Vista Enterprises, Kissimere, Fla.

¶ "Congratulations on Paramount News, which we have used from the first issue. For the first time to my knowledge, patrons paused to remark on the news reel and especially the beautiful photography." H. W. Robertson, Strand Theatre, Covington, Va.

¶ "Paramount News will unquestionably lead the field as it has always done with its features." Marcus Enterprises, Salt Lake City, Utah.

¶ "Paramount has accomplished the unbelievable by furnishing from the start the finest news reel ever given theatres. It combines with the vital news shots specially arranged subjects that are tremendously interesting". Spyros Skouras, St. Louis, Mo.

¶ "You have achieved a splendid reputation already with Paramount News. Keep it up and Paramount News will lead the world". Frank L. Newman, Los Angeles.

¶ Hundreds of other wires and letters testifying to supremacy of Paramount News in handling not only front page stuff but locals as well. A new and greater news reel is on the job!

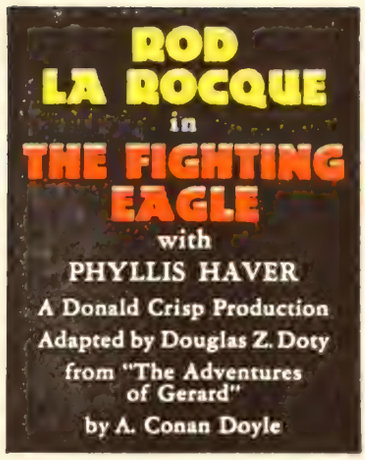
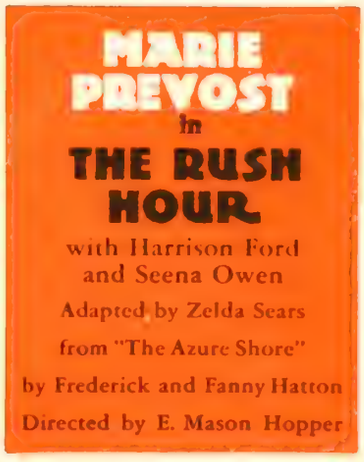
CECIL B. DEMILLE

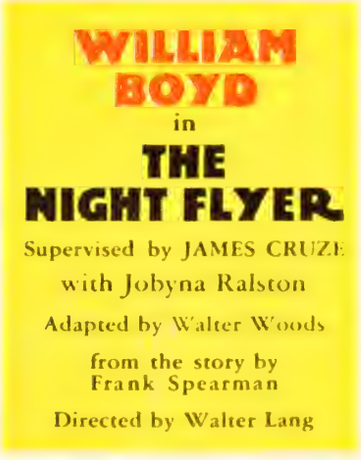
The career of Cecil B. DeMille represents an unparalleled record of glorious achievement. No producer or director has contributed so much to the upbuilding and progress of motion picture entertainment. And now he transcends his accomplishments of the past with a production achievement unprecedented in the history of the business.



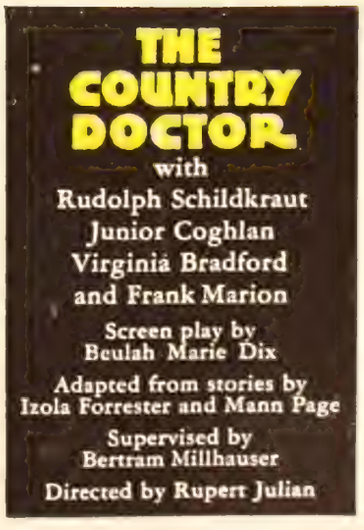
THREE months ago Cecil B. DeMille, after a conference with the executives of Pathe Exchange, Inc., with which his great studio at Culver City, California, became associated through the merger of Pathe and Producers Distributing Corporation, boldly undertook a production task unparalleled and unprecedented in the history of the business.



Plans were laid for the production of twenty-six program pictures embracing stories of an unusual and sensational type, with stars and players of proved reputation and ability; ten big DeMille Studio Specials, based on famous stories and plays offering the maximum in showmanship and exploitation possibilities; and three or more super special road show attractions, including one Cecil B. De Mille personally directed picture.



The entire industry marvelled at the size of the undertaking. In Los Angeles, center of the production activities, sceptics wondered at the mere physical obstacles entailed.



The first move in this gigantic task was to consolidate under one management all the production activities that for the past two years had been distributed between the DeMille Studios, Culver City, and the Metropolitan Studios in Hollywood.

A development of outstanding importance in the work of remoulding the great organization was the perfecting by Mr. DeMille of an association with James Cruze whereby this famous director will contribute to the Pathe-DeMille Program. Backed by the entire resources of the DeMille Studios, Mr. Cruze will undertake the production of six or more high-powered box-office attractions typical of his best. First of the pictures personally directed by James Cruze will be Marie Prevost's initial starring picture of this season, "On To Reno."

In the midst of early production, fire swept the DeMille Studios, completely destroying one big stage, property building, paint shop and equipment valued at more than $200,000. The following day every scene that had been scheduled was taken as if disaster had not touched the studio. And within a week a new great stage, the largest in the world, measuring 300 feet in length and more than 200 feet in width began to take form over the still-hot ashes of the ruins.

Scores of the screen's most successful pictures testify to the showmanship genius of this great director. His first for Pathe will be "On to Reno", starring Marie Prevost.

One of the finest studio organizations in history, the nucleus of which was to be found in the previous DeMille and Metropolitan units, was welded into a greater DeMille Studio, dedicated to the production of screen entertainment of superlative quality.

The first picture of the new organization—Rod La Rocque in "The Fighting Eagle"—a Donald Crisp Production, which had its premiere at the Mark Strand Theatre in New York and was subsequently shown throughout the country, was received with acclaim.

Following are some of the enthusiastic comments of the press:

"A picture play of delightful heroics." N. Y. MIRROR

"A well-directed and pictorially lovely screen melodrama." N. Y. HERALD-TRIBUNE

"Donald Crisp has handled this chronicle with imagination and Rod La Rocque enters into the spirit of the young hussar officer in a delightful fashion." N. Y. TIMES

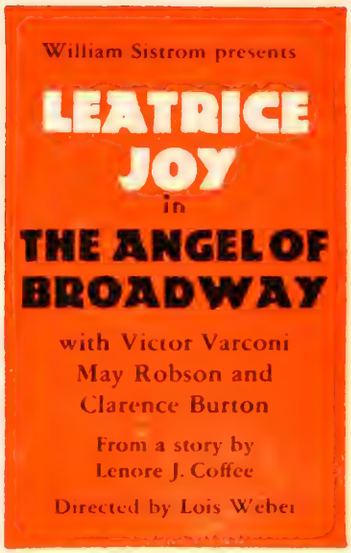
EXHIBITORS DAILY REVIEW

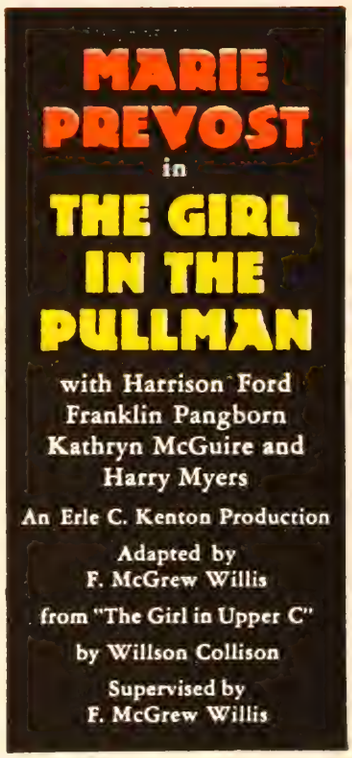
"Enjoyed it as much as any picture we have seen in a long, long while."
N. Y. EVENING WORLD

"Good popular entertainment, excellently mounted and nicely played."
CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER

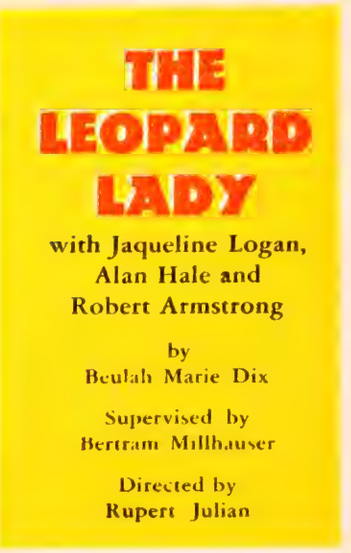
The release of this great attraction early in the fall season as a help to exhibitors exemplifies the showmanship foresight that has marked Mr. De Mille's career in the business.



Then followed "The Country Doctor," a Rupert Julian production under Bertram Millhauser's supervision, featuring Rudolph Schildkraut, Junior Coghlan and two new personalities, Virginia Bradford and Frank Marion.



On the heels of the tremendous success achieved by "The Fighting Eagle", "The Country Doctor" was eagerly booked by first run theatres throughout the country. It registered an instantaneous hit and is rated the greatest rural classic since "Way Down East". Never has a picture received such an avalanche of favorable newspaper comment!



"A tense human drama."
CHICAGO EVENING POST

"A great feature. Directed with rare skill. Schildkraut gives a characterization that will stand out in your minds a long, long time."
CHICAGO TRIBUNE

"A masterful production. Will probably be one of the most popular and successful pictures of recent years."
EUGENE V. BREWSTER

"A picture worth making a special effort to see."
CHICAGO EVENING POST

"The finest rural classic since 'Way Down East'."
CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

"A work of art and fine entertainment. Rudolph Schildkraut's performance is a masterpiece."

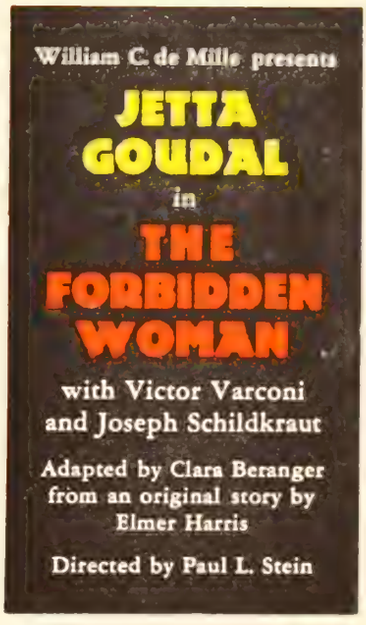
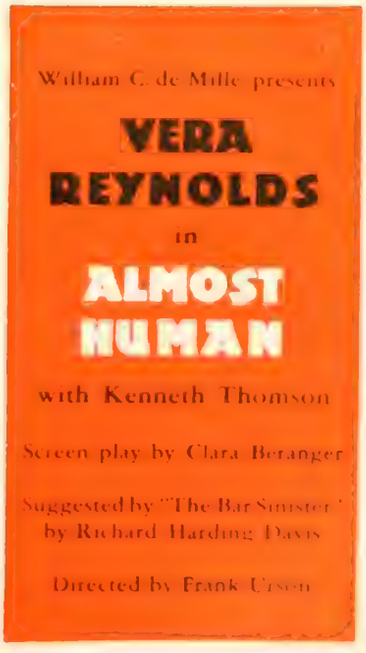
"Splendidly produced and will hold your interest every minute."
CHICAGO EVENING AMERICAN



"If all the pictures were as good as 'The Country Doctor' I wouldn't have the heart to take pay for my job."
CHICAGO HERALD AND EXAMINER



"A fine picture that spells box-office." EXHIBITORS DAILY REVIEW

"One of the most meritorious and genuinely interesting pictures the Palace has shown this season." CLEVELAND PLAIN DEALER

"Rudolph Schildkraut is a credit to the screen and in 'The Country Doctor' he is at his best. Screen entertainment worthy of anyone's time."
CLEVELAND NEWS

These two great attractions are only a slight indication of the bigger things to come, and Pathe Exchange, Inc. as Distributors are proud to pay tribute to Mr. DeMille and his associates for the successful accomplishment of a tremendous production undertaking.

Prints on "The Fighting Eagle", "The Country Doctor", "His Dog", "The Rush Hour", "Almost Human" and the first big Leatrice Joy starring vehicle for the new season, "The Angel of Broadway", have been shipped to all Pathe Exchanges.

In addition to the foregoing array of hits, photography has been completed on "The Wreck of the Hesperus", "The Wise Wife", "The Girl in the Pullman", James Cruze's first production, "On To Reno", "The Forbidden Woman", "Dress Parade", "The Main Event" and "My Friend from India"—a high-powered, diversified group of box-office attractions that represent the superlative in motion picture entertainment.

In the list of Big Attractions now in production are several of actual road show calibre, including "Chicago", from the sensational stage success, "The Blue Danube", "The Leopard Lady", "The Night Flyer", "Let 'Er Go, Gallagher", "Rip Van Winkle" and "A Blonde for a Night".

Here is a production program without parallel in the industry. Motion Picture history is being made and Cecil B. DeMille is writing its most significant page.

MAYNARD SCORES FOR DARING RIDING IN 'RED RAIDERS'

By REGINA CANNON,
Motion Picture Editor N. Y. American

"THE RED RAIDERS" starring Ken Maynard is the film feature at the Hippodrome. Seeing Mr. Maynard for the first time we have come to the conclusion that he is as daring a rider as Tom Mix and as handsome a one as Fred Thomson. Retaining the best features of two famous film horsemen, there is little doubt as to the ultimate fan following Ken will gather unto his celluloid bosom before many more movie moons.

There is much to recommend "The Red Raiders." First of all there is Maynard's reckless riding, with all the dare-devil stunts done in close-up to preclude the "It must be a double" cry of our friends from Missouri. The hero rescues a stage coach, which bit of business has been done in many a wild west film we'll grant you, but never has it been so thrillingly and daringly accomplished as in the picture under consideration.

The scenic effects and photography are excellent and few more beautiful shots have been filmed than those depicting the Indians riding in circular and geometrical designs over the far-reaching hills. Perhaps we are partial to Red Men, but never have we seen anything more interesting than their camps, sign language and war dances shown here.

If there be a fault with "The Red Raiders" it is too much plot. "The Covered Wagon" owed much of its success to the fact that it was an epic, a period in history filled with incident quite unimportant to us but most vital to those who lived in that far-off day. Of course the battle scenes and a little love interest made a "story," but the story was incidental. If "The Red Raiders" dealt with the conquering of the Northwest after the Civil War in an "eventful" rather than a narrative way, the picture would be materially improved. However, as it stands, it is intensely interesting.

Mr. Maynard, as we have said is an excellent rider and a good "broker." He is no disciple of Edwin Booth, but then histrionics are less in demand than horse in a "western."

Ann Drew, buxom and not too young looking, is the heroine, and as such is adequate to perform. Lance J. P. McGowan is convincing as a bad man, as is Chief Yowlache, an Indian spy. Harry Shutan plays comedy relief and is neither comedy nor relief.

"The Red Raiders" are portrayed by real Sioux and Crow Indians and the picture itself is bound to entertain you.

The Handwriting on the Wall

Trade Practice Conference Viewed in Its Bigger Meaning

By William A. Johnston

NO one, at this writing, can foresee the conclusive results of the important trade practice conference now under way in New York.

In spite of the highly able handling of the conference by A. F. Myers of the Federal Trade Commission, and with a better organization of the exhibitor delegates than was to be expected, the event, after all, is an attempt to solve economic problems in a mass meeting.

Theoretically, a successful solution may be possible; practically, it would seem to come forth from such a body only by a miracle.

As we pointed out in last week's editorial the serious trade abuses in any industry are, most often, the surface symptoms of underlying structural disorders.

Certainly that is true of the motion picture industry. And there will not be, because there cannot be, a reordering from the top down.

The government, however, is in earnest, its specifications are clear, and its warning is unmistakable. And it is in this situation that we can see, in any event, a great deal of good that must result from this conference.

It will be plainly evidenced, to all wise enough to see, that the motion picture is a public utility.

If this were a conference on practices in the shoe industry the delibrations would not be featured daily in the newspapers of the metropolis, despite the fact that shoes have a lot to do with the daily life of the human race.

The motion picture has a great deal to do with the public interests; and, consequently, the public interest in the motion picture is bound to be paramount to trade interests.

We, however, in the rough and tough scramble of the film business, have been viewing the matter the other way around.

We have thus far looked upon the trade of the motion picture as a plate of pie to be sectioned off and fed out to the members of the trade family. The apportionment, naturally, has been on a basis of the strength and greed of the appetites served.

But, certainly, the public interest hasn't been considered.

So we find one astounding situation: New York, with its six million souls is called a Jones town; and Philadelphia is a Smith town, and Minneapolis is a Brown town—and so on.

Could anything be more preposterous?

Certainly not. And this mental astigmatism is simply the result of eyes glued constantly on the pie and not at all on the public welfare.

Nor can the blame be placed wholly with the powerful forces—the chain theatres and the producer affiliated theatres.

At the Minneapolis convention several years ago an independent exhibitor, owning, however, all the theatres in one city, was made a hero of and hailed as a martyr because a chain of theatres invaded his town and gave its public a far better house than he chose to give.

That sort of business cannot go on.

Hereafter, when the smallest individual or the greatest chain proposes to give a community a theatre which that community

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

THE industry got together this week in its first real convention, but it took a Trade Practice Conference called by the Government to do it. Producers and exhibitors met face to face and argued out their problems.

There's no mistaking the seriousness of the Conference, but like everything connected with motion pictures it has its human side and its colorful appeal.

ON the exhibitor side, it looked like a real old-time convention so far as personnel went. There were Sydney Cohen, Frank Rembusch, Sam Berman, Charles L. O'Reilly, William A. Dillon, Col. H. A. Cole, R. R. Biechele, H. M. Richey, Joseph M. Seider, Harry M. Crandall, R. F. Woodhull, A. Julian Brylawski, Henry H. Lustig, Glenn Gross, James C. Ritter, Jack Miller, J. J. Harwood, C. E. Williams, Fred Wehrenberg, M. J. O'Toole, M. E. Comerford, George P. Aarons, Henry A. Staab, and others. Several times in the past the exhibitors have tried to hold a truly representative national convention. There's no question about this one.

THE old-time spirit was very much to the fore at the Get-Together Dinner given to the exhibitor delegates by the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce Monday night. Frank Rembusch told the gathering it was his fifty-second birthday, but he doesn't look it. The Indiana warhorse appears younger than ever.

To make the occasion complete, Mayor Jimmie Walker came in to greet his old-time exhibitor associates, and his speech was as brilliant and sparkling as ever.

Some of his sallies were: "I used to leave Tammany Hall to go to an exhibitor meeting to learn politics. It's the only brand of politics I know where a man is a 100 to 1 shot in the morning and 1 to 10 in the afternoon."

Referring to the famous Cohen-Berman-O'Reilly-Walker alliance, he said: "Get the Four Horsemen together again, and I'll not quit."

He urged the exhibitors to organize themselves into a powerful national body, along common-sense business lines. "All the glitter of exhibitor conventions is gone now," he said. "We were young then; perhaps we are not so young now. But at Cleveland in 1920 you could write your own ticket. That was a real convention. I see before me the survivors. You all look as if you were still in business. But you ought to form a grown-up national organization."

THE Mayor convulsed the crowd with his quick repartee. "I don't know," he said, "whether they are still threatening to build a theatre across the street from you."

Somebody in the crowd said: "They have already built it."

The Mayor came back: "Well, if they have, it's the first promise they ever kept."

JULES MICHAELS of Buffalo introduced a humorous element into the T. O. C. C. gathering when he demanded that any producer representatives present be asked to leave, and pointed to Jimmy Grainger, of Fox. A few people took it seriously, but everybody else laughed, including Jimmy.

CHAIRMAN A. F. MYERS, of the Trade Commission, presiding at the Trade Practice Conference, impressed everybody with his absolute impartiality and the ease with which he conducted the meetings. There was no disposition whatever to shut off anybody who wanted to talk, but the Commissioner made it clear that no time would be wasted, and that the many problems would be disposed of as quickly as possible.

ALSO, the absolute democracy of the meeting was impressive. High-salaries film executives and small town exhibitors rubbed shoulders and exchanged views. M. Markham Flannery, director of Trade Practice Conferences for the Commission, called the roll of delegates and each man stood up and identified himself. There were few absentees.

Some of the biggest executives in the industry were asked to speak louder, so the conference reporter could get their names.

"What did you say your name was?" Mr. Flannery inquired of an executive whose salary runs into six figures a year.

THE old-time exhibitor convention atmosphere prevailed for a time on the first day when Sidney Cohen got the floor and read a scorching speech attacking block-booking, producer-theatre-expansion, and Paramount in particular.

There was some opposition to letting Mr. Cohen speak, but he stood his ground until he won out. The independent exhibitor delegation gave him a great hand when he finished.

WILL H. HAYS made an impressive speech on the first day of the Conference. His keynote was the responsibility of the industry to the public and the accuracy of his remarks was easily seen. The New York newspapers gave the Conference lengthy stories, some of them on Page One. This Conference was being held in a room seating only 500 persons, but outside was an invisible audience of millions, watching every move.

Mr. Hays hit the point exactly when he said: "The public, through its loyalty to its most important amusement, stands ready to defend it, if need be, from the small minority that, like the savage, would shoot arrows at the sun to blind it; but that same public, because of that same loyalty, stands ready to destroy this industry if at any time it proves false to its public trust."

IN other industries, the advertising man sits down and talks with the man who makes the product. The maker knows why he made it. There was a reason; and in the discussion the reason comes out and forms the basis of the advertising man's appeal. The maker does not dictate the form of the ad; neither does he attempt to say where it should be placed. That's the job of the ad man; that's what he is hired for, just as the maker's job is to produce the goods, and the distributor's to distribute it.

In this industry there is too much interference with advertising by people who are not qualified.

"THE JAZZ SINGER," Warner Brothers' latest Vitaphone show opening last week at the Warner Theatre for an indefinite run, for the first five or six reels, is just a "nice Jewish picture" and then it blossoms forth into one of the best productions of the year.

Curiously enough the change in "The Jazz Singer" is not due to improvement in acting, tempo, story value or any of the other things that ordinarily go to make or break a picture. It all comes about because Vitaphone is able to bring the Jolson songs and the Jolson personality to a perfect synchronization with the screen.

As a screen player Jolson is pretty bad, but as a singer of his famous songs and as the Cantor rendering "Kol Nedre" he lifts what otherwise would be just a picture into one of the real attractions of the year.

"The Jazz Singer" is also the outstanding example so far, of what can be accomplished in the way of combining motion pictures with music and the voice. Without Vitaphone or some equally adequate "talking machine" device "The Jazz Singer" would have failed dismally except with Jewish audiences and without the machinery to bring the Al Jolson voice to the screen, Mr. Jolson would be a first class flop as a motion picture star.

The picture is, of course, a vehicle for the star. It has been carefully built to utilize all of his musical genius and personality, but this is as it should be. The story is a character study, or if you will a life history, with some liberties, probably, of the star himself.

It is a screen biography, done in a way that opens up untold possibilities for something different in the line of pictures.

Previously attempts at screen biographies have been pretty much flops. Even the immortal Lincoln films have failed. But if Vitaphone (or any of its competitors that measure up to it in quality) were to be used in a life of Lincoln picture we would most certainly have something that would command the greatest attention.

Something of this same sort of thing is done in "The Jazz Singer." Jolson, as the son of the Cantor, is shown in the synagogue singing with his choir. This is a sequence that as done ordinarily wouldn't justify a hundred feet of film and when shown on the screen would possess practically no dramatic values. But with Vitaphone and Jolson the scene is one of the big punches of the film.

Reviewing this picture from ordinary standards is difficult and would most certainly be misleading. There is only one outstanding screen performance and that is Warner Oland's Cantor. Al Jolson is just Al Jolson, which, as done in this film, is plenty, and all the other players are just adequate support.

But "The Jazz Singer" is a real show and certainly a triumph for Vitaphone. If it doesn't have a long run on Broadway we will miss our guess. Of course, New York has quite a few Jewish people and that is going to help.

ARTHUR BRILANT, well and popularly known in film circles, adds another slice to his long and varied experience this week by becoming managing director of Universal's new Boro-Park theatre, Brooklyn. Everybody will wish him much success.

AMONG the many film notables who make occasional pilgrimages to New York is Harry Nolan of Denver. This quiet spoken Westerner is spending some time over at First National. The casual observer might not pick him out as a type from the wild and wooly but all the same he has seen a lot of both the old and the new West.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is in receipt of a considerable number of exhibitor letters expressing alarm over the success of the 16 milimeter films and the plans of various distributors to make available portions of their regular releases to this field.

It is our opinion that the theatre has nothing to fear from this new development. A careful study based on some investigation leads us to believe that the theatre and the home or school will never be in direct competition. The producers catering to the theatre who have signified their intention of entering the small projector field, propose to do so only by reducing negatives of such productions as they may have that have been the rounds of the theatres and it is obvious that such a policy will be imperative since the 16 milimeter field is extremely limited in revenue per booking or sale.

It is also our opinion that the dramatic subject which every exhibitor will agree is the foundation of a theatre's success will never prove popular in the home. All the realism of the motion picture is lost when the image is reduced to the small size necessary in home projectors and then, too, an audience and certain accessories, among which is suitable music, are necessary to put over the photoplay.

This is no attempt to minimize the importance of the home motion picture development or its possibilities along school and educational lines. This field without a doubt has great possibilities but the films that will prove popular will never be those that have made for success in the theatre.

needs and deserves, then no trade practice and no trade power must squelch that enterprise.

This then, will be the salutary lesson of the conference: that the public interests and not merely the trade interests will rule in the future practices of the motion picture industry.

As we say, those wise enough to see will read this handwriting on the wall.

Industry Drafting Practices Code at Trade Parley

Block Booking Main Issue; "Abuse of Circuit Power" Resolution Voted on After Controversy; Contract Committee Approved

A CODE of ethics was being drafted this week by the motion picture industry in New York City, in the presence of Abram F. Myers, of the Federal Trade Commission, and the public.

This meeting was the Trade Practice Conference, the most important event in the industry's history, and probably the turning point in its industrial career.

It was the industry's first real convention and it was being held under Government auspices, with the question of block-booking the main issue.

The block-booking problem was reached on Thursday, through the presentation of an exhibitor resolution which sought to offer a substitute. It was not accepted by the distributors, who announced through S. R. Kent, of Paramount, that they were in favor of the present system, and had been unable to agree upon something to replace it.

Chairman Myers pointed out that the Trade Commission had issued an order against block-booking in the Paramount case, and that it was the Commission's hope that the Trade Practice Conference might be able to agree to specific marketing methods that would conform to the principles of the decision.

He declined to hear arguments in favor of block-booking itself on the ground that the Commission had already rendered its decision.

The independent exhibitor attitude was set forth by H. M. Richey, General Manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O.; while the present system was upheld by Fred Desberg, of Loew's Ohio Theatres, representing theatres affiliated with producer-distributors.

The resolution was finally sent back for redrafting, and the consideration of the whole block-booking question was continued.

Vote on Circuit Resolution

The first vote of the Conference came on the independent exhibitor resolution aimed at "the abuse of circuit buying power." It was the subject of heated controversy, and as finally put to roll call vote, it read:

"Resolved that the allocation, leasing or licensing of films to any exhibitor or group of exhibitors without affording to all competing exhibitors equal opportunity to bid for such, shall be deemed an unfair trade practice; provided that this shall not apply to producer wholly owned theatres."

All representatives of the producer, distributor and affiliated groups present voted "no," while the unaffiliated exhibitors all voted "yes," in this roll call vote. Following is a tabulation:

	For	Against	Absent
Producers	0	31	5
Distributors	0	13	12
Affiliated exhibitors	0	44	15
Unaffiliated exhibitors	43	0	13
Total	43	88	45

Under the ruling of Commissioner Myers, printed in full elsewhere, the significance of numerical majority is destroyed by the structure of the industry. In other words, admission of affiliated theatre delegates gave a preponderance of voting power to the producer-distributor group. It would, therefore, be necessary to report the sentiment of each group to the Commission.

The delegates were from every branch of the industry. It was the first time in history that the business had assembled in a real convention.

Producer, distributor, independent exhibitor and affiliated exhibitor met and argued out their points of view in the presence of the Government and the public.

In the background was the plain intimation hat the industry would regulate its business practices, decide which are fair and which are not, or it would come under some sort of definite Governmental regulation.

The first real battle of the Trade Practice Conference was precipitated Wednesday on the resolution of the independent exhibitors aimed at the buying power of the circuits. After a long debate, in which such representatives as S. R. Kent, Gabriel Hess, Felix Feist, Lou Metzger, Siegfried Hartman, and others for the distributors; and Sydney S. Cohen, A. Julian Brylawski, Leo Brecher, Charles L. O'Reilly, Joseph M. Seider, Frank J. Rembusch for the independent exhibitors; and Edward Sonenschein and D. A. Harris, for the affiliated exhibitors. Chairman Myers made a significant statement in which he said that the exhibitor resolution as drawn would probably be considered too broad for enforcement by the Trade Commission.

The resolution went back for redrafting, and the debate was resumed on Thursday. Up to this point the question of block-booking, considered the main issue of the Conference, had not been reached.

Conference Purpose Outlined

The sessions got under way on Monday, with the opening statement by Commissioner Myers, defining the purpose of the Conference and containing, among other things, this important paragraph:

"In a broader sense it is a gathering of the industry for self-regulation in respect of certain practices which have given rise to complaint and which but for the corrective action here to be taken might lead to regulation by public authority."

He pointed out that the recommendations of the Conference would be put in the form of resolutions to be transmitted by the Commissioner to the full Trade Commission, with his observations, for their action. Any resolution, approved by the Commission, would then be enforced by it.

There was also another significant paragraph in the Commissioner's remarks, which stressed the seriousness of the meeting:

"Resolutions which are not approved and and at the same time are not positively disapproved may be received by the Commission as the expression of the trade and enforced or not according as the circumstances dictate when and if infractions occur."

(The complete text of Commissioner Myers' address appears elsewhere in this issue.)

Chairman Myers then invited Will H. Hays to the platform. Mr. Hays spoke of the industry's progress, its efforts to improve its standards, and pledged its aid in making the Conference a success.

Sydney Cohen asked for the floor, and after a brief controversy, the matter was put to the vote of the Conference and Mr. Cohen was given the opportunity to address the meeting.

Cohen Appeals for Enforcement

He appealed to the Government to enforce its cease and desist order against Paramount; charged that there was [illegible] block-booking participated in by Paramount, M-G-M and United Artists; attacked mergers, and urged that producer-distributors be compelled to divest themselves of all theatres except exploitation first runs.

Chairman Myers then suggested that the machinery of the Conference be organized by exhibitors, producers, and distributors, meeting in separate groups, preparing their resolutions and then exchanging copies prior to consideration by the whole Conference.

At the afternoon session, [illegible] sumed at five o'clock, while the independent exhibitors were [illegible]

R. H. Cochrane, chairman of the Distributor's Group, Trade Practice Conference.

Louis B. Mayer, chairman of the Producer's Group, Trade Practice Conference

R. F. Woodhull, chairman of the Independent Exhibitor's Group, Trade Practice Conference.

seven resolutions, mostly relating to production problems, were read, and all adopted, two with reservations.

The chairmen of the groups were: Louis B. Mayer, producers; R. H. Cochrane, distributors; and R. F. Woodhull, independent exhibitors.

There was a short session of the whole Conference on Tuesday, the exhibitors asking for more time in which to prepare their resolutions.

The exhibitor subconference lasted through the day on Tuesday and went into a night session, at which they got themselves thoroughly organized and began to function with precision.

Six resolutions were adopted. These concerned; non-theatricals, showing of films in auditoriums, etc., by producer-distributors in competition with regular theatres; the resolutions aimed at "the abuse of buying power by the circuits"; condemning coercive block-booking; indorsing the Commission's findings against Paramount; and condemning theatre acquisition by producer-distributors; and denouncing the standard exhibition contract.

Resolutions Pass Unprotested

The independent exhibitor group came into the Conference Wednesday noon with the announcement that certain speakers would be assigned to present the exhibitors' views on the question as they arose, instead of permitting indiscriminate debate.

Chairman Myers announced that unfinished business from Monday's session would be taken up first.

A series of distributor resolutions was passed without protest. These included a list of "don'ts"; branding free shows unfair; condemning bicycling; cheating on percentage reports; bribing either by salesmen or exhibitors; holding prints; switching; overbuying and "fake" sales to avoid contracts.

The distributors withdrew their resolution which would have declared unfair arbitrary withdrawal of contract applications by exhibitors.

The following distributor resolutions were resubmitted to committee on objections by exhibitors: refusing to lift film shipments; use of signed applications to juggle film prices by either party; advertising subsequent runs during priority runs; booking combines and the cutting of pictures by exhibitors.

The last named practice brought considerable debate, the exhibitors urging, through Mr. Brylawski and others, that it was sometimes necessary for exhibitors to eliminate scenes in order to meet the views of organizations or individuals in their towns.

The first resolution, presented by exhibitors and relating to non-theatricals, brought a suggestion from R. H. Cochrane that it would take a long time to argue that matter, and asking for a recess for lunch. Several exhibitors immediately protested.

S. R. Kent, of Paramount, pointed out to the Commissioner that the distributors had received the exhibitors' resolutions only two hours before, and that some of them, including the one against compulsory block-booking, would change the whole status of the industry which it had taken twenty years to build.

He declared that the question of block-booking could ont be settled in two hours.

Block-Booking Major Issue

Chairman Myers took a hand at this point and declared that it had been known to everybody since July that block-booking was to be the major issue of the Conference.

"I hope," said the Commissioner," that the consideration of block-booking has not been postponed until two hours ago."

Finally, however, the Commissioner granted a recess, as he had done on the previous day to the exhibitors, and in order for the distributors to name their speakers.

At 2.30 o'clock the sessions were resumed, with the room crowded to capacity and everybody expecting fireworks.

The non-theatrical resolution, in the form proposed by exhibitors, was not acceptable to distributors, and Gabriel Hess, for the latter, proposed an arbitration method to take care of specific complaints from exhibitors as they arose. This was not acceptable to the exhibitor group and the resolution was sent back to the joint exhibitor-distributor committee for reconsideration.

Exhibitor Resolution No. 2 was attacked by Felix Feist, of M-G-M, on the ground that it prevented the distributor from renting halls, etc., to show pictures in towns where the distributor was shut out.

Mr. Brylawski, for the exhibitors, answered that the exhibitor could not buy all the product of all distributors, and necessarily had to leave out some pictures, under the block-booking system.

The Commissioner gave it as his opinion that the resolution as drafted might be considered restraint of trade, so it was sent back for redrafting.

Circuit Resolution Debated

The exhibitor resolution against the circuits brought a long debate which lasted until six o'clock.

For the distributors, Siegfried Hartman, of Universal, read a decision of the United States Supreme Court, which, he said, had already established as legal, similar buying power by groups or chains in other industries.

Sydney Cohen urged that the resolution was absolutely necessary to insure the business welfare of the independent exhibitor. Denny Harris of Pittsburgh declared it would curtail product and was not clear in its provisions.

The position of the theatres affiliated with distributors was stated by Edward Sonenschein, of Lubliner & Trinz, while Charles L. O'Reilly, of New York, stressed the independent attitude.

Chairman Myers pointed out that what the Commission was after was the facts, and questioned the speakers specifically on the alleged unfair practices of the circuits in using their buying power.

Mr. Rembusch of Indiana declared that the independents, in certain cases, were not able to buy product. This view was emphasized by Harry Suchman of New York, who denied there was any such thing as competition in zones where the circuits operate.

In Buffalo, according to Sidney B. Pfeiffer, attorney representing the exhibitors of that zone, a booking combine of independents had been refused service.

Controversy On Exhibitors' Resolutions

Chairman Myers questioned Mr. Sonenschein, of Lubliner & Trinz, on the nature of the preferential treatment given theatres affiliated with producers and how the prices were determined.

Mr. Seider of New Jersey declared that there was no such thing as an open door policy and that exhibitors were asking the Government to provide real competition in the industry.

Mr. Kent of Paramount, answering Mr. Pfeiffer and others, declared that the booking combine in Buffalo had been formed to force down film rentals and was therefore denied product.

Commissioner Quizzes Kent

The Commissioner asked Mr. Kent what the situation was when an independent theatre or chain outbid one of the distributor's own theatres for product. He replied that Paramount saw no reason why it should not give preference to its own houses or those affiliated, but said in some instances the product had gone to the independents.

Leo Brecher of New York read a carefully prepared argument. There were, he said, 543 independent theatres in New York City and 82 circuit houses, 51 operated by Loew, 18 by Keith and Proctor, and 18 by Fox. These, he charged, got the cream of the product, which was divided among them, not only for first run but in some instances for neighborhood second runs.

Mr. Brecher declared he was not arguing for a penalty on big business. He insisted, however, that product should not be sold to the circuits to the exclusion of the independent houses.

In part, Mr. Brecher said:

"That there is a deliberate plan afoot to restrict the development of the motion picture industry so that control may be lodged in the hands of a small group is evident even on the most superficial observation of the recent history and present tendencies in the business. And the more thorough the study, the more certain the conviction that unless steps are taken immediately to remedy the situation, we shall witness the disappearance of the independently operated theatre, and the independent production of motion pictures, and the concentration of the production of motion pictures as well as the operation of theatres for the exhibition of motion pictures in the hands of a small and closely connected group."

Mr. Kent, in reply, stated that he had worked for four months in connection with the formation of a pool of independent houses in New York City, but it had fallen through because not enough independent exhibitors would join it. An independent exhibitor was promoting the deal and had approached him on the subject of product, Mr. Kent added.

Brecher's Analysis

Mr. Brecher denied that he had ever been asked to join such a pool, and other New York exhibitors said they had never heard of it.

Chairman Myers gave to the Conference a statement of his views on the resolution against the circuits and suggested that the wording of the measure be revamped by the exhibitors.

This statement by the Chairman was one of the most important of the Conference. He pointed out that he was only one member of the Trade Commission, and that his attitude would not necessarily be binding on the whole Commission. However, what he said, clearly indicated his official attitude.

He declared that it had not hitherto been considered a violation of law for a manufacturer to "expand perpendicularly, rather than horizontally," and to enter other branches of the same industry.

Ordinarily, a manufacturer could refrain from selling to any person or firm for his own reasons.

In the picture industry, however, he observed, the product was "distinct" and copyrighted, obtainable only from specific producers and not available in the open market like other commodities.

The resolution, as worded, would be unenforceable by the Commission, he added, as his opinion. He was inclined to believe that it was "a little too broad," and suggested that it be clarified with regard to certain phrases such as "equal runs."

The Commissioner further indicated that it might be his belief that favoritism was being shown by distributors to a select class of exhibitors, and not so much to affiliated exhibitors, in view of the fact that the financial holdings of distributors in some affiliated theatres was often very small.

Following is the text of the first six resolutions prepared by the independent exhibitor division for submission to the Trade Practice Conference:

1. RESOLVED, that the solicitation or sales of films for non-theatrical uses, in competition with regularly operated theatres, is an unfair trade practice. (Speakers: A. Julian Brylawski, H. M. Richey.)

2. RESOLVED, that the exhibition of films for profit in any auditorium, either public or private or in meeting places, tents, wagons or free show in competition with any regularly operated theatre by producer-distributor, corporation or their agents, is an unfair practice. (Speakers: A. Julian Brylawski, H. M. Richey.)

3. WHEREAS, it is the opinion of this conference that the major issue now facing the industry is the unfair trade practice of circuits misusing their buying power, and

WHEREAS, it is the opinion of this conference that priority of run is a commodity that should be competed for on an open market by each individual theatre, and

WHEREAS, this abuse of buying is rapidly making it impossible for the independent exhibitor to secure productions on an equal run basis regardless of his willingness or ability to pay fair and reasonable price for same, and

WHEREAS, this inability to compete with this priority run is fast leading to the elimination of the independent theatre and the consequent trustification of the industry, Now therefore be it

RESOLVED, That each theatre in any given zone or radius shall be considered a separate unit irrespective of the purchasing power which any of the competing theatres may have by reason of affiliation direct or indirect with theatres in another zone or with producing or distributing organization, and each theatre in every zone or district in competition with each other shall, upon demand, be entitled to have the product of every producer on an equal run

56 Representatives in Independent Exhibitor Group

THEATRE owners have 56 representatives in the Trade Practice Conference. There are 31 zones represented in this division. Butte, Montana, and Minneapolis did not send delegates, and Atlanta, Cincinnati and San Francisco sent one delegate each, although each zone is entitled to two. Salt Lake City is represented by Proxy by R. F. Woodhull, and Sidney Pfeifer, attorney, of Buffalo, represents by Proxy Jules Michaels and A. C. Hayman, Buffalo delegates.

The list of exhibitor delegates follows:

Albany—L. A. Buettner, Cohoes, N. Y., and Meyer Schine, Gloversville, N. Y. Atlanta—S. H. Borisky, Chattanooga, Tenn. Boston—Stanley Sumner, Cambridge, Mass., and Nathan Yamins, Fall River, Mass. Buffalo—Jules Michaels, and A. C. Hayman (Sidney Pfeifer, attorney, Buffalo, by Proxy, representing all).

Butte, Montana—None present. Charlotte, N. C.—Charles W. Picquet, Pinehurst, N. C. Chicago—Ludwig Siegel, Chicago, Jack Miller, Chicago. Cincinnati—A. Hettesheimer, Cincinnati. Cleveland—J. J. Harwood, Cleveland, H. H. Lustig, Cleveland.

Dallas—H. A. Cole, Dallas, Sam Hefley, Cameron, Tex. Denver—E. A. Bishop, Denver, Max Shubach, Denver. Des Moines—E. P. Smith, Fort Dodge, Iowa, Harry M. Weinberg, Des Moines.

Detroit—James C. Ritter, Detroit, Glenn A. Cross, Battle Creek, Mich. Indianapolis—Billy Connery, Marion, Ind., Frank J. Rombusch, Indianapolis. Kansas City, Mo.—R. R. Biechele, Kansas City, Kan., A. F. Baker, Kansas City, Kan. Los Angeles—N. B. Bernstein, President, Los Angeles M. P. T. O., Los Angles. Memphis-Little Rock—Cecil W. Cupp, Arkadelphia, Ark. Milwaukee—W. A. Bauer, Milwaukee, A. C. Gutenberg, Milwaukee. Minneapolis—None present. New Haven—J. W. Walsh, Hartford, Conn., Joseph Shulman, Hartford, Conn.

New Orleans—D. L. Suddath, Natchitoches, La., C. J. Goodwin, Bastrop, La. New Jersey—Sidney Samuelson, Newton, N. J., Joseph M. Seider, Heightstown, N. J. New York—J. Arthur Hirsch, New York City, Harry Suchman, New York City. Oklahoma City—E. W. Johnson, Tulsa, F. B. Pickrel, Ponca City, Okla.

Omaha—C. E. Williams, Omaha, S. F. Kennedy, Broken Bow, Neb. Philadelphia—E. J. Goldman, Philadelphia, Lowen Pizor, Philadelphia. Pittsburgh—Nathan Friedberg, Pittsburgh, Anthony P. Jim, Pittsburgh. Portland, Oregon—C. T. Woodlaw, Portland. St. Louis—Oscar C. Lehr, St. Louis, Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis. Salt Lake City—Poxy by Mr. Woodhull. San Francisco—Morris Gallos, San Francisco, Charles Michaels, San Francisco. Seattle—Ray A. Grombacher, Spokane, Wash., J. M. Hone, Seattle. Washington, D. C.—Herman Blum, Baltimore, J. Louis Rome, Baltimore.

Exhibition Contract Will Be Revised

basis, allocated among such competing houses on an equitable purchasing basis, taking into consideration the size, location and other local elements of each such house.

(a) All protection shall be limited and confined to the competing zone or district in which the particular theatre is located.

(b) Any violation of the above rules shall be deemed an unfair trade practice. (Speakers: Sydney S. Cohen, Harry Suchman, Charles L. O'Reilly, Flint.)

4. WHEREAS, The Federal Trade Commission, after an investigation of six years, covering various practices and methods pursued in the motion picture industry, in July, 1927, handed down an order declaring coercive block-booking to be an unfair trade practice; therefore be it

RESOLVED, that this Conference hereby endorses the said findings of the Commission, and that these findings are in accord with the sentiments of this Conference, that coercive Block-Booking is an unfair trade practice, and it is further

RESOLVED, that as a constructive and practical suggestion for the carrying out of the spirit of this order, all distributors be compelled to furnish the exhibitors with the quotation on each and every picture offered for sale, with the exhibitor having the privilege of selecting any of these pictures at an agreed price. However, if the exhibitor feels that more than one, most, or all of any group of pictures are of such a quality as to be desired by the public patronizing his theatre, then and in that case the distributor should be permitted to sell to the said exhibitor more than one, most, or all of said group of pictures; provided further, however, that no inducement greater than a Ten (10%) Per Cent discount be allowed, for such quantity sale. (Speakers: H. M. Richey, Joseph M. Seider, Nathan Yamins, Sam Borisky.)

5. WHEREAS, the Federal Trade Commission after an investigation of six years, covering various trade practices and methods pursued in the motion picture industry, in July, 1927, handed down an order affecting the question of Producer-Distributor theatre operation, it is hereby

RESOLVED, that this conference hereby endorses the said findings of the Commission, and that the findings are in accord with the sentiments of this conference upon the subject covered by same, and it is further

RESOLVED, that the construction, acquisition and/or operation, directly or indirectly by means of subsidiaries or any affiliations whatsoever, of theatres by producers and or distributors is hereby declared to be an unfair trade practice. (Speakers: Sydney S. Cohen, Frank J. Rembusch.)

6. WHEREAS, it has been shown by past experience that the present Standard Exhibition Contract now being used by the members of the M. P. P. D. A. contains clauses which are inequitable and which work hardships upon the exhibitors, and

WHEREAS, it is the aim and purpose of exhibitors to obtain the best possible attractions for the public, and under terms and conditions so as best to serve the public well, and

WHEREAS, under the present conditions under which film is bought and sold, the exhibitor is not certain as to what pictures will be delivered to him and under what conditions, and at what times, because of indefinite road show provisions and other indefinite and inequitable clauses, and,

WHEREAS, under the present practice the exhibitor seemingly is given some rights but no corresponding remedies to enforce these rights under the contract,

AND WHEREAS, this Standard Exhibition contract is the sole and only instrument by means of which an Exhibitor can lease motion picture films.

NOW THEREFORE, be it resolved that this condition constitutes an unfair trade practice. (Speakers: A. Julian Brylawski, Sydney Samuelson, Joseph M. Seider, Harry Suchman.)

Moved by Brylawski. Seconded by Samuelson—Seider—Suchman.

Numerical Majority Out

When the question of admitting the exhibitor delegates affiliated with producers or distributors came up, Commissioner Myers read a statement which defined the voting procedure in the Trade Practice Conference.

In this statement, the Commissioner noted that it would be necessary, because of the complicated structure of the industry, the taking of votes based on numerical majority would be futile, "by what seems to be an overflow of representation on one side."

It would, therefore, be necessary to report the sentiments of each group to the Commission and let the Commission decide the preponderance of sentiment.

The Commissioner's statement on this important matter follows in full:

"The plan for representation at this convention approved by the Commission was a paper plan, and our knowledge of the organization of the industry was very largely confined to what was set up in that plan which Mr. Flannery presented.

"I have been informed, and I assume the information is accurate, that the affiliated exhibitors represented something in excess of 50 per cent of the seating capacity of the country. That was something of a revelation to me.

"Of course, the Commission could hardly afford to take these matters in advisement without knowing the percentage in so vast and important a part of the industry, and that has raised in my mind a question regarding balloting on contested measures which may come before the conference, and that is a bridge we will have to cross.

"The trade practice conferences heretofore held have related only to one branch of the industry, usually the manufacturing or producing branch. This is the first instance of a trade practice conference involving all the elements, producing, distributing and exhibiting, and presents a unique problem in the matter of voting.

"There has been no special effort to maintain balance, and even if there had been that balance probably would have been destroyed by what seems to be an overflow of representation on one side.

"It is apparent that it would be futile to say that the axiom of this conference depended on a numerical vote. The purpose of the vote is to advise the Federal Trade Commission as to the sentiment of the trade on measures coming before the conference.

"To achieve this purpose it will be necessary to report to the Commission not only the position of the several groups as groups, but also the sentiment within each group. I think, therefore, that the only fair way to handle the matter, the only way in which to give the Commission a fair picture of the sentiment in this conference, is to call the roll of contestant matters by groups.

"First the producers, the distributors, the unaffiliated exhibitors and the affiliated exhibitors.

"The commission will then have to resolve the question of preponderance of sentiment on the roll call thus taken, and with proper allowance for the questions of interest, and under that arrangement the affiliated exhibitors may participate; they may make their position known and their position will be taken into account, and this will, of course, necessarily destroy the significance of a numerical majority on any measure coming before the conference.

"I arrive at these conclusions after some thought. I think they are fair and hope they will amend themselves to the conference."

Following are the distributors' resolutions passed at the trade conference on Wednesday:

RESOLUTION NUMBER 7: The practice of transferring title to a theatre without making an honest and sincere effort for the transferring at the same of existing contracts, is an unfair trade practice.

RESOLUTION NUMBER 8: The purchasing of photoplays for a specific theatre which photoplays are used in other theatres

Exhibition Contract and Arbitration Rules To Be Revised by Committee

THE first important achievement of the Conference was the decision on Thursday to submit the present standard exhibitor's contract to arbitration by a committee of seven.

This resolution was introduced by Charles C. Pettijohn, of the Hays organization, and provided that the disputed clauses in the contract and revision of the arbitration rules be left to a committee of three exhibitors, three representatives of producer-distributors, and a seventh to be chosen unanimously by the other six.

In case they cannot agree, the resolution provided that the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court be asked to name the seventh arbiter.

The Pettijohn resolution, after some debate, was accepted by the independent exhibitor delegation and the whole conference.

Government to Enforce Trade Code

FOLLOWING is the opening address made by Abram F. Myers, of the Federal Trade Commission, at the opening of the Trade Practice Conference:

"It is a very great pleasure to welcome the delegates to this the most representative gathering of the motion picture industry ever assembled.

"This meeting was called at the suggestion of the Federal Trade Commission and in a measure is the outgrowth of the Commission's proceeding against the Famous Players-Lasky Company.

"In a broader sense it is a gathering of the industry for self-regulation in respect of certain practices which have given rise to complaint and which but for the corrective action here to be taken might lead to regulation by public authority.

"It is the policy of the Federal Trade Commission to encourage self-government in industry, and to avoid superimposed governmental regulation whenever possible, because it realizes that those who are best acquainted with the peculiar problems of an industry are best equipped to govern it.

"To date the Commission has held twenty-three successful trade practice conferences which have resulted in the adoption of codes of fair practice in as many industries. The ethical standards so adopted are much better calculated to meet the needs of those industries than any that could have been prescribed by the Commission without the cooperation of the industries involved.

"Not only have the results been good from the standpoint of meeting the peculiar needs of those industries, but much litigation, annoyance and expense has been saved the industries and the Commission. As the result of the recent trade practice conference of the correspondence school industry the Commission has dismissed fifty proceedings in one stage or another, the concerns involved having squared the account by subscribing to a code of fair practice which they helped to create.

Commission's Purpose to Aid

"Self-regulation is a relative term, however, and does not mean that an industry may regulate its practices solely in its own interest and without regard to the rights of the public. It is obvious that those who cry loudest against government in business do so with mental reservation, since to take all government out of business would mean to repeal all incorporation laws and to withdraw tariff protection and many other privileges which are purely governmental in character.

"What we mean by self-regulation is voluntary conformity to standards of fair dealing and the law. It is the purpose of the Commission to aid in the reconciliation of business and the law in every proper way.

"It would be folly to attempt to minimize the importance of the public interest in the conduct and regulation of the motion picture industry. Great as I knew the industry to be, I was astonished to learn that it is rated fourth among the industries of the United States; that it includes more han 20,000 theatres; that the total invesment of the industry is in the neighborhood of $1,500,000,000 and rapidly growing; that more than 7,000,000 people attend these exhibitions daily; and that the daily admissions amout to more than $2,000,000.

"So potent a factor is this great industry in the economic, family and social life of the country that its proper conduct is a matter of the gravest public concern.

"Fortunately the motion picture industry has recognized its peculiar obligation to the public in the suppression of salacious pictures and in many other ways. Far beyond the most of our industries this industry has shown an aptitude for self-control. The trade organizations in the several branches of the industry, the local film boards of trade and the arbitration boards all attest your zeal and capacity for what the international statesmen call 'self-determination.' Considering the comparative youth of the industry, its tremendous growth and conflicting interests, these achievements merit admiration and have mine.

"In view of the magnitude of this accomplishment it does not detract from the credit due that the machinery may have developed a few squeaks or that some things remain to be done.

"To meet the situation for which the meeting was called it was necessary that it should be a truly representative gathering. In an industry so vast any meeting would have to be on some basis of representation, at least so far as voting is concerned. To secure proper representation for unaffiliated exhibitors presented a difficult problem. Mr. Flannery, Director of Trade Practice Confeernces, after consultation with leaders in all three branches of the industry, reported a plan for regional representation which was unanimously approved by the Commission.

Selection of Delegates

"As you all know the United States has been divided into thirty-two commercial zones in each of which is a film board of arbitration composed of three distributor members and three exhibitor members. According to my information the exhibitor members are selected in each zone by the local theatre owners organization from among the exhibitors not affiliated with any producer or distributor.

"The Commission, therefore, appealed to the exhibitor members of the several arbitration boards and to the local exhibitor associations, through the secretaries of the several film boards of trade, to apprise the unaffiliated exhibitors of the forthcoming conference and to advise them to select two delegates to represent them at the conference.

"The letters sent out by Mr. Flannery were definite and specific and made plain that the delegates are to have no affiliation of any kind with producers or distributors and that one delegate from each zone must represent chains of theatres consisting of groups of five or more and that the other delegate must be selected from among the owners of one, or less than five, theatres.

"It will be recognized that this is the only practicable method of selecting delegates from the vast number of unaffiliated exhibitors; that it is eminently fair; and that the delegates so selected are in fact truly representative and qualified to record the sentiments of all divergent interests among exhibitors of this class.

"It is natural that such a gathering should spur certain interests to seek not only the recognition and protection to which they are entitled but also preferences and advantages beyond their due. I believe, however, that when the conference begins its work the delegates will be governed by a spirit of moderation and fair play and will not endanger the success of the undertaking by obstructive tactics, or by advocating measures outside the purview of the meetings, or by selfish insistence on measures to which they are not fairly entitled.

Would Halt Litigation

"This affair has attracted much attention and the public and the press will note well what occurs here. Whatever resolutions are adopted and whatever steps are taken must represent the free expression of the majority of the conference." Any attempt to control the deliberations of this assembly, or to prevent free discussion, or to obstruct progress must be answered for in the court of public opinion.

"I have said that the meeting in a measure grows out of the proceeding against the Famous Ployers-Lasky Company. In that case the Commission entered an order, binding on the company just named, regarding the practice known as block-booking. It was known to the Commission that the practice was not peculiar to the Famous Players Company, but was more or less general in the industry. One of the main objects of this meeting is to enable the industry, if possible, to adopt some arrangement regarding the marketing of films which will be in keeping with the spirit of the order and make unnecessary further litigation on this subject.

"The order requires the respondents in the case to cease and desist 'from leasing or offering to lease for exhibition in a theatre or theatres motion picture films in a block or group of two or more films at a designated lump sum price for the entire block or group only, and requiring the exhibitor to lease all such films or be permitted to lease none; and from leasing or offering to lease for exhibition such motion picture films in a block or group of two or more at a designated lump sum price for the entire block or group and at separate and several prices for separate and several films, or for a number or numbers thereof less than the total number, which total or lump price and separate and several prices shall bear to each other such relation as to operate as an unreasonable restraint upon the freedom of an exhibitor to select and lease for use and exhibition only such film or films of such block or group as he may desire and prefer to procure for exihibition; or shall bear such relation to each other as to tend to require an exhibitor to lease such entire block or group or forego the lease of any portion or portions thereof; or shall bear such relation to each other that the effect of such proposed contract for the lease of such films may be substantially to lesesn competition or tend to create a monopoly in any part of the certain line of commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, involved in said proposed sale, to-wit: the business of the production, distribution and exhibition of motion picture films to the public, or the business of production and distribution, or of production or distribution of moving picture films for public exhibition.

"Judging from the clippings and correspondence this order was favorably received by the public and by a considerable portion of the trade. There is abundant evidence of a widespread and deepseated conviction that films ought to be marketed under any plan which makes it incumbent upon an exhibitor to purchase films that he does not want in order to acquire films that he does want, because the exhibitor is best acquainted with the tastes, preferences and prejudices of his patrons, knows best what will please and what will offend.

Lively Public Interest

"These correspondents and editorial writers appear to feel that to afford to the exhibitor the freedom which he should have in the selection of films acceptable to his audience, he should be relieved of the loss involved in shelving an undesirable picture on which he must pay the full rental in addition to paying for a substitute picture. The exhibitor, they contend, cannot always withstand the economic pressure to show the undesirable film, particularly if he is operating a small neighborhood theatre. You will note, therefore, that there is a lively public interest in the question of block-booking aside from the possible effect of the practice in restraining trade by monopolizing the playing time of the theatres and thereby excluding the small producer making only an occasional picture, although that picture may be of high quality.

"I lay these thoughts before you as an epitomization of the many expressions that have come to the attention of the Commission since the entry of the order in the Famous Players-Lasky Case.

"I am acquainted with the historical background of block-booking, and with the practical difficulties involved in the abandonment or modification of the system [illegible] the problem

Text of Hays' Speech at Conference

ON the opening day of the Trade Practice Conference, Will H. Hays made an address at the invitation of Commissioner Myers. It follows:

"The courtesy of the Commissioner in suggesting comments from me at the opening of this Conference is appreciated. Speaking for the industry, I thank you for your participation in this important occasion and for your expressions of confidence.

"The motion picture industry is peculiarly a product of the sunlight. It has survived and grown and thrived in the light of public favor. It is a great public enterprise, publicly conducted. Every man in the picture business, whether as producer, distributor, or exhibitor can tell of the eager, constant, active particpation of the public in every branch of the industry. These same men can also testify that the whole design of every process in the industry is to meet and to gain public approbation. It is fitting and desirable, therefore, that we should take advantage of every opportunity such as this one. We welcome this setting provided by the Federal Trade Commission to disclose the whole workings of the industry to strictest public scrutiny. As strong, bright white lights are an essential and inherent necessity of our production, so are they useful here and now. We act under a constant sense of our responsibility to the unprecedentedly huge world-wide public that we serve, and by whose approval we live.

"Men of the industry in this room represent investments of more than two billion dollars—dollars of hundreds of thousands of stockholders and owners. They represent the results of lives of hard work, thrift and sacrifice. They represent essential public service. This meeting of responsible business men and women, gathered for a responsible purpose—producers, distributors, exhibitors and representatives of the public—responding to an invitation of a governmental body to discuss and settle among themselves trade practices that have developed in the life of their business, will, of course, develop a succession of formulae that will bring better service to the public.

Structure Rests on Public Favor

"Certainly nothing will be done that is against public policy. There will be discussion of profits and losses, which is proper. Every branch of the industry wants every other branch to prosper, and the whole structure rests upon the favor of the public. If the public is pleased, the entire industry thrives and grows. Such has been its history and its experience.

"Thirty-one years ago the first motion picture was shown as a form of public entertainment. It caught the public fancy at once and solely as an amusement enterprise grew with incredible rapidity. Within a brief space of time, to its own amazement—this new thing developed from a peep show into one of the ten leading industries in the United States—an industry, a profession, an art, and immeasurable social force.

"In the beginning there has been the inevitable chaos. In the earlier years the mere physical and mechanical expansion of the business of making and selling and showing motion pictures was so swift and so great there there was neither time nor mood to consider adequately the moral, the educational and the public responsibilities inherent in this new phenomenon. As it grew and began to overwhelm the people engaged in what was then called the motion picture "game," a reckoning became imperative. Order had first to be established before an industry could be set up and prepared for its full growth.

"The whole basis of the development has been and is, I repeat, public confidence and good will. It is the ninety millions of Americans who each week go to the 20,000 motion picture theatres in this country who have brought the industry to its present status. That fact is at once our comfort and our responsibility. More than one million people in New York and immediate vicinity every day, getting their relaxation and principal amusement from pictures—with twelve millions every day in this country alone—give a vote of confidence of the very first quality, but also measure exactly our duty. It is indeed a vote of confidence that cannot be ignored either by the friends or critics of pictures.

Pioneers Are Survivors

"The public, through its loyalty to its most important amusement, stands ready to defend it, if need be, from the small minority that, like the savage, would shoot arrows at the sun to blind it, but that same public, because of that same loyalty, stands ready to destroy this industry if at any time it proves false to its public trust.

"This industrial and artistics development of the motion picture was not brought about in leisure nor in the seclusion of quiet study, but out of the heat and turmoil of the fiercest sort of competition was the rise made and the present position attained. In its first days, it was groping in the dark, without precedents, without backgrounds, and without experience. The industry had nothing to draw upon, and it is a fact that those who survive in the industry today are to a large extent those who were pioneers in its development.

"The keenest competition of any business still obtains, and probably always will, but out of the chaotic beginnings when there was time only for commercial considerations and none for moral and educational responsibilities, has come a new and happier viewpoint when the chief men of the industry recognize the importance of the instrument which has been placed in their hands and are eager to meet the needs and requirements for its proper use.

"Early in 1922, plans were laid for a responsible organization in the industry, which would guide and point the way for the completion of certain functions which the industry's leaders recognized as belonging to the pictures. On March 5, 1922, the Motion Pictures and Distributors of America, Inc., came into being, with nine of the leading producers and distributors as members. Today, that association has twenty-six members, as follows: Bray Productions, Inc., Cecil B. deMille Corporation, Chadwick Productions, Inc., Christie Film Company, Distinctive Pictures Corporation, Eastman Kodak Company, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., F B O Pictures Corporation, First National Pictures, Inc., Fox Film Corporation, D. W. Griffith, Inc., Inspiration Pictures, Inc., Buster Keaton Productions, Inc., Kinogram Publishing Corporation, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, Paramount-Famous Lasky Corporation, Pathe Exchange, Inc., Principal Pictures Corporation, Producers Distributing Corporation, Hal E. Roach Studios, Jos. M. Schenck Productions, Inc., United Artists Corporation, Universal Pictures Corporation, Talmadge Producing Corporation, Vitagraph, Inc., Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

Organized for Common Interests

"When this Association was organized, its purposes were set down in our Articles of Incorporation in the clearest, simplest, most definite terms at our command, as follows:

" 'The object for which the corporation is to be created is (now note this) to foster the common interests of those engaged in the motion picture industry in the United States, by establishing and maintaining the highest possible moral and artistic standards in motion picture production, by developing the educational as well as the entertainment value and the general usefulness of the motion picture, by diffusing accurate and reliable information with reference to the industry, by reforming abuses relative to the industry, by securing freedom from unjust or unlawful exactions and by other lawful and proper means.'

"That is no vague expression of an aspiration, no inarticulate yearning; its is the legal statement of a legal purpose by a legally organized body, scrupulously and rigidly adhered to in spirit and in letter. The motion picture industry did not organize itself to restrict competition, to form a monopoly, or to oppress any interest. That, of course, it would ont nor could not do. It organized to establish a body of business ethics and a body of trade practices, to the end that its own growth might be orderly and disciplined. Before it was organized it was groping. It did not know where it was going. It did not know all that it was doing. Now it is learning these things. It knows what it is doing and what it is seeking to do. It can give an account of itself. The heavy responsibility resting upon us, we know. We accept it in fullest measure.

Reviews Cooperative Results

"I shall not attempt, Mr. Commissioner, to detail to you the things we have done, but they affect the four great branches of the motion picture industry—the producer, the distributor, the exhibitor and the public. An the most important partner in our enterprise is the public. Splendid, indeed, has been the cooperation of all branches, without which, especially of the exhibitors, many of the purposes would have failed, and in reciting certain progress I simply review the results of this cooperation."

Here Mr. Hays outlined some of the activities of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., including:

The formula for the rejection of objectionable books and plays.

The policy of cooperation with the public in preparing material for motion picture production and for encouraging the production of the best motion pictures.

Cooperation in the production of educational, religious and surgical and medical motion pictures.

The proper regulations of the employment and education of child actors.

Arbitration between theatre owner and distributor.

The cooperation with foreign governments to promote international amity.

The registration of titles of motion pictures to prevent conflict and confusion.

Showing of Americanization films to immigrants on ocean liners.

Free casting bureau for extras.

Prosecution of fraudulent stock promotions and fraudulent advertising.

Fire prevention regulations.

"Such, Mr. Commissioner, is a briefest outline of some of the industry's activities since its organization. Such is the type of practices it has formulated and approved. We have mad a start toward the perfection we seek. Out of this Conference we confidently hope and believe will come fruitful suggestions on which we can reach an agreement that will give us additional stability, orderliness, and efficiency.

Greatful for Sympathy

"We are particularly grateful to you for your sympathy and understanding. We realize the motion picture industry is not unique in that it has difficulties, and we know your earnest purpose to help us as you would help all other business. We value highly indeed the splendid service you are rendering by the holding of this and similar conferences in the country's various business activities. We are very sincers in this expression of appreciation.

"To those who are to partcipate in the Conference, I extend my felicitations. Personally, I am interested in but one competitive matter and only one with which the industry has to do, and that is the competition between better and still better pictures, between better and still better service.

"There will be no misundersanding, I am sure, between those responsibilities which are peculiarly a part of our Association's business and those which are not of the Association's immediate concern. The Association has nothing to do with the direct competitive matters

Coercive Methods Charged By Cohen

IN his speech at the Trade Practice Conference on October 10, Sydney S. Cohen, former president of the M. P. T. O. A., said:

"I believe this to be an occasion so fraught with possibilities for far-reaching good, that I feel that it is the privilege of every man who has constructive thoughts or ideas relative to conditions in the great motion picture industry to offer them for the consideration of this conference. Realizing fully that many topics will be brought before this conference by able minds, and that time is, therefore, at a premium, I shall confine myself to two pertinent issues. In doing so, I speak for myself and my investments—my theatres—which are vitally concerned by the conditions I shall outline and discuss. I, therefore, crave the indulgence of the Honorable Commissioner for the few moments necessary for me to express these views of mine anent trade practices in our industry—views which I trust will be helpful in some small measure.

"Many of us throughout the country have been complaining for years about unfair business practices within our industry; particularly those practices of the larger producing interests which pertain to their entrance into the field of exhibition in direct competition with their own customers. And we are deeply grateful to the Federal Trade Commission for thus affording us an opportunity for the free and open discussion of these and other practices pertinent to the probity of our business.

"We desire to ascertain if the Federal Trade Commission is sound or unsound in its findings arrived at after more than five years of painstaking investigation of the complaints made against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. It is necessary that we find this out, as we know the Government does not wish to confuse us; and we are relying on the Government that it is right in its findings. A feeling of uncertainty has been aroused in our minds by the disobedience of the Cease and Desist order issued by the Federal Trade Commission on July 9th, 1927, against the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. A disobedience accentuated by their openly announced plans of more than $10,000,000.00 worth of theatre operations, the proof of which is adduced by this quarter page ad appearing in the 'New York Times' of October 7th, 1927, just three days in advance of this hearing, and which I herewith offer as a matter of record.

Ask Order to Stop Building

"We ask that an order be issued immediately through the Federal Trade Commission to stop the announced building of these five theatres, four here in New York City and one in Birmingham, Ala. An immediate action is urged, because it would forstall both the breaking of ground and the disposal of all of the bonds to the public.

"When the original Cease and Desist order was issued on July 9th, 1927, by the Federal Trade Commission, and the Famous Players-Lasky Corp. asked for a respite of 60 days in which to prepare their reply, they then knew all about these new theatres which they are now announcing, and which they are ready to build in apparent defiance of a distinct Governmental order. It is not acting fair with our Government nor with the people, that after such a decision was rendered, and that after this postponement was granted to these people at their request, that they should take advantage of the situation to proceed with this very destructive building program in sections which are adequately theatred at present, and from which they are now receiving, and have been over a period of years, a large revenue from theatre owner customers.

"The motion picture industry was not created for any one, two or three people with headquarters in New York City. It belongs to the entire public, and might aplty be termed everyman's entertainment. It is the great universal entertainer, with an appeal which is world-wide in its extent because it speaks the great universal language of the eye—a language which needs no translation. It is my claim that a few men have sought to abrogate to themselves the right to control the destinies of the world's greatest entertainment which rightfully belongs to the great paying public.

Motion Picture Public Utility

"So vast is the influence of the motion picture that it daily draws millions and millions of patrons to the theatres where it holds sway. In fact, it might almost be listed as a public utility. And, since this is in reality a convention of the whole industry called together by the Government, and at which the rights of the people are the predominant issue, it is my hope the among the progressive and constructive results of this meeting of minds will be the taking of steps to see that the rights of the public are respected; and that the holdings of many individuals, who, like myself, have independent investments, are safeguarded.

"If the same men who make the pictures are permitted to build theatres in sections of big cities and in small towns which are already adequately theatred, and where these producers already have adequate representation, it means a virtual control of the screen. Controlled theatre screens means poorer pictures, for the competitive urge is removed; and it means higher admission prices insofar as the public is concerned, for controlled theatres mean a controlled industry—a thought abhorrent to the American idea of personal and business liberty.

"I desire also to file a protest against all mergers which tend to bring about an artificial scarcity of quality film; or which, by their formation and operation, do not permit an adequate financial return for the quality films of other producing organizations. These mergers unfairly deny to the great pictures of other producing companies a proper showing, just because the control of theatres is in the hands of these first producing companies making and exhibiting their own pictures. A few men, therefore, as represented by these mergers, are virtually destroying the initiative in others. This is a condition of such direful portent that it should be stopped instantly, for it is an infectious disease which threatens the health of a great industry and augurs no sanitation for the public. It is my firm belief that all producers of motion pictures should be compelled to dispose of all theatres owned and operated by them save downtown houses in the 32 large exchange centers of the country which provide first run showings for their product, and they should be compelled to dispose of all theatres save the sort I have just mentioned.

Damages Independent Owners

If Famous Players-Lasky Corp. are not stopped in the building of these theatres previously mentioned, there is no surety that other big producing companies who have facilities for ample financing, through the medium of the sale of bonds or stock to the public, will not also build in these identical sections as a retaliatory measure; and this vicious circle could continue on indefinitely, to the resultant damage to independent theatre owners now operating in these zones; and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation would have no deterrent to prevent them from extending their operations into other zones and other cities.

"May I reiterate what I have frequently said before, namely, that it is my conviction that if the building moratorium of a few years' duration which I have suggested insofar as it concerns producers building new theatres outside of exploitation centers were put into effect it would result in bringing about the building of new theatres, wherever they are needed, by the theatre owners in these localities who, under present conditions, fear unfair competition being brought to them by the invasion of their territory by the very men from whom they are obtaining their pictures. This is the only major industry, as far as I know, in which the manufacturer clogs his outlet.

"Ninety per cent of the theatres of the country are socalled neighborhood houses, which means the large and small houses in all neighborhoods except the downtown Broadways of the large cities; and the large and small houses of the small towns and the rural districts. Most of these houses are independently owned, and this preponderant majority of a vital branch of a great industry wishes the same fair business conditions to prevail for itself as obtains for the producers-distributor. The independent theatre owner feels that he ought to be able to buy with his own money, on a fair and equitable basis, what is required to keep his theatre going. As matters rest at present, many of the most representative theatres in neighborhood sections and the smaller cities, are unfairly debarred from such a division of product as their rank entitles them to on account of the presence in their zone or locality of some inferior house belonging to one of the big producer circuits, and they are also most seriously inconvenienced by the utterly unreasonable "protection" demanded by and granted to some of the big producer circuits.

Recall Willingness to Cooperate

"Illustrative of the foregoing, may I submit excerpts from 'Exhibitors Herald' of August 14, 1920, 'Exhibitors Trade Review' of July 24, 1920, and 'Exhibitors Trade Review' of August 21, 1920. These I believe illustrate more graphically than can any mere words of mine the attitude of the national exhibitor body, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, towards the aggressions and incursions of Famous Players-Lasky Corp. even at that far away period of over seven years ago. These also make manifest the expressed attitude of Mr. Adolph Zukor, the president of this company. May I ask, is this expressed attitude of a willingness to cooperate with the independent theatre owners of the country reconcilable to this company's campaign of ruthless theatre building?

"Block-Booking, per se, is I believe a moot question, for its definition is susceptible of several interpretations. The voluntary buying of a series of pictures from one manufacturer by a theatre owner to assure himself of a sufficient amount of product to keep his theatre running, is entirely different from forced, coercive or compulsory buying of the entire product of a company in order to obtain a few desired pictures, or through fear of reprisals. Let us illustrate, for a condition of not only block-booking, but triple compulsory block-booking, has recently arisen to harass theatre owners.

"Take, for instance, a small town of perhaps 2,000 inhabitants whose theatre owner and whose picture goers have the selection of the entire film market open to them. Think of their being compelled to purchase the product of three companies — Famous Players-Lasky, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and United Artists—working together through relationship and intermarriage, the entire product of these three companies being purchased under compulsory and coercive methods; for, unless you take all three you don't get any, and this completely fills the theatre's playing time. Thus the people of any such town or community are denied the opportunity of seeing the worthwhile pictures of other producing organizations.

Calls Practice Monopolistic

"We feel certain that when we voice this sentiment against these three producing organizations, block-booking under conditions of compulsory, coercive, triple block-booking, we voice not only the sentiment of theatre owners, but of other producers as well. If any one of these three companies have their own theatre in the section, they withhold even offering their combined product to any other theatre owner in the section. Otherwise, they will attempt to force before you fully confident of your ability to work out a solution which will be fair to the exhibitors and distributors alike, and which will enable the public to place responsibility for the showing of unsuitable films with that branch of the industry with which it has contact, and will preclude the excuse behind which the exhibitor always hides; namely, that he is the victim of a vicious system of distribution.

"The sooner the conference begins its labor the better and for that reason I shall not undertake a detailed discussion of the other problems which may be brought before you. We all know, in a general way, what these problems, or at least some of them, are. Many of you, no doubt, have proposals to bring before the conference which have not occurred to the rest of us. The producers, distributors and exhibitors will work out their programs in group meetings, and bring them to the conference for consideration and action.

"It will be appropriate, therefore, for me to restate in barest outline the purpose and scope of the meeting.

Rectify Unfair Practices

"The purpose is not, as some of my correspondents have supposed, to obtain evidence on which to prosecute persons and corporations engaged in the motion picture industry; it is not to tear down or rebuild the fundamental organization and structure of the industry; it is merely to afford a forum for a full discussion of the practices of the industry which may be fairly comprehended within the expression 'methods of competition' as used in Section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act.

"You have an opportunity to determine for yourselves what are the unfair and undesirable practices in your industry and to frame suitable resolutions. The presiding commissioner will be available at all times, and will gladly assist in every way possible and, if requested, will express his individual view as to the propriety of any particular resolution, with the reservation that the question must ultimately go to the full commission.

"The resolutions, when adopted, are transmitted by the presiding commissioner to the full commission with his report and recommendations. When the commission has approved a particular resolution, it bocmes the standard of fair practice for the industry, and the Commission will undertake to enforce the same by proceeding against a recalcitrant minority who may seek an unfair competitive advantage by continuing the prescribed practices.

"Resolutions which are not approved and, at the same time, are not positively disapproved, may be received by the Commission as the expression of the trade and enforced or not, according as the circumstances dictate when and if infractions occur.

"I need not remind you that resolutions of this class may often be as effective as resolutions which the Commission undertakes to enforce. If they reflect the preponderant sentiment of the industry they will not be lightly disregarded, for men often have greater dread of the scorn of their associates than they have for the arm of the law.

"The Commission believes that in expanding the trade conference procedure it is doing a constructive work. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States at its meeting last May voiced its approval of this work, and adopted a resolution favoring the creation of trade groups in every industry to cooperate with the Commission in this way. Many of the practices which may be eliminated are not only unfair, but wasteful as well. We all know that the increasing pressure of foreign competition may not be met by lowering American standards of living, but by increasing efficiency of production through elimination of waste. It may well be, therefore, that this procedure will play an important part in enabling American industry to withstand the increasing competition of foreign producers.

the theatre owner to play all of the pictures of the three companies above mentioned. We think that if your Commission were to invite all other producing companies, large and small, to testify, you will find confirmation of this in their objection to this vicious and monopolistic practice.

"The Mayor of Chicago said recently, while the dispute was on between the operator's union and the theatre owners, when he was helping to bring about an adjustment of the same, that he was not interested in either side so much as he was in the position of the public—that the public's position was predominant. It is almost the same as if the Bread Trust got together in a conspiracy to juggle the prices and the distribution of the staff of life, for any small group of manufacturers, be they ever so powerful, to attempt to dictate such coercive measures as shall eventually affect the great entertainment of the masses.

"In a word, it is my belief—and this belief is based on 15 years and more of most comprehensively practical experience as a theatre owner—it is my belief, I repeat, that the manufacturer should remain the manufacturer, and not compete unfairly with his customers. The producers' invasion of neighborhoods and the smaller cities in which he is already adequately represented, and which are already theatred to the saturation point, I consider unethical, and an unfair trade practice. This is reiteration, of course, but I consider it is the most important, the most vital problem confronting the industry today.

"It has not been my purpose to bring a discordant note into these quarrels; and no one would be better pleased than myself to have all of these producing companies make even more money than at present—but it should not be at the expense of their customers and the public.

House Divided Against Self

"Let the shoemaker stick to his last—let the producer of films make his pictures of such superior quality that exhibitors will fight to get them, and not to be coerced, as at present, into buying quantity that they do not want, to obtain a minimum of quality which they do want.

"Solomon The Wise once said that a house divided against itself must fall. If producers persist in dividing their interest between production and exhibition, it seems inevitable that one branch or the other will suffer. If their theatre enterprises take up too much of their attention, the quality of their films will surely deteriorate; and if this happens where are they and the rest of the industry and the public to whom the production of quality pictures is essential?

"Special privileges belong to neither producers of films nor to the exhibitors of films, but to the public. And I feel sure that the rights of the public will be doubly safeguarded by the findings of this conference, called together by a beneficent Governmental Commission, and if this Cease and Desist order against Famous Players-Lasky Corp. is enforced, I firmly believe that it will benefit not only individuals like myself, whose investments are not in jeopardy, but all theatre owners and all producing companies including this company which has been under Federal investigation, and which has been the subject of Governmental action and, in addition, serve to protect the public's money, invested in these theatres through stock sales, for in many such instances it is openly acknowledged by the executives of these companies that these theatres will not only be unable to pay dividends on the stock but even cannot be profitably operated.

"Now is the time to establish a real Code of Business Ethics for the Motion Picture Industry. The 'dog eat dog' method of doing business in all branches of our industry has no place in a business of this magnitude, particularly one in which the public is such a component part. Therefore, I leave these few thoughts of mine with the Honorable Commissioner and you, gentlemen, trusting that from them may come a few helpful results."

of the industry, has no authority over the business policies of its members. The Association, as such, of course, has no authority relative to competitive trade practices such as protection and block booking. The members of the Association separately and individually are deeply interested in these things. The Association is particularly hopeful for sympathetic, earnest and constructive study of the industry's problems, competitive as well as non-competitive, and is confident that much will be accomplished to that end in this Conference.

"Personally, I most earnestly urge that this be the spirit of the occasion and that the Conference proceed in the earnest, sincere good will in which it is called. Let us not lose sight of the fact that we are all here at the invitation of the United States Government, through the Federal Trade Commission, that none of us was forced to accept the invitation, but that all were willing to come and together endeavor to arrive at as many solutions of yet unsettled problems as possible—all to the end that we may promote the better interests of all; that we are not here subpoenaed because of wrong doing, but that we are here because the Government recognizes the importance of our business in the fabric of society and wants to help us.

Rights of All Equally Sacred

"My personal participation can only be, of course, that of sympathetic advisor to all—not unanalogous, indeed, to that of a referee, deeply interested in the welfare of all, watching, possibly, that no class or type is unrepresented, and most hopeful of substantial accomplishments. To me there is but one interest and that is the interest of all of you and of the public you serve, to the end that every individual, every company and every branch of the business may be fixed in its position of certainty that the rights of all are equally sacred and sacredly equal; recognizing that you are engaged in the most highly competitive business in the whole world of modern business which today is the most fiercely competitive venture ever known, and realizing that there is no possible survival of the incompetent or the unfit, but insisting, as I do, that no business is so highly competitive that the rules of inherent right do not obtain.

"Personally, I am very certain indeed that there are trade practices, both non-competitive and competitive within the industry, that can be improved upon, and I do indeed suggest that this occasion challenges the best thought of and the most unselfish consideration by all of you to the problems which are at hand.

"We set ouselves up here and now to answer these questions:

"In what ways, if any are any prevailing trade practices of the industry out of line with its own best interest and the public interest? How and why are the different branches and factors of the industry working against each other? What will we do together properly and fairly to alleviate the difficulties and establish ways of free opportunity and of sure justice and of larger service?

"Let us find an answer to these questions, and we will have justified all the time and labor we will expend here.

"I have an abiding faith in large accomplishment."

An Exhibitor's Problems in 1927

Present Craze for Big Spectacles, Lavish Presentations and Costly Stage Bands Declared to Be Only Passing Fad

By Eric T. Clarke
General Manager, Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

(Editor's Note.—This article is an address delivered by Mr. Clarke before the recent convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. It will be published in two installments. The second will appear in an early issue.)

FOR the year which has passed since I last addressed your body I have only one fundamental change in policy to report. All the rest of what I have to say today represents continued development of policies already in effect a year ago. This one change is the elimination of the split week and the adoption in its place of a double-feature program. For the benefit of those who are not familiar with the first-run picture situation in Rochester, I should explain that we run three first-run downtown picture houses; the Eastman, seating 3,350; the Piccadilly, seating 2,200 and the Regent seating 1,800. It has for several years been our policy to buy blocks totaling some 200 pictures, securing these pictures on an interchangeable basis, so that upon screening they may be assigned to the house best suited to play them. I do not feel that it would be appropriate for me at this time to discuss the merits or demerits of block-booking. The problems at present under consideration in connection with block-booking do not apply to those who, like ourselves, need in the year better than 200 features for first-run showing in the same town.

For a city the size of Rochester it is clear that there will rarely, if ever, be more than 100 pictures in a season's output that are worthy of a week's run. In the Spring, when the company's projected output for the season is published, we cannot be sure just which pictures are going to be included in this hundred, but our experience has shown that where we have the choice of the entire season's product, the purchase in block of some 200 pictures will assure us of practically all the good ones which we naturally want.

The Double Feature Policy

The problem of what to do with the remainder has always been hard. Up to the end of 1926 we continued the policy of occasional split weeks. By "split weeks" I mean one picture four days (Sunday to Wednesday), and another the three remaining days of the week. By introducing a split week once or twice a month in one or the other of our two smaller houses (taking care never to split both houses in the same week), we were able to keep playing close to release date. Good and poor quality pictures seem to come along about evenly all the time, and it is necessary to avoid the accumulation of unplayed releases. Another argument lay in the fact that we were able to carry a pair of second-class pictures in a split week on the momentum of the house, and would suffer the effect of loss of business, when we were able to come back the next week with a stronger picture. Nevertheless, the problem of what to do with these clucks bothered me. I hated to give over a week or a half-week to a picture when I knew we would die. I always felt uncomfortable when setting in a comedy or other subject around a weak feature. A good comedy may strengthen your bill if you have a good picture, but it will never save a weak feature. So there was always a tendency to make the second half of a split week a junk bill. For a while we tried deliberately shelving these pictures or salvaging part of the cost by sale to some lesser house in town, but one can quickly go broke doing that, particularly now that the distributors have found that for the millions invested in production there has been only a very small percentage of profit, and, in consequence, have forced exhibitors all over the country to pay fat increases over last season's averages. Finding after careful analysis that only a few of our patrons would ever return to the same house during the same week, we decided to make bargain bills by putting two features on at the same time, and running these for the entire week. It is unusual in our part of the country to have a double-feature-first-run policy, but I am so well convinced of the merit of the plan that we now devote the Piccadilly to nothing else. By taking care in the pairing of the features we find a steadier patronage than we ever knew before. Even if the average customer does not enjoy one of the features he will probably find satisfaction in the other.

An Outlet for Westerns

By this plan we have at least found a healthy outlet for the westerns which each company now insists on making and including in the general line. We continue a weekly film news to space the film apart, but all short subjects, both single and double reels, have been eliminated from our Piccadilly Theatre. Whatever the argument for buying blocks of features in order to get the good ones, I can see no justification in our loading ourselves up with comedies beyond our actual requirements. For the present year, at any rate, the market is overstocked with comedies, and we are able to secure all the choice we wish. The average footage on the class of feature I have been describing I have found from a check-up of over 40 pictures to be around 6,025, so we have adopted a two-hour and twenty-four minute schedule of five 13,000 foot complete shows in the daily operation.

In the Eastman Theatre and Regent Theatre I still stick to the two-hour show, and this brings me to the second question I wish to discuss, and that is, namely, the relative importance of film and presentation. It is a live issue. The continuance of the policy of the two-hour show is only another way of saying that I side completely with those who look on the film as of first importance, and that I side against those who attempt to build an elaborate show that will overshadow the film.

The present craze for big spectacles, lavish presentations, costly stage bands is, as I see it, only a passing fad. It's origin, however, is interesting, and is due to three conditions:

Lavish Acts a Fad

1. Vaudeville has had to come to pictures.
2. Large expensive houses tied to one line of product have felt the need of something to help carry those self-same weak sisters of which I have just spoken.
3. Imitation of "Roxy" and attempts to beat him at his own game.

Let us analyze these conditions.

After many years' success in their own field, the straight vaudeville theatres found themselves faced on the one hand with increased cost caused largely by higher transportation expense. On the other hand, their receipts were dwindling. The increase in movie attendance certainly took business away from the vaudeville houses. Inclusion of pictures in vaudeville programs resulted in consequence, enabling a satisfactory show to be given at a lower price than a full show of straight vaudeville would require. The policy has succeeded, with the result that today there is hardly a house in the country now running straight vaudeville.

Bearing in mind, however, that one of the big reasons in vaudeville is to fill out the show at a lower cost per minute, it follows closely that houses buying good vaudeville cannot afford good pictures, and must necessarily regard the film as subordinate to the vaudeville. Such being the case, it naturally follows that the combination show must still be a variety show in which little or no relation exists between the vaudeville items and the feature picture. There can be no cohesion to the bill as a whole.

Meantime, the big motion picture theatres have been growing bigger. Having succeeded in attracting ever-growing audiences, and in appealing to what would otherwise have been the old-time vaudeville patronage, the tendency has been away from the straight motion picture show towards the show with "presentations," big orchestras and the like.

Aim to Bolster Weak Pictures

Here the one aim has, of course, been to get the largest possible attendance for the big pictures, but the more important aim has been at the same time to bolster up weak features and so fill up the deepest valleys in a fluctuating series of weeks. Picture houses, like the Eastman Theatre, which selects the best from a purchase four times its requirements, are the exception rather than the rule. Most big houses, particularly those in New York (which naturally are largely imitated), are tied to a particular brand of product and must play the weaker ones as well as the successes. The management of such theatres

Riot Marks "U" Opening

Great Mob Crashes Police for Unpaid-for Seats at New Brooklyn Theatre

BROOKLYN set a new mark with the oddest theatre opening on record on Sunday night, when thousands of ardent movie fans milling around the beautiful new $1,500,000 Universal Theatre, awaiting the hour of 7 o'clock when the box office was to be opened, suddenly turned into an impatient, pushing, crowding, fighting mob, crashed the barricades, overwhelmed the large city and private police details, and swept into the theatre, filling the seats they had not paid for. A last stand of the special guards concentrated in front of the block of seats that had been set aside for invited guests, managed to stem the tide just as extra police reserves arrived on the scene.

Carl Laemmle, Dan Michalove, E. H. Goldstein, James J. Byrne, the Borough President of Brooklyn, and several hundred social and civic celebrities, who had journeyed across the bridge for the premiere of Greater New York's first atmospheric type theatre, had to detour for blocks about the theatre, and finally were smuggled into the stage door at the rear of the theatre. Elaborate preparations for the greeting of the distinguished guests and opening ceremonies were forgotten in the emergency situation.

A hurried conference was held by Michalove and the Borough President, and it was decided to go on with the elaborate show which had been arranged for the premiere. During the course of the program President Byrne announced that Universal officials would donate to Brooklyn charities every penny the "free audience" would contribute on their way out of the theatre in lieu of their admission.

Sammy White, of Puck & White, headliners of the vaudeville bill, acted as master of ceremonies, and introduced Carl Laemmle. Others introduced were John Eberson, the architect; Dr. Leo Hermann, Oscar Fischbach and Julius Steinberg, local capitalists, as well as "Dimples" Lido, Universal's new continental star, and other celebrities.

The opening pictures was "U's," "Alias the Deacon" and a "Collegians." Besides Puck & White the vaudeville bill included the Frolic Four, Myers & Hanford, Giggles of 1927, and the Bartee Sisters and Orchestra. Dave Love's orchestra put on "A Concert in Miniature." The International News was supplemented with local news shots. A dedicatory reel of greetings from stars and an Oswald Comedy completed the program.

Cincinnati Branch First in F. N. Summer Drive

The Cincinnati exchange of First National has been designated the winner of First National's summer billing drive which covered a period of 13 weeks. The next three branches claiming the highest standing are New Orleans, New Jersey and New York, in the order named.

The branches had increased quotas—a circumstance which spurred them on to greater efforts; but the quotas were not too high, as the fact that such a large number of branch offices finished ahead of their quotas proves. "All of the branches put up a splendid fight," said Ned E. Depinet, general sales manager of First National.

Names of the managers of the four winning exchanges follow: Paul Krieger, of the Cincinnati office; Luke Connor, of the New Orleans branch; J. C. Vergesslich, of the New Jersey exchange, and Jules Levy, of the New York office. All employees of the winning exchanges who were with the company during the entire period of the drive received an extra week's salary as a reward.

N. Y. Couple to Be Wed on Stage of Eagle Theatre

A wedding ceremony is to take place on the stage of the Eagle Theatre, Third Ave. and 102nd St., New York, on Saturday, October 15, at eight-thirty P. M. The couple to be wed will receive numerous gifts from neighborhood merchants and the theatre, through a co-operative exploitation arrangement. The entire affair was planned and is being carried out by J. H. Phillips, manager of the Eagle Theatre.

R. Rockett Sails for Berlin to Supervise

RAY ROCKETT, production manager for many First National films at Burbank and also in New York when First National was producing at the Cosmopolitan Studio, sailed Tuesday, October 11th, on board the SS Reliance for Berlin, Germany, where he will supervise German production for First National.

He will remain in Germany about six months watching the progress made by Defina, the Deutsche First National corporation which has already produced five pictures for the world market. These are "Dancing Vienna," with Lya Mara and Ben Lyon; "The Alpine Tragedy," by Richard Voss; "The Wild Man," "The Train De Luxe," and a screen version of the Alphonse Daudet novel, "Rremont, Jr., and Risler, Sr."

Accompanying Mr. Rockett is his family. W. C. Boothby, First National financial comptroller, also sailed on the Reliance to spend five or six weeks in Europe, principally in London, Paris and Berlin.

uncontracted for, commonly known as bicycling is an unfair trade practice.

RESOLUTION NUMBER 9: Deliberately returning prints late, thus securing additional exhibitor time without payment of rental therefor, or by reason of such delay, making it impossible to ship such film to the next customer who has it booked, is bicycling, is an unfair trade practice.

RESOLUTION NUMBER 10: RESOLVED THAT THE GIVING OF ANY GRATUITY EITHER BY AN EXHIBITOR TO A salesman, or a salesman to an exhibitor in exchange for advantage not otherwise procurable between buyer and seller, either in relation to the sale or booking of motion pictures, is an unfair trade practice.

RESOLUTION NUMBER 13: Resolved that the practice of contracting for pictures for one theatre and using service at an entirely different theatre than the one specified in the contract, is an unfair trade practice.

RESOLUTION NUMBER 14: Resolved that failure on the part of the exhibitor to promptly report correctly the results of percentage bookings, is an unfair trade practice.

RESOLUTION NUMBER 18: Resolved that the use of buying power for the purchase of more photoplays than an exhibitor can consume, in order to deprive a competing exhibitor of the opportunity of purchasing his supply of photoplays, whether it be an attempt to corner the market against such competing exhibitor, or whether it be with the thought of forcing a competing exhibitor out of business, or the compelling of such competing exhibitor to sell his theatre, is an unfair trade practice.

An Exhibitor's Problem in 1927

being unable to do anything to improve the features themselves turn their attention to the rest of the program, and stick in anything that will help attract business.

All de luxe theatres in New York live on the remains of Rothafel's policies. His has been the one original mind in de luxe presentation. When he, graduating from a 5,000-seat theatre, opens one seating 6,200, his competitors are tempted to follow his ways, only more so. The Capitol, having a better line of pictures than the Roxy can get, contents itself with increasing the orchestra to 85 men. The Paramount slaps on massive acts of tinsel and gaudiness. The Roxy itself is not immune from the disease. There they slash away at the 11,960 feet of "What Price Glory" until it can be run in 90 minutes. Why? Well, they made room for a prologue lasting for half an hour. But the prize spectacle could be seen at the Paramount this past summer when the Whiteman Band so completely dominated the electric signs and newspaper ads that the feature was quite lost in the shuffle—and this, in a house owned by the producers!

The situation has grown top-heavy. Rothafel, with his immense reputation, can doubtless get away with it, for the public knows that he gives a show and the public will come whatever the weakness of his feature picture. Already others like Hugo Riesenfeld are talking about the Dignity of the Simplicity of Presentation and making capital of the opposite.

Param't Properties Issues $3,500,000 in Bonds

$3,500,000 of six per cent serial gold bonds, dated September 1, 1927, and due serially 1930 to 1942, priced at 100, accrued interest to yield six per cent, has been issued by Paramount Properties, a Paramount subsidiary, wholly owned by Paramount. The company is holder in fee of the Metropolitan Building in Los Angeles and the Paramount studios. The bond issue has been secured by a first mortgage on both the Metropolitan and the studio as well as by assigning to the trustees under trust indenture of the leases of the two properties to the parent company.

The proceeds of the $3,500,000 bond issue will be used to call the outstanding $1,604,000 first mortgage 6½ per cent bonds of the Hill Street Fireproof Building Company, to complete the purchase of the Paramount studio properties and to reimburse the treasury for other capital expenditures.

Sennett, Roach Comedies on Pathe's Oct. 23 List

A Mack Sennett two-reeler entitled "Daddyboy" and starring Ben Turpin vies with a Hal Roach offering of the same length featuring Max Davidson and entitled "Should Husbands Come First?" as the principal short subject on the program of releases from Pathe during the week of October 23rd. Also scheduled are "From Soup to Nuts," one of the Rare-Bits series; "Football Officials," the fourth release of Grantland Rice's "Football Sense" series; "The Big Tent," an Aesop film fable; "Pathe Review No. 43; Topics of the Day No. 43; "The House of Horror," ninth chapter of the Patheserial, "Hawk of the Hills," and issues Nos. 88 and 89 of the Pathe News.

Features of the Pathe Review number are: "China's Newport," "International Impressions" and "Her Crowning Glory." "Chick" Meehan, the football mentor of N. Y. U., describes the moves of the game in the Rice football issue.

With Turpin in "Daddyboy" are Alma Bennett, Johnny Burke, Ruth Taylor and Mary Mabery; they were directed by Harry Edwards. In the Davidson comedy are David Butler, Lillian Elliott and Spec O'Donnell. Leo McCarey directed them.

J. W. Considine, Jr., Promoted by J. M. Schenck

John W. Considine, Jr., president of Feature Productions, Inc., a producing unit of United Artists,' was promoted by Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, to the post of general manager of production of the Art Cinema Corporation, which corporation finances most of the independent producers releasing through United Artists. Mr. Considine celebrated his promotion simultaneously with his 29th birthday which occurred on Friday, October 7th.

While in New York, Mr. Schenck stated that he and Mr. Considine had signed a long term contract, under the terms of which Mr. Considine will actively produce films sponsored by the Art Cinema Finance Corporation.

Poli Circuit Transfer Agreement Signed

Deal With Max Schoolman Involves Between $21,000,000 and $25,000,000

NEGOTIATIONS which have been under way for some weeks have been completed by the signing of agreements between S. Z. Poli and the Poli Circuit for the transfer of the Poli Circuit Theatres to Max Schoolman, of Boston. The deal involves between $21,000,000 and $25,000,000, and becomes effective on January 1.

For more than two years sale of the Poli theatres has been rumored to various interests, including Paramount, the Stanleys, Loew and Gordon. It is probable that no formal announcement of the transfer of the theatres will be made either by the Poli interests or from Mr. Schoolman's offices until after the actual transfer of the properties takes place January 1.

No information is obtainable as to who is associated with Mr. Schoolman in the deal. It is known, however, that $500,000 has been deposited as a binder to the agreement.

In previous negotiations which have been held by the Poli interests, it has been stated repeatedly that Mr. Poli had held out for $21,000,000 for his properties, and that he would not part with them for any figure under that amount. In the present negotiations, however, the figure at which the sale is said to have been consummated is $4,000,000 above that amount. It is pointed out that since the other negotiations were pending Mr. Poli has increased his holdings, the most important additions being at Springfield, where he spent nearly $1,500,000 in acquiring properties adjoining the Springfield Municipal Group of buildings, and has already started work on the theatre which is to be erected as a memorial to his son.

Mr. Schoolman has long been identified with the motion picture industry. For some years he was associated with Nathan Gordon, and they have occupied adjoining suites of offices at 333 Washington Street, Boston.

Following the conclusion of the deal, Mr. Schoolman departed for his summer estate on Cape Cod. Inquiry there elicited the information that he was on a fishing and gunning trip and could not be reached by telephone. Inquiry at his office brought the response that "that is a matter which only Mr. Schoolman can give any information on. We have absolutely nothing to say about it."

It had been generally believed that the Gordon interests were in on the deal, but inquiry at the Gordon offices brought an immediate denial that Mr. Gordon was interested in the deal at all. "Mr. Gordon has no connection of any kind with any deal involving the Poli theatres," it was stated.

There are eighteen theatres in the Poli Circuit, which has its headquarters at New Haven. There are three Poli houses in New Haven, Bridgeport has five, Meriden and Hartford two each, and Waterbury one, making thirteen in Connecticut. There are three Poli theatres in Worcester and one in Springfield, a total of four for Massachusetts, in addition to the one under way at Springfield, which is to be the most pretentious of the circuit. There is also one in Washington, D. C.

Petition Asks Quiz of Hays Organization

W. W. HODKINSON, well known in all branches of the motion picture industry, has filed a petition with the Federal Trade Commission that they institute proceedings against Will Hays, the members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and its officers, directors and some employees; the Association of Motion Picture producers, et al., for alleged unfair trade practices.

The petition urges that all the parties be compelled to desist from the following alleged acts; the continued use of unreasonable and discriminatory exclusive exhibition contracts, certain phases of the uniform contract, boycotting of exhibitors, unreasonable protection clauses, excessive ownership of theatres, block booking, picture substitutions, certain phases of circuit booking, and the coercion or intimidating of stars, actors or other employees.

The petition was filed by William Marston Seabury as attorney for Hodkinson.

Hicks, Tom Evans, New York City; Film Pioneers, Inc., capitalization not stated, Ernest Stern, George Henley, George Heinz, New York City.

"Douglas Fairbanks as the Gaucho" Title of New Film

"Over the Andes," Douglas Fairbanks' new production for United Artists release which had previously been titled "The Gaucho," has become "Douglas Fairbanks as the Gaucho." Due to the uncertainty of the public's reaction to an unfamiliar name like "Gaucho," the change of title was made, Fairbanks believing that curiosity in the word will be stimulated, coupled, as it is, with his own name. The new production comes during November to the Liberty Theatre in New York for a run.

Representatives of Circuit Theatres Are Admitted to Conference

REPRESETATIVES of chain theatres were admitted to the Trade Practices Conference last Wednesday by Commissioner Myers. The circuit representatives form a second group or unit representing theatres.

This unit will not present separate resolutions but will consider many which the group representing independent theatres will submit during the proceedings.

A meeting of the chain representatives elected Harry Crandall, representing the Stanley Co. of America, Chairman; Fred Desberg of Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., vice-chairman, and Harry D. Buckley of United Artists Theatres, secretary.

The circuits present through representatives were:

Loew's, Inc., by Leopold Friedman; Keith-Albee, by Maurice Goodman; Publix, by P. A. Raiburn; Universal Chain Theatres, by Dan Michalove; West Coast Theatres, Inc., by Harold B. Franklin; Fox Theatres, by M. Levine, and United Artists Theatres, by Harry D. Buckley.

Laemmle Lists New Product

Universal Chief Warmly Welcomed on His Arrival From Europe; Already in Work at Universal City

AFTER a summer spent in Europe, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures, arrived in New York several days ago aboard the S.S. Berengaria. He was met at Quarantine by a large boatload of associates, friends and employees, and received a second demonstration of affection when he disembarked at the Cunard pier to be escorted to the Universal home office, where an informal reception was held. In the Laemmle party were Sam Harris, editor of the British trade paper, "Cinema"; Julius Stern, president of Stern Film Corporation; Max Alexander, technical advisor at the Stern studio; Carl Laemmle, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Fleckles, Miss Rosabelle Laemmle, Jack Ross, secretary to Mr. Laemmle, and Dimples Lido, a European discovery of the Universal president.

After a few days in New York Mr. Laemmle entrained for Hollywood, where he will launch the 1928-29 schedule. Only a few pictures remain to be made for 1927-28, as more than 90 per cent of the product scheduled for that season has been completed.

The high lights of Universal's line-up for next year were outlined by Mr. Laemmle. One of the foremost offerings will be "Ivanhoe," the Scott novel which Universal made years ago. Another special on the list will be "Broadway," the Harris stage play purchased last week by Universal.

Other stories acquired for the 1928-29 program include "The Red Mirage," by I. A. R. Wylie; "Meet the Prince," a Glenn Tryon comedy; "Show Boat," the Edna Ferber novel; "Phyllis of the Follies," by Arthur Gregor; "The Worm Turns," by Ward Russell; "Give and Take," from a story by Gerald Beaumont; "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?", by Leigh Jacobsen; "Honeymoon Flats," by Earl Derr Biggers; "Freedom of the Press," by Peter B. Kyne; "Fallen Angels," by Arthur Somers Roche, "Three Rainy Nights," to feature Laura La Plante; "The Sin Ye Do," "The Braggart," by B. S. Cutler; "The Last Warning," by Thomas Fall, and "The Charlatan," the play by Ernest Pascal.

Pictures going into preparatory stages are: "The Mating Call," "The Michigan Kid," "Broadway Romance," "Heaven Forbid," "The House of Glass," "Do They Miss Me at Home?", "This Way Out," "The Third Party," "The Five Frankfurters," "Justice," "Bill Smith, M. D.," "Reckless Youth," "The Burden," "Cream of the Youth," "Hold It," and "The Girl Show."

Tiffany Signs Five Directors, Five Writers

THE directorial end of the Tiffany Productions program for 1927-28 will be handled by Phil Rosen, Marcel De Sano, George Archainbaud, King Baggott and Louis J. Gashier. These directors have signed contracts with M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of Tiffany and Archainbaud is already engaged in filming "Night Life," a Viennese story.

The Tiffany scenario department has also been augmented by the signing of five writers to prepare scripts and scenarios for the 1927-28 program. They are Olga Printzlau, Gertude Orr, Peter Milne, Frances Hyland and John Francis Natteford.

F. H. Vincent Announces New Sacramento Theatre

F. W. Vincent has announced the completion of a deal which will give the Orpheum and the people of Sacramento a new theatre. The location, it is said, will be on J Street, between 11th and 12th. The investment will reach about $700,000 and it is expected that construction will begin very soon.

Charlotte Drops Midnight Shows After Controversy

Through an agreement reached between Mayor Redd and commissioners and managers of the Strand and the Charlotte theatres, the popular Sunday 12:01 Midnight shows for Charlotte, N. C., were abandoned, thus bringing to an amicable settlement a question which had stirred Charlotte for a week.

The theatres obtained permission to hold their scheduled and advertised performances by giving their promise not to contest the commissioners' ruling in the future by similar engagements; the commissioners handed down on the previous Thursday a ruling banning midnight shows, including last Sunday's. They acted on the suggestion of W. T. Shore, attorney for the Strand, and others, who had pointed out that the theatres had spent several hundred dollars for the special showings and had not been given ample notice of the ruling to drop the midnight performances.

The question of Sunday midnight shows was the subject of many pastors in the city in their talks from pulpits and public opinion was aroused against the midnight performances.

Changes in Personnel of Kinogram Newsreel

Several changes in the personnel of the home office staff of Kinograms, Educational's newsreel, and its staff abroad were announced this week.

James N. Donohue, assistant news editor of Kinograms, has returned to his desk after a long absence due to a serious illness. Allyn Butterfield, film editor who filled Mr. Donohue's post while the latter was absent, has been raised to the position of chief of a special feature division. Both Messrs Donohue and Butterfield will be associated with H. E. Hancock, news editor, under the supervision of Forrest Izard, managing editor. Besides these other changes, Leo Rossi has joined the home office staff of cameramen.

George Price has been made camera representative in Central America, while Pelle Person has been appointed Kinogram representative in Norway and Sweden.

I. W. Killam Purchases Toronto Mail and Empire

I. W. Killam has purchased the Toronto Mail and Empire, one of the largest Canadian morning newspapers, paying well over a million dollars for the paper. For many years Mr. Killam has been a director of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, which controls a chain of over 120 theatres in the Dominion. Incidentally, Mr. Killam is president of the Royal Securities Corporation, Montreal, succeeding Lord Beaverbrook of London, England. Mr. Killam is a personal friend of Lord Beaverbrook.

Haverhill, Mass., Theatres Closed Due to Epidemic

All of the theatres at Haverhill, Mass., have been ordered closed indefinitely, all public gatherings have been forbidden and the schools of the city closed because of an epidemic of infantile paralysis in that city. More than a hundred cases have been reported. It is probable the theatres will not be permitted to open for about a month.

John E. Saxe Silent on Rumored Chain Merger

REPORTS that West Coast had purchased the theatre chain of Saxe Amusement Enterprises or that a merger of the two chains had been effected received no verification from John E. Saxe, president of the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, who, with H. J. Fitzgerald, general manager of the Saxe chain, and Oscar Brachman, real estate dealer, have just returned to Milwaukee from a visit to New York. As usual, when these men travel to New York rumors are circulated that the Saxe chain has either been sold or merged. The Saxe office remains silent on the subject.

De Mille Studio Launches Three New Productions

With "Chicago," "The Leopard Lady" and "Let 'er Go Gallagher" just put into work, the De Mille studio has launched what is perhaps the most industrious production period in its history.

Frank Urson is directing "Chicago" with Phyllis Haver, Victor Varconi, Robert Edeson, May Robson and others in the cast. Jacqueline Logan is featured in "The Leopard Lady" which Rupert Julian and Bertram Millhauser are producing; Robert Armstrong and Alan Hale have important parts. "Let 'er Go Gallagher," from the story of that title by Richard Harding Davis, has been started by Director Elmer Clifton with Junior Coghlan featured.

"My Friend From India" is in work under the direction of E. Mason Hopper with Franklyn Pangborn in the lead and Elinor Fair the chief feminine player. "Dress Parade" and "The Main Event" are now in the cutting room, while "The Forbidden Woman" will be ready shortly for previewing purposes. James Cruze is busy preparing "The Night Flyer;" "Rip Van Winkle" and "The Blue Danube" are among the other productions now in preparation.

Hall Finishes Two "Color Classics" for Tiffany

Hal Hall has arrived in Hollywood from Glacier National Park in Montana where he filmed two Indian pictures, "Scarface" and "The Bridal of Pennacook," for the Tiffany "Color Classic" series. They are done in Technicolor.

Both stories were written by Hall, the first around an Indian legend and the second from the poem by Whittier. Blackfeet Indians supplied atmosphere in the small parts. Consuelo Dawn is featured in both productions. Both she and Hall were adopted by the Blackfeet into their tribe.

J. M. Schenck Sails for Britain for Month's Trip

Joseph M. Schenck, president and chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, sailed from New York for England on the SS Berengaria, Tuesday, October 11th. He will be abroad for four weeks on business relating to United Artists and expects to visit United Artists' branches in European capitals before returning to the United States.

Attack Anti-Trust Law

Cal's Cartwright Act Put to Test in Suit Brought by Exhibitor Charging Non-Service

THE constitutionality of California's anti-trust law, the Cartwright act, is to be attacked in a suit defended by Frank A. McCauley and Lewis R. Greenfield, Santa Cruz exhibitors and the following film companies: F B O, Fox, Educational, First National, P.D.C., Warners, Paramount, M-G-M and Universal.

J. A. Harvey, Jr., a Santa Cruz exhibitor, brought the suit for double damages of $100,000, alleging that the exhibitors and distributors conspired to cut off his film supply. He charges that Greenfield and Macauley, each of whom is the owner of a large theatre in Santa Cruz, threatened the various exchanges that they would cease to patronize them if any service was extended to Harvey. The latter further claims that exchanges, which are asserted to control more than 95 per cent of production and distribution in the United States, entered into an agreement with Greenfield and Macauley and with one another, whereby Harvey would be denied service.

Each of the companies and the individuals filed a separate answer denying all allegations. Some of the exchanges in their answers contend that films were at all times available to Harvey if he would pay reasonable prices, while others claimed the right to determine with whom they would do business. All exchanges denied the existence of any agreement with Greenfield or Macauley whereby Harvey was to be denied service.

Gavin McNab and Nat Schmulowitz, San Francisco attorneys, will present the attack on the constitutionality of the anti-trust law. Aside from the issues that have been raised by directly controverting the charges made by Harvey, each of the defendants has interposed objections to the claims advanced by Harvey, predicated upon the unconstitutionality of the socalled Cartwright act.

It is claimed that the Cartwright act is unconstitutional in that it is in conflict with Section I of Article V of the amendments of the United States Constitution, and also with Article XIV of the amendments to the Constitution.

Sam Warner Buried; Services in N. Y. & L. A.

SAM WARNER, vice-president of Warner Bros., who died on October 5th, was buried last Sunday, October 9th, the funeral services being held at Bresee Bros. Chapel in Los Angeles where the body was interred. Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin officiated. As a mark of respect to the memory of the late executive, no matinee performance of "The Jazz Singer" was held at the Warner Theatre in New York. The home offices of the Warner Bros. and the Warner studio in Hollywood were also the scene of memorial services.

Three hundred friends were gathered Sunday morning in the New York office to honor the memory of the deceased. The service was conducted by Dr. A. Kress of Temple Emanuel, a life-long friend of the dead. Only relatives, close friends and employees of Warner Bros. were admitted to the service. The Masonic Quartette from Pacific Lodge No. 233 in New York City sang the Masonic hymn, "The Song of the Roses," and placed a great bouquet of white roses before a large portrait of their dead friend. Dr. Kress delivered a eulogy and the last prayer was chanted by Cantor Josef Rosenblatt.

At the Warner studio Reverend Neal Dodd paid high tribute to the character and work of the dead executive.

Eighteen Subjects Listed by Educational for Nov.

The program of comedies, cartoons and other shorts scheduled for the month of November by Educational is comprised of 18 reels of varied entertainment, exclusive of the bi-weekly issues of the Kinogram News.

"Some Scout," a Lupino Lane comedy with Estelle Bradley, is included among the first week's releases; Lane was directed by Mack Sandrich. Jerry Drew, formerly Clem Beauchamp, plays his first starring role in "Brunettes Prefer Gentlemen" which Charles Lamont directed. A new comedian, Monty Collins, for whom Educational predicts a bright future, is starred in two Cameos, "He Tried to Please" and "Rest Day," to be released on the 6th and 20th respectively.

Johnny Arthur is the star of "Scared Silly," which Charles Lamont directed and which will be released on November 13th. Dorothy Devore's contribution for the month is "The Little Rube," programmed for the third week and directed by Norman Taurog. "Big Boy" will be seen in "Shamrock Alley," scheduled for the 27th; he was again directed by Lamont. Eddie Quillan makes his initial appearance under the Educational trademark in "Red Hot Bullets," his running mate being George Davis; they were directed by Stephen Roberts. "Uncle Tom's Crabbin'" and "Whys and Other Whys" are the two Felix cartoons for the month.

"Models in Mud," a Lyman H. Howe Hodge-Podge, to be released on the 13th, and "Many Wings"—"Besides the Still Waters," a Bruce Scenic," set for the 20th, are the two concluding releases for November.

Chamberlain Co. Declares 55th Quarterly Dividend

Maintaining an unbroken record of more than fifteen years for paying dividends on its seven per cent preferred profits-participating stock, the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of Shamokin, Pa., has just declared its fifty-fifth regular quarterly disbursement to shareholders. The corporation controls a large chain of picture theatres located in Shamokin and nearby towns in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania. In a published statement it is pointed out that "shareholders who purchased the earliest securities have received in dividends more than the face value of their original investment, the corporation never having passed a dividend because of adverse industrial conditions."

New York Ordinance Amendment Introduced Asking Censorship for City

JOSEPH V. McKEE, president of the Board of Aldermen of New York City, has had introduced before that body an amendment to the code of ordinances asking censorship in New York City. The amendment is designed to empower the city to deal directly with picture exhibitions.

The McKee amendment is largely the result of protests by members of the American Irish Vigilance Committee against certain films they claimed were offensive to the Irish. They mentioned specifically "The Callahans and the Murphys," "Irish Hearts," "The Shamrock and the Rose," and "The Garden of Allah." McKee saw showings of the first two pictures and then submitted his ordinance amendment.

The proposed ordinance delegates to the inspectors of the Department of Licenses the authority to decide what pictures are, "immoral, indecent, or tend to ridicule, disparage or hold up to obloquy or contempt any race, creed or nationality, or are calculated to arouse racial, national or religious prejudice," and report such films to the "Commissioner of Licenses who shall thereupon cancel the licenses of the theatre exhibiting such picture."

Predicts Fewer Releases

Elmer Pearson Says Common Sense Application Is Guiding All Studio Policies

ELMER PEARSON, first vice-president of Pathe Exchange, Inc., back from a three weeks' stay in Hollywood, gives it as his impression that more common sense is being injected in the motion picture industry than ever before, that the number of actual releases despite the number of pictures produced this season will be smaller than in any season for several years, and that the tendency is all toward improvement in product, efficiency and economy.

In a statement issued, Mr. Pearson said:

"In general, it impressed me that common sense is acquiring domination over the entire industry. Moves toward efficiency and improved economic methods are seen in every studio. More than that, I believe any company will release all the pictures announced for this year, and therefore the number of actual releases will be the smallest in any season for several years. This, also, is a step in the right direction. The market will not be over-crowded and, with fewer productions made, better quality is certain to result."

Elmer Pearson

Mr. Pearson went to California to confer with Cecil B. De Mille and other executives of the company and to discuss plans for product for the coming year.

With regard to this, he said:

"Plans for next year are well along. The outlook is extremely promising. We will have plenty of the new product to show by the time the next selling season starts. The enthusiasm of the New York office and the studio has spread to the field. The sales force, encouraged by the splendid product turned out recently, is determined to make a record this season. And judging by the early returns, this will be accomplished."

While on the coast Mr. Pearson had several of the pictures recently completed at the De Mille studio screened for him and expressed himself as immensely pleased with their quality. He was especially enthusiastic over "Dress Parade," the picture that was made at West Point, "The Leopard Lady," "The Forbidden Woman," "The Main Event" and "Chicago."

Briefs

ROXY started a new policy governing his musical programs on Sunday morning October 16th, when the Symphony Orchestra of the Roxy gave a concert of orchestral music at 11 o'clock as a special Sunday feature during the winter season. The admission price is the same as that for any Sunday performance and those attending the concert may remain for the first showing of the feature picture.

THE Liberty theatre in Watertown, N. Y., recently offered a special Thursday afternoon matinee for children at a five cent admission price. The matinee, presented after school hours, was so successful that it probably will be repeated regularly each week throughout the winter.

EXHIBITORS in the upper New York State district, where amateur nights are an established and generally used attraction, have hit upon the plan of rewarding acts according to the applause they draw, though some of the acts which have played the circuit as amateurs insist upon a flat guarantee, win, lose or draw in the applause competition.

MARTIAL music, marching men, flags and bunting, are proving the most practical and popular elements of campaigns for popular-priced showings of "The Big Parade."

MANAGER FERRIS THOMPSON, of the Thompson theatre, Healdton, Okla., used flags, red flares and a military band to attract attention to his presentation of the King Vidor production. The marquee lights were red, white and blue, with a profusion of flags added to the decoration. In addition, there was a street parade of soldiers from garrison for the quartermaster's transport company, with army trucks bearing banners announcing the show.

C. W. MILLER, manager of the Hippodrome,, Youngstown, Ohio, used red flares on the marquee of that house and offered a band concert, with the musicians seated on top of the marquee, as an opening night exploitation stunt.

WITH a circus in town as additional Saturday competition, Barney Kenworthy, manager of the Globe theatre in Albany, Oregon, was forced to put on something exceptional in the way of publicity for his showing of "The Wolf's Trail," starring "Dynamite," canine actor, or take the consequences of a licking at the box office. A simple expedient saved the day for him. This was a newspaper tie-up in which a local merchant also participated by offering prizes for the best "mutt" entered in a parade of dogs owned, or borrowed for the occasion, by local boys.

A LARGE model airplane, built of light wood strips and covered with canvas, proved an attraction-getting lobby display for the showing of "The Lone Eagle" at the Capitol theatre in Atlanta recently. The plane, with a wing spread which reached from one side of the lobby to the other, was suspended in the outer lobby, with its nose projecting out over the sidewalk line.

Frontal display for "Chang" (Paramount) at the UFA theatre in Berlin Germany. The designer has followed good precedent—it is reminiscent of Gerome's famous painting, the lion in the desert—and good practice, for there is more attraction value and atmosphere accomplished by showing only one animal and one tropical tree than could have been achieved had the attempt been made to depict a herd and a jungle.

New Style Lobby Posters

Made by Process Giving Effect of Oil Painting Printed on Heavy Stock for Cutout or Framing

WITH the number of exhibitors interested in the use of advertising accessories increasing daily, it is apparent that a concentrated effort is being made toward the preparation of a better line of exhibitor advertising material by those responsible for this work in all the major corporations.

How to take care of the big, first-run exhibitors who preferred hand-painted, flat-color posters for their lobby display to the regular run of lithographs provided by the distributing corporations was one of the problems of those preparing the advertising accessories. This has been solved by Fox Films through the use of a relatively new printing method in which flat-color reproductions are made by printing with oil paint through a silk screen process, which gives every poster the effect of a hand-painted original.

These posters are printed on heavy cardboard, and are self framed, in case some exhibitors prefer to use them as they are, instead of placing them in their lobby cases. They also will prove highly attractive for small cut-outs or for window display purposes. To date, Fox has only prepared them in one-sheet size, but, if the demand warrants, other sizes will be added.

This is one of several innovations recently introduced by the Fox accessories division, and early indications point to success for the venture. One of the most popular of the newer Fox accessories is the 14- by 17-inch colored reproductions being furnished with each important attraction. These are brilliantly colored pictures giving the effect of oil paintings, which effect is enhanced by the fact that each picture is varnished.

Portraits of all Fox stars and featured players of the same size, and printed by the same process, also have been made available for exhibitors at each Fox exchange. Twenty-two by twenty-eights in this same, attractive process are in the course of manufacture, and will be in the Fox exchanges in the near future.

Considerable attention has been given the preparation of lobby display photographs by Fox, and the results obtained for "What Price Glory" show that this end of the industry can be improved, when new methods of printing are taken into consideration. For both 11 by 14's and 22 by 28's on this attraction, Fox prepared individual oil paintings of actual scenes from the production. These were reproduced by a lithograph process which made it possible to reproduce all the color effects of the paintings. After that the lithographs were "Ver plexed," which is a process of embossing all the artist's brush strokes shown on the original painting, which is followed by a method of heavy varnishing. The ultimate result is an oil painting reproduction, which the average layman would not be likely to detect from the original.

Not only are new styles of accessories being introduced with nearly every picture, but a much more varied selection of the standard advertising material is being offered. The number of advertising cuts and mats has been increased to considerable extent since the beginning of the present season, and the variety of [illegible] by ten still photographs has been [illegible] in many cases.

Football Season Stunts

WITH the football season swinging into its stride, picture theatre showmen are beginning to work out the plans previously formulated on the basis of past experience to take advantage of the interest in this popular sport. Last season the showmen played up strongly to the football enthusiasm of youth and age, with results that proved tonic to box offices, and which were responsible for writing another chapter in the memo book of theatrical exploitation.

There will be many elaborate campaigns tied up with football teams, or some outstanding gridiron contest this season, and such will develop when these special occasions arise. However, there are many well laid plans to co-operate, as it were, with colleges, high schools and directly with football teams now under way in various parts of the country. To mention a few of them, representative of several ideas along generally similar lines, may suffice to put into the record some of the best football season ideas developed by showmen during 1927.

Among the least spectacular, from a standpoint of exploitation novelty, but probably one of the most sound and availing ideas, is the arrangement to make special news pictures of the football games played by local teams and exhibited as an added attraction at the local theatre. This stunt is to be carried out in a number of towns and cities, in connection with either college or high school teams. Among the theatres which will use this idea are the State and Strand in Schenectady, where arrangements have been made to take pictures of all of the football games played at Union College in that city, and show them on the screens of the two houses.

Taking seasonable advantage of the presence of the college football season, Manager Charles J. Jones, of the Colonial Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., in the exploitation of "The Drop Kick," featuring Richard Barthelmess, which showed in the Colonial the week of September 26, adopted the idea of inviting the football squads of five local high schools to visit the theatre on five successive nights during the week's showing of the film play. On Monday he invited the John Harris High squad; and then, successively, the squads of the William Penn, Steelton, Thomas Edison and Camp Curtin high schools. On each evening the partisans of the team that was being entertained were present in large numbers.

Although "Swim, Girl, Swim" doesn't show any football scenes, it does, however, lend itself to a college atmosphere, which is particularly interesting to the college and high school students.

When Bebe Daniels in "Swim, Girl, Swim" played at the Lyric Theatre, Jackson, Tenn., Manager Emil Bernstecker designated two nights for football rallies; one for the college and the other for the high school.

De luxe herald and mailing piece used by Manager Forrest C. Templin of the New Morrison theatre, Alliance, Ohio, to exploit "Camille" (First National). The stock herald is pasted in the frame of the sheet, printed on a good quality of linen writing paper.

"Patent Leather Kid" Aided by Good Exploitation

High-powered exploitation launched "The Patent Leather Kid" when it began its Broadway engagement at the Globe theatre, New York, and again when this new Barthelmess picture opened at the Woods theatre in Chicago. Both campaigns were marked by exploitation ranging from street ballyhoo to flashy lobby display, with newspaper advertising and publicity to bolster the drive in behalf of the two-a-day presentations of "The Patent Leather Kid."

The war angle was selected for ballyhoo treatment, and on the opening night at the Globe there was an imposing parade of army transport trucks, all bearing banners advertising the show.

One of the novel features of the lobby display work at both the Globe and the Woods was the patent leather material used as a background for display panels featuring cutout figures made from enlargements of stills. An attractive arrangement and one which tied up neatly with the title was accomplished in this way.

Ballyhoo Worker Carries Portable Phonograph

Among several novel stunts with which Manager Emil Bernstecker exploited his showing of "The Big Parade" at the Lyric theatre in Jackson, Tenn., was a ballyhoo which attracted the attention of crowds at the State Fair grounds. The worker was garbed in grotesque costume, ill fitting and red in color, and carried, concealed under his enormous coat, a portable phonograph He was able to change records on the machine without being detected at it, with the result that the music mysteriously issuing from the folds of his coat, the screaming costume and his clowning centered all eyes upon him. He wore a sign on his chest reading "I'm on my way" and on his back was a strip with the legend "To See the Big Parade at the Lyric."

Named Publicity Director for Criterion, Frisco

Tom Sanson, formerly handling the Fanchon & Marco circuit publicity for West Coast Theatres, Inc., has been assigned to handle the press at the Criterion Theatre.

Sanson will begin with a campaign on the western premiere of Norma Talmadge's "The Dove."

Key City Reports

New York City

AS during the previous week, counter attractions and Jewish holidays again conspired to hurt to a considerable extent box offices among the Broadway houses for the week ending October 8. From Wednesday night to Thursday at sundown, the usual theatre throngs were curiously absent. And then, during the last few days of the week, much interest was centered on the outcome of the World Series games.

With Pat Rooney as Master of Ceremonies, an enlarged stage, hydraulic orchestra platform, many other stage alterations, and an entirely new presentation policy advertised to the public through lavish newspaper space and radio broadcast, the Capitol Theatre caught a good shore of attention. The show appears to be catching on in good shape, and will probably grow in favor.

"Loves of Carmen" at the Roxy finished its two weeks' run, and this house also felt the depression despite the fact that the picture is assured "box office."

Along with the new Capitol policy, probably the one other sensation of the week was the premiere of "The Jazz Singer" and Vitaphone at Warners. Wise ones predict a long run. Vitaphone selections by Al Jolson figuring heavily in comment.

"Underworld" ended a very satisfactory run at the Rivoli, and the other Publix houses also showed strong with "Wings" and a Menjou picture, "A Gentleman from Paris," going particularly well at the Paramount. Universal's Colony did fairly well with "A Man's Past." At the Globe, "The Patent Leather Kid" continues, and its business was in proportion for the off week. "The Magic Flame" is scheduled to finish its run at the Rialto this week, to be followed by "Jesse James."

The Strand drew a slightly below average crowd with "Three's a Crowd." Comment could not be termed entirely satisfactory for this Langdon picture.

"Sunrise" is doing nicely at the Times Square, and the "King of Kings" is still turning in a satisfactory gate at the Gaiety; likewise, "The Student Prince," The Big Parade's successor, at the Astor. "Les Miserables" is still demonstrating that there is plenty of interest in this Victor Hugo masterpiece.

Chicago

BUSINESS in Chicago was slightly spotty last week, the Jewish holiday cutting into theatre receipts in many neighborhoods. Loop houses, however, seemed not to be effected by this and generally reported good business.

The Chicago had as its feature picture "The Drop Kick" Spitalny's stage creation "Faust," and stage band featuring "Banjomania," and had a normal week. The Roosevelt did an average business with "Fireman Save My Child," which was playing in its last week at this theatre, and "The Way of All Flesh" which was also in its last week tapered off slightly at McVickers. "What Price Glory" plus Movietone, took strong at the Monroe, and Warner's Orpheum did a satisfactory business with "Sailor Izzy Murphy" and Vitaphone. The Oriental turned in its usual satisfactory box office report with "College" on the screen and Paul Ash and his Gang in "School Days."

Benny Meroff and his band in "Echoes of Spain" headed the Granada bill with "When A Man Loves" as a strong screen offering and did good business. The Uptown feature picture was "Camille" with the personal appearance of Miss America as an added attraction and Benny Kreuger, the combination proving a strong drawing program.

At The Capitol with its screen offering, "Alias The Lone Wolf" and Del Delbridge and his band on the stage, a fair box office report was turned in. The Avalon with "Slightly Used" was the screen feature, Vitaphone and Buddy Fisher and his Buddies, rounding out the program which did a satisfactory business.

Los Angeles

BEGINNING the football season, the well-timed showing of "The Drop Kick" at the Metropolitan drew very good attendance last week.

Motion picture patrons are approving of "Camille" at the Criterion as evidenced by the box office receipts for its third week.

Abe Lyman with his orchestra is probably the drawing card at the Boulevard, but Warners Bros.' "Slightly Used" is also pleasing the customers.

The management of Carthay Circle reports there was a very large increase of attendance at "Seventh Heaven" in its final week. "King of Kings," at Grauman's Chinese, is doing splendid business with three weeks more to run.

"Ben Hur" had a successful third week run at the Million Dollar.

Loew's State did much better business with "A Gentleman of Paris" than the week previous with "Rose of the Golden West."

Philadephia

THE fall season got well under way in Philadelphia this week and business was very encouraging.

The Stanley Theatre enjoyed a fairly good week with the "Stolen Bride," featuring Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes. The Pavley-Oukrainsky Ballet was held over for a second week, and was enthusiastically received.

Norma Talmadge in "Camille" finished up a rather brief run at the Stanton, to be followed by an extended engagement of "The Big Parade."

The "Gingham Girl" did only fairly well at the Arcadia.

"Figures Don't Lie" at the Karlton had a rather flat week. The Palace did a good business with Lillian Gish in "Annie Laurie." The Globe caught a big amount of transient patronage with "The Road to Mandalay."

The "King of Kings" is playing to big business with two shows daily at the Aldine.

The Fox continues to catch a good share of business and kept up its record with "The Loves of Carmen." The surrounding bill included Maria Gambarelli, prima ballerina of Roxy Theatre, in her own dance creation, "The Music Box" and the Ballet Corps in the "Dance of the Hours." Jim and Betty Morgan, a team of singers, registered well.

The Victoria enjoyed a good week with "What Price Glory."

Tampa

THE Victory gave the Tampa a race for the high gate last week. The Victory had "What Price Glory" and it pulled excellent business.

For the opening week of the "Harvest Month" at the Tampa, Manager Carroll dished up two exceptional programs, in addition to the features. "The Cat and the Canary" held the feature spot for the first half. It did fairly well, but felt the draw at the Victory. However, the last half came up better with "Shanghai Bound."

Business was a little "off" at the Strand, due to the big draws at the above two houses, but still the house enjoyed a pretty fair week. "By Whose Hand?" was featured two days, "The Nervous Wreck" the next three, and "Clancy's Kosher Wedding" the last two.

The Franklin brought back "Hula," which had played to exceptional business at the Tampa a few weeks ago, and it pulled very good for the two days' showing.

HELP
YOU'LL DIE LAUGHING AT THE GORILLA

Atlanta

ALTHOUGH two of the Atlanta theatres last week drew good business, on the whole, moving picture box offices showed up at the end somewhat below the average. The slump may be accredited to the fact that the city has been in the throes of the Southeastern Fair all week and Al Field's Minstrels arrived on Thursday to hold session the remainder of the week.

The Howard enjoyed the best box office of the week, with the drawing card in the added stage attraction, "Kiddies' Revue," in which fourteen of Atlanta's most talented children performed.

On the screen "Shanghai Bound" was well received.

"Paid to Love," brought a good crowd to the Capitol.

Loew's Grand fell below the average with "The Circus Ace."

"A Gentleman of Paris," was popular at Keith's Georgia, but competition was too strong for this theatre to boast of more than an average week.

The Metropolitan suffered considerably this week. It began with "The First Auto," but was forced to take this picture out after a two days' showing, replacing it with "Sin Cargo." An intensive exploitation campaign had been launched with the cooperation of an Atlanta newspaper, but even this failed to put the former picture over.

The Rialto continues to have bad weeks since the inauguration of their split bill program. "Madame Pompadour" was well liked by the small attendance, as was "Moulders of Men," which played the latter part of the week.

The Tudor had an average week with "Spangles" and "Valley of Hell."

The New Alamo had only one first run, "Out of the Storm," but the week rose up to the average.

Cleveland

A SUDDEN spurt of hot weather was fatal to the motion picture business here the first part of the week. Most of the houses reported a slow start on Sunday, which was as hot as any day in midsummer. As the weather cooled during the week, business increased.

"Chang" opened its local engagement at the Cameo with fair business the first part of the week, but showed a consistent gain the last half of the week. Hot weather was a serious obstacle for a big opening. It is being held over. "The Cat and the Canary," backed by a 100 per cent exploitation campaign, weathered the heat and did big business at Keith's Palace. "Beau Geste" started its continued run at the Stillman last week with just fair success. "The Drop Kick" appealed strongly to Allen audiences and played to consistently satisfactory business. The State had an average week with "The Crystal Cup" as the feature attraction. Business was just fair at the Park where "On Ze Boulevard" was offered. "Silk Stockings" proved a mildly diverting entertainment at Keith's East 105th St. theatre, and succeeded in drawing just fair business for the week. "The Gay Retreat," the attraction at Reade's Hippodrome, completely surrounded by an excellent presentation bill, succeeded in drawing big attendance. The Little Theatre of the Movies did fair business with "Shattered" a UFA production. The Circle played a first-run neighborhood engagement of "Mockery" with fair success. Neighborhood houses continue to report that business is below normal for this time of the year.

Albany

WITH crowds jamming the Mark Strand, in Albany, each day last week, a new attendance record was hung up for that theatre with "The Big Parade." Had it not been for the policy of the house not to run into the second week, there is no doubt that picture could have played to capacity business for a second and probably third week. The Leland Theatre did a good business with "The Life of Riley," and, while there was no hold out on any night, the house was packed even to the gallery. "The Tender Hour" proved exceptionally strong, and came as a big surprise, at the Clinton Square, the Wednesday matinee being the biggest of any throughout the entire year. The Mark Ritz played to very satisfactory business with "Shanghai Bound."

In Schenectady, "The Way of All Flesh," runing at Proctor's, did not draw any too well. At the Strand, the crowds were standing at "Naughty, But Nice," while "Hard Boiled Haggerty" did just fair at the large State Theatre. In Troy, "Beau Geste" did not pan out well at the Troy Theatre, although those who saw the picture were very well pleased.

St. Louis

THE natural public reaction from the tornado which hit St. Louis and vicinity on September 29, was manifest last week and attendance marks at first runs and neighborhood houses was decidedly off.

St. Louis electrified America by its quick recovery from the disaster, but it was asking a little too much of even so live a town as St. Louis to have theatre attendance up to normal the first week after the storm.

The Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures proved the most popular drawing cards of the week. They were shown at the St. Louis, Orpheum and Grand Opera House and have been held over for an extra week at the last named theatre.

Bert Lytell, the motion picture star, was also on the bill at the St. Louis, appearing in person in the Lambs Gambol playlet "The Valiant."

"Seventh Heaven" was on the screen at the Loew's State Theatre and proved one of the best pictures of the year. Business was good considering general conditions in the city.

"Les Miserables" was the screen offering of the Missouri Theatre. The patrons didn't rave about it.

"Breakfast at Sunrise" was the Ambassador's feature film. It is a typical Constance Talmadge picture.

Des Moines

PARAMOUNT'S "Underworld" at the Des Moines probably captured first place among Des Moines' first run theatres last week. Although the weather was bad this picture did very well and received much favorable comment from the fans.

At the Capitol, First National's "The Stolen Bride," also drew what was considered good business, although it is believed that the accompanying stage show helped things considerably.

Business held up well all through the week at the Strand which had for its split week policy, "The Babe Comes Home" and "Alias The Lone Wolf."

Kansas City

A RETURN to fall weather brought a return to better box office receipts in Kansas City this week. The Liberty stepped to the fore with "Les Miserables" and did such a big week's business that it was decided to hold the picture a second week, a practice which is rare at the Liberty.

At the Newman Richard Dix in "Shanghai Bound" kept up a brisk pace all week, as did "Underworld" at the Royal. "The Drop Kick" at the Mainstreet blended in perfectly with existing football atmosphere and played to large crowds all week.

"What Price Glory" did a good second week's business at the Pantages, while "The Bush Leaguer" at the Globe, augmented by the Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures, the only pictures in the city which could not legally be seized by the federal government, played to packed houses all week.

Milwaukee

ANOTHER week of rain and more rain faced Milwaukee theatre goers this last week and business in the down town houses was consequently rather light. "Old Iron Sides" finished its second week at the Davidson and the final reckoning showed that the picture had been very popular and played to full houses at practically every performance. The Vitaphone continues to draw good patronage to the Garden where "Old San Francisco" was held over for a second week. "Alias the Deacon" was featured at the Alhambra for a short week and played to fair business. "The Cat and Canary" started its one week run at the Alhambra a day early and thus cut a day from the schedule of "Alias the Deacon." "Spring Fever" was a good drawing card at the Wisconsin and business was average. The Strand played to almost capacity houses at every showing for the fight pictures were shown in addition to "The Crystal Cup." "The Rough Riders" at the Merrill made a bid for patronage of school children and found business fairly good. "Publicity Madness" at the Orpheum was a bright spot on an otherwise mediocre bill.

Neighborhood houses did better business than down town theatres last week despite the wet weather.

San Francisco

THE past week in San Francisco motion picture theatres business was not as good as it usually is because of the three very warm days.

"Ben Hur" continued to draw crowds to the California Theatre, where it was shown a third week. "The Cat and Canary," shown for a fifth week at the St. Francis Theatre refilled that house in the evenings and that picture continues to prove its popularity. "Shanghai Bound" drew fairly well at the Granada Theatre, and the stage act was more than popular. "Rose of the Golden West," at the Warfield Theatre, was considered a fair picture. The specialty act, however, was considered popular. "The Fighting Eagle," at the Imperial Theatre, together with the special orchestra was considered very popular.

The Columbia Theatre for two days was more than crowded with the Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures.

The Union Square Theatre was crowded with "Say It with Diamonds," a comedy and vaudeville acts. The Golden Gate Theatre did exceptionally well with "The Country Doctor" on the screen and its vaudeville acts. The Cameo Theatre, Frank Lacey announces, will start a new policy of showing the highest class pictures at the cheap price of 15 cents. Last week, "The Merry Widow" was shown under this politcy and the house was crowded.

Central Pennsylvania

EXTRA interest in the motion picture shows in Harrisburg was aroused by the enterprise of most of the leading down-town theatres in announcing the results of the World Series baseball games at the matinee performances. Special facilities for this service were provided in all the principal Wilmer & Vincent houses.

At the State there was appropriately introduced a baseball film play, "The Bush Leaguer," and this was a material aid in boosting box office receipts. The Victoria's offering for the week was "Shanghai Bound," and this, like most Dix plays in Harrisburg, brought very satisfactory box office results. The Colonial showed "The Blood Ship," and this, too, proved a profitable attraction. Loew's Regent presented "The Magic Flame," which proved to have lots of drawing power.

Two Lillian Gish plays were offered in neighborhood houses, the Russel theatre showing "Annie Laurie," and the Broad Street, "The Scarlet Letter," and both did good business. The Rialto brought back "It," which drew big crowds.

In competition with the picture attractions the Morgan Wallace Players opened an engagement of stock comedy-drama.

Salt Lake City

LAST week was an unusual one in the annals of Salt Lake City theatre history, due to the opening of the big, new Capitol Theatre, owned and operated by the Louis Marcus Enterprises. Theatre business averaged very good at all the down-town motion picture houses, 'though weather conditions have been very uncertain.

The feature picture choosen for the opening week of the Capitol was "Swim, Girl, Swim." The Fanchon and Marco stage presentation also was a big attraction.

"What Price Glory" did an exceptionally good business at the Pantages Theatre, according to Manager Grant Pemberton. This picture had been heavily advertised, and looked forward to with great anticipation in this city.

"The Drop Kick" went over well, having played to moderately crowded houses at the Paramount Empress.

"The Desired Woman," was favorably received at the new American here, but the big attraction which packed the houses continuously was the showing of the Dempsey-Tunney fight.

The Victory Theatre, which now presents vaudeville as well as a picture program, had a good week, though box office receipts were somewhat less than the preceding week during the showing of Harry Langdon in "Three's a Crowd."

"The Angel of Broadway" packed the houses at the Gem Theatre, it is stated.

"The Everlasting Whisper" brought exceptional results to the box office of the Empire Theatre here.

At the Rialto, a second-run house, "Man Power" crowded the house throughout the week.

Minneapolis

STRIKE conditions in Minneapolis are still having little effect on theatre attendance, judging from the excellent business reported last week.

"The Big Parade," which showed for a couple of weeks last winter at the Metropolitan as a road production, opened at the Garrick Theatre, and did a smashing good business; the film was held over for a second week as a result. The pictures of the Dempsey-Tunney fight came into the Lyric and played to S.R.O. business a good portion of the time, with Harry Langdon in "Three's a Crowd." The fight films also were held over for a second week. The State did just a good average business with "Spring Fever." A big stage show helped draw the crowds. "The Rough Riders" finished its second week at the Strand, and made a very satisfactory showing.

Pantages featured "The Joy Girl" and enjoyed a good week, and the Hennepin-Orpheum's film attraction, "The Angel of Broadway," proved popular. Business continues to hold up well at the neighborhood houses. The Loring, the Lagoon, the Rialto and the Lyndale all reported good weeks with such pictures as "Firemen, Save My Child," "Camille" and "The Unknown."

Oklahoma City

THE Criterion had a very successful week of business with "Adam and Evil" and an added attraction of a comedian on the stage. The picture was well liked, and the attendance was large. Larger space was used in the newspapers.

"The Country Doctor" was a big hit with the Liberty crowds last week, and booked to show four days, the picture was kept all week through request.

"A Gentleman from Paris" was voted good comedy by the Capital audiences the first of the week, and was followed by another popular picture, "Figures Don't Lie" for the last half. Business good all week.

"The American Beauty" brought all Billie Dove's many fans to the Empress and in consequence the box-office report was perfectly satisfactory. Business up to par.

There was practically no competition with the motion picture theatres here last week and weather was generally fair and cool.

Ottawa

DESPITE the opposition of a French Repertoire Company at the Russell Theatre, big league baseball and a dramatic stock unit at the Galvin Theatre, the exhibitors of Ottawa, Ontario, had plenty of money to carry to the bank during the week of October 3, with one exception. The one flop was at the Imperial Theatre, where the British production "Nelson" failed to excite, despite a gaily decorated theatre front.

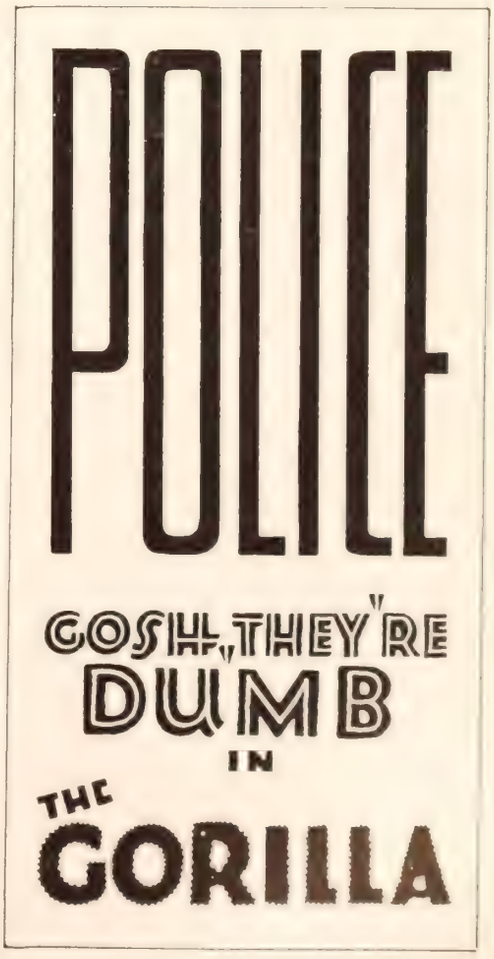
The official Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures held up very well at the Centre Theatre, where Manager Don Stapleton held them over for a second week, the fiction feature being "Smile, Brother, Smile."

The Regent Theatre drew well with "Mockery."

Manager J. M. Franklin had a well-balanced bill at B. F. Keith's, "The Heart Thief" proving to be worth-while. This picture drew patronage regardless of the vaudeville.

The Rex Theatre was packed every night for second run of "The Better 'Ole."

Manager Nolan also cashed in on the news of Norma Shearer's wedding, by playing "The Waning Sex" at his Columbia Theatre, Ottawa.



Over in Hull, Quebec, the rebuilt and enlarged Laurier Theatre presented "Mr. Wu," with excellent results, the patronage being very heavy every night. "One Increasing Purpose" was fair at the Eden Theatre, Hull.

Lease of Miles Theatre, Detroit, Transferred

Transfer of the lease for the Miles Theatre and the site which it occupies on Griswold street between Grand River Avenue and State, Detroit, Mich., to the Griswold Amusement Co., composed of William A. Comstock, C. C. Hyatt and James C. McCabe, was announced today by the Miles Detroit Theatre Co. The lease has 63 years to run. A building, the type of which has not yet been determined, at least 15 stories in height will be erected. C. H. Miles, the former owner, is now centering his attention on the new Oriental which opened recently.

Lease Closed With Saenger for Hotel-Theatre Project

The Chamber of Commerce of Hattiesburg, Miss., has announced the closing of a 20-year lease with the Saenger Amusement Company on the theatre portion of a $1,100,000 hotel and theatre project on Pine, Forrest and Front street, Hattiesburg. Contracts for the construction of the building have been awarded to the Selden-Breck Construction Company of St. Louis, Mo.

Harry Thew, screen writer, has been signed to write for Fox Films. He will first compose a comedy vehicle for Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen, who are now working on a vehicle.

A new Paramount Western titled "Open Range" and co-starring Lane Chandler and Betty Bronson has been completed by Paramount. The story is by Zane Grey.

Antonio Moreno will play opposite Olive Borden in "Come to My House," her next picture for Fox Films, which will soon go into production under the direction of Alfred E. Green. The story is an adaptation of the Liberty Magazine story by Arthur Somers Roche.

Clyde Bruckman has concluded the direction of "Love and Beat 'Em," a new Hal Roach comedy for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The leading roles are in the hands of Stan Laurel, Oliver Hardy, Martha Sleeper and Viola Richard.

"The Old Wallop," second of Hal Roach's "Our Gang" comedies for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer distribution, was recently completed under the direction of Robert McGowan.

Another comedy role will be played by William Austin, who but recently signed a new contract with Paramount. His new assignment is in "Honeymoon Hate," Florence Vidor's new picture.

A title for Emil Jannings' third American-made picture is being sought after by Paramount. The star's new role will be that of a Russian general and he will be directed by Josef von Sternberg.

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are to make "The Big Game Hunt." The story, being written by Grover Jones and Keene Thompson, will be directed by Frank Strayer.

"Temptations of a Shop Girl," a First Division film starring Betty Compson, has been completed, cut and titled and will be shipped East within a week. I. E. Chadwick produced the picture.

"Ginsberg the Great" is the new title of George Jessel's feature for Warner Bros., hitherto known as "The Broadway Kid." The story was written by Anthony Coldeway and directed by Byron Haskins.

Casting of Paramount's "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" has finally been finished. In the cast are Mack Swain, Joe Butterworth, Margaret Seddon, Jean Hersholt, Holmes Herbert and Blanche Frederic.

Archie L. Mayo will make "Beware of Widows" at the Warners Bros. studio, with Irene Rich starring.

Lina Basquette plays in support of Adolphe Menjou in his new starring vehicle for Paramount entitled "Serenade." Among those whom H. D'Abbodie D'Arrast is directing are Martha Franklin, Lawrence Grant, Kathryn Carver and Nicholas Soussanin.

Several new characters will be created by Anita Loos for Paramount's version of her "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." Roles of "First Farm Hand," "Second Farm Hand," "Gold Prospector" and "Head of Business College" will be filled by Mark Hamilton, Frankie Adams, Luke Cosgrave and Charles Thurston.

"A Reno Divorce" is the new title given "Roulette," the working title of a Warner Bros. picture which has May McAvoy starred. Ralph Graves wrote and directed the story and acted the part of the leading man. The film will be an October release.

Mack Sennett is personally directing "The Romance of a Bathing Girl," the cast of which is headlined by Johnny Burke, Alma Bennett, Sally Eilers and Matty Kemp. Also in the cast will be Lionel Belmore, Wheeler Oakman and Eugene Pallette.

Educational's silk top comedian, Clem Beauchamp, has changed his name to Jerry Drew and will make his initial appearance as a star in a Mermaid comedy now in production and titled "Brunettes Prefer Gentlemen." Charles Lamont is directing him.

Oliver Drake has started to do the continuity for "The Pinto Kid," Buzz Barton's fifth starring effort for F-B-O, and an adaptation of an original by John Twist and Jean Dupont.

Arthur Shadur, Universal studio manager, has been promoted to the position of supervisor of production at Universal City.

The commencement of the football season was also the signal for the start of production on "The Cheer Leader," Gotham Productions' college picture. Alvin Neitz is directing Ralph Graves, Gertrude Olmsted and Shirley Palmer. An actual grid-iron contest will supply the football sequences in the picture.

Roland Asher has been promoted to direct comedies by the Stern Bros. He is now making "Taking Orders," the eleventh "Mike and Ike" two-reeler.

Louise Brooks, Dorothy Arzner, Hugh Leland and Esther Ralston have signed new contracts with Paramount. Doris Anderson and Grover Jones, writers, have also affixed their signatures to contracts binding them to Paramount.

Directors Eddie Cline and Harry Edwards have finished two new comedies for Mack Sennett, the former made the first of the new Girl comedy series; the latter directed a new two-reeler with Billy Bevan and Vernon Dent.

Preliminary preparations were started this week at the F B O studio to film "Legionnaires in Paris," a feature comedy which will star Al Cooke and Kit Guard. Arvid Gilstrom will direct.

"Heroes in Blue," starring John Bowers, Sally Rand and Gareth Hughes, and "On the Stroke of Twelve," with David Torrence, June Marlowe, Lloyd Whitlock, Danny O'Shea, Lillian Worth, Charles West and Martin Turner, are two new pictures which Rayart has in production.

Clarence Badger will direct Clara Bow in her next picture, "Red Hair."

With the selection of Constantine Romanoff, Emilio Borgato and George Katsonaros, who will interpret the three Trojan war lords who defend Troy in "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," the cast for the First National special of that name is complete.

Julia Swayne Gordon and Helen Foster have joined the cast of Universal's "No. 13 Washington Square," now being made by Mal Brown from Leroy Scott's novel and play of that name. Jean Hersholt is the star.

Constance Lewis, sister of Lois Wilson, has a role in F B O's "Coney Island." Others in the production are William Irving and Rudolph Cameron.

Robert Armstrong, who appeared on Broadway in "Is Zat So?" will make his film debut in Pathe's new De Mille feature, "The Main Event." He will also be seen in "The Leopard Lady," which Rupert Julian and Bertram Millhauser will produce.

Owen Moore has been loaned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to Warner Bros., for the male lead in "In Name Only," which was started this month at the Warner studio. Helene Costello, John Miljan, Hugh Herbert, Claude Gillingwater and Arthur Hoyt are in the cast.

Alf Goulding is directing a new Pathe comedy which has Daphne Pollard and Carolle Lombard heading the cast.

"Honeymoon Flats," Earl Derr Bigger's novel, has been purchased by Universal for screening. It will be directed by Millard Webb.

Shots of a forest fire constitute the principal scenes in "Burning Timber"—"Rough Country," a new Bruce Outdoor Sketch which Educational is releasing this month.

Lorraine Eddy makes her screen debut in "Oh, Mummy!" a new Paramount Christie comedy.

Production on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's second of the series of great historical events is now nearing completion. The title has not been definitely set.

The moving season is the theme of a new Hal Roach comedy just finished for release by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It is "The Call of the Cuckoo" and stars Max Davidson.

Albert Kelley will produce "Stage Kisses," his first production for Columbia under a recently signed contract.

Hal Roach has signed Gene Morgan, popular band master of West Coast Theatres to appear in his comedies for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Lynn Shores, assistant to many leading directors, has been appointed assistant to William Le Baron, vice-president of F B O in charge of production.

Betty Boyd, who has been playing in Cameo comedies for Educational, has finished her first leading lady role opposite Lloyd Hamilton in a comedy directed by Norman Taurog.

First National has purchased the screening rights to a new play by Kenyon Nicholson written in collaboration with Thomas Barrows. The play is "Two Weeks Off."

"Honky Tonk," George Bancroft's initial Paramount starring vehicle, goes into production shortly under the direction of Victor Schertzinger.

Frank Hagney has been signed for a role in "Use Your Feet," Reginald Denny's current starring vehicle which Fred Newmeyer is directing. Barbara Worth is leading lady.

Arthur Gregor, Tiffany director, spent two years in prison in an English detention camp during the World War. After being exchanged for other prisoners he became Under-Secretary of State for Austria, before starting in directing.

Alberta Vaughn has been selected for a role in Ramon Novarro's new vehicle for Metro-Golwwyn-Mayer, which Harry Beaumont is directing.

Warner Bros, have started production on "Glorious Betsy," to star Dolores Costello. Alan Crosland is directing, Conrad Nagel and Andre de Seguerola have leading roles.

Joseph Henabery has been signed by First National to direct "Sailors' Wives."

With the addition of Charles Thurston, Aaron Edwards and A. Galanda, the cast of "The Spoilers of the West," Tim McCoy's new Western vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is complete. Marjorie Daw will be seen in the leading feminine role.

Claire Windsor's next production for Columbia will be "The Opening Night," one of the eight specials on the Columbia program. As soon as cast and director have been selected, work will start.

George Davis has been granted leave of absence from the Educational studio in order to play a role in First National's "The Caravan Trail."

Lowell Sherman has been assigned a part in "The Divine Woman," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production featuring Greta Garbo. Victor Seastrom will handle the megaphone.

"The Ghost Ship" is now in the course of filming by Tiffany. Forrest Sheldon is directing. The cast includes Dorothy Sebastian, Montague Love, Tom Santschi, Ray Hallor, Pat Harmon, Eileen Percy, Bud Duncan, Blue Washington and Sojin.

Pauline Curley has been added to the cast of "Mike and Ike" series of comedies which the Stern Bros. are producing for Universal. Her first role with the Stern comedy unit is the ingenue lead in "More Trouble."

Tiffany has started production on "Wild Geese." The cast has Belle Bennett, Russell Simpson, Eve Sothern, Donald Keith, Jason Robards, Anita Stewart, Wesley Barry, Reta Rae, Austin Jewel, Evelyn Selbie, Frank Austin, Bert Starkey and Jimmy Mack.

"The Renegade," Bob Steele's fourth starring Western for F B O, has been completed under the direction of Wallace Fox. Supporting roles are played by Dorothy Kitchen, Lafe McKee, Bob Fleming, Ethan Laidlaw and Nick Thompson.

Myrna Loy this week received a new Warner Bros. contract covering a period of five years.

Thelma Todd, Richard Dix' leading lady in "The Gay Defender," will be the feminine lead opposite Dix in his next production, "The Traveling Salesman," which Mal St Clair will direct.

Virginia Bradford has been assigned a part in "Chicago," the De Mille special which Frank Urson is to direct, with Cecil B. De Mille personally supervising.

Instead of "Miss Jockey," announced as Bebe Daniels' next vehicle for Paramount, "Wooden Dollars" will be the comedienne's next effort under the Paramount banner. Gregory La Cava is to direct.

Production has been completed on three new Pathe Westerns at the Metropolitan studio on the Coast. Don Coleman has finished "The Boss of Rustler's Roost," Jack Padjans has completed scenes of "Crashing Through," and Wally Wales has finished "The Survival of Slim."

"Wallflowers," the story by Temple Bailey, will be directed by Leo Meehan for F B O. Dorothy Yost has just completed the scenario and work of filming will begin as soon as the director has finished "Freckles."

Director Henry Lehrman has assembled the cast for Warner Bros.' "In Name Only," and is ready to begin actual production on the picture. Owen Moore, Kathryn Perry and Helene Costello head the cast.

Ross Lederman will direct Rin-Tin-Tin in "A Race for Life," which Warner Bros. will start within a few weeks.

Work having been finished on the academy sequences in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "West Point," Director Edward Sedgwick, William Haines and Joan Crawford have left for the Coast, where interiors will be shot.

Rex Lease will play in F B O's "Red Riders of Canada."

Don Coleman, who is being groomed by Leo Maloney for stardom, plays his "graduation" role in the Pathe Maloney Western, "The Apache Raider."

Johnny Walker has been signed for a role in Warner Bros.' "Good Time Charley."

Lloyd Hamilton appears as a beauty doctor in "New Wrinkles," which Educational is releasing this month.

Additions to the cast of Clara Bow's "Get Your Man," are Charles Rogers, Martha Franklin, John Cassar, Tom Ricketts, Billie Bennett, Josef Swickard, Harvey Clark, Josephine Dunn. Dorothy Arzner is directing.

William Russell, who starred ten years ago in Fox Films pictures, is back again on the Fox lot working as leading man in the new film, "Womanwise."

Sam Sax, president of Gotham Productions, has completed negotiations with Arthur Caesar for the screen rights on the Caesar play, "Abie of the U. S. A."

Lorraine Eason replaces Josephine Borio as the feminine lead in "The Swift Shadow," an F B O production with Ranger, the dog, starred.

Marie Dressler will support Marion Davies in "The Patsy," which King Vidor will direct for release by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"Some Scout"
(Educational—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

LUPINO LANE has a decidely worthwhile comedy offering here. In the frontier guise of the days of '49, the clever English pantomimist pokes subtle fun at the time-worn Western plot of Indian warfare which that purely American product—the wild West show—has utilized to good advantage since its conception. There is just as much of a story in this Lane opus as you will find in a majority of the feature Westerns. And there is also a great deal of nonsense at which Lane is a master in dispensing. He is always ready with an acrobatic flip, a look of askance, his little dance of rage before an enemy and his individual method of donning a coat.

That other member of the Lupino family, Wallace Lupino, plays the role of a renegade white man who goes over to the redskins. Estelle Bradley is the beautiful white maiden whom the Indians are after. Happening to be outside the stockade when the Indians begin their attack, Lane is not perturbed when several savage warriors surround him with threatening tomahawks. Instead, he resorts to guile and soon has the braves helpless in barrel hoops with which he had been showing them tricks. Then when the palisades no longer obstruct the Indians' advance and the whites are in a quandary wondering what to do, it is Lane who comes to the rescue and single handed subdues the foe.

It is a satisfying comedy and the adept and clever Lupino is in fine form.

"Should Second Husbands Come First?"
(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A REAL funny two-reeler, is this Hal Roach comedy which stars Max Davidson, with David Butler, Lillian Elliott and Spec O'Donnell. It fairly bulges with gag stuff and situations that are bound to creat laughs of the spontaneous variety. The supporting cast are seen to equally good advantage with the star.

Davidson is the second victim of Lillian, and Butler and Spec, as the sons, do not like the prospect of the match, so they try to disillusion Max. Their antics in so doing are extremely humorous for the most part, and well worked out. As a last resort, as the marriage ceremony is under way the two sons appear disguised as an outraged father and his ruined daughter, with a colored baby whitened for the occasion. Max is accused of betraying the girl and the wedding threatens to break up in a riot until the ruse is exposed through a southern exposure of the colored baby.

"The Iron Derby"
(Bray—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THEY have mixed comedy and motorcycling in this one. The attempts at hilarity oftimes do not click and the motorcycle stunts support these little let downs or changes in pace. Its comedy strikes one as only being fair in laugh appeal.

Charlie is the young fellow who is always to the fore. He has entered a motorcycle in a forthcoming race, "The Iron Derby.' Both he and his driver, Eddie, are captivated by the daughter of the man backing them in the contest. Though the girl's father has been told that he will lose the race to rival interests, Charlie and Eddie manfully assert that nothing of the sort will happen; they have visions of emerging victorious from the hill climb and winning the thanks of the grateful girl.

And they do just that. A fellow contestant, hired by the malicious firm who had threatened to put their machine out of the race, steals the carburetor of the motorcycle but is apprehended. The carburetor recovered, the machine manned by Charlie goes on to win the cycle derby, and, incidentally, the girl who had been vigorously rooting for him.

None of the principals does anything in the way of comedy to attract more than passing notice.

"For Men Only"
(Educational—One Reel)

ATOP a tall Grecian cliff, intrenched behind the strong walls of a monastery, live an order of monks, who have taken the vows of chastity. For five centuries men have lived and died in this almost inaccessible spot far from Eve and her blandishments. It's an interesting picture story that Walter Futter tells us in this latest of his "Curiosities—the Movie Sideshow" series. The subject is one not often touched upon; the episodes recounted are unusual from the point of view of the average man. The intimate aspect of monastery life, the solitude and the security of those sworn to it—all this is well brought out in a particularly fine set of titles by Beth Brown. They strengthen to a considerable extent the impression one receives from this release—a feeling of actually having come in contact with these religious. Not like ordinary reaction to a travel film, so often detached, aloof and cold, this film conveys the idea of intimate absorption, of an actual mingling with the group of men in question. It is probably due to the method of approach of the camerman, the assembling of the sequences in their smooth continuity and the apt title which so competently harmonize with their pictorial counterpart.

A dandy little short.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"The Second Honeymoon"
(Pathe-Henry & Polly—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THIS second episode of the turbulent life of Henry and Polly is full of the usual domestic difficulties of early married life and, while patterned somewhat after a series done by another producer, it's very well done, and should prove a welcome addition to the program of any theatre. Henry is discovered by Polly in a most earnest conversation with his stenographer. Of course, the subject is a present for Polly's anniversary, but she does not know. This almost breaks up the home, and when Henry suddenly remembers that an anniversary party is on and rushes home to find Polly being pursued by a couple of sheiks, matters become even more strained. A second honeymoon is the result.

"Football Officials"
(Rice-Pathe—One Reel)

WITH crowds of seventy thousand and less flocking to stadiums all over the country every Saturday afternoon to see their football heroes in action, Pathe has a timely subject in this one, which will give the uninitiated a very good insight into the intricacies of modern football. There are slow motion shots which show ends, tackles, guards, centers and backs performing their functions on various plays as they should be performed. There are few save the expert who know just the details of these plays, and they should prove educating to those who would learn some of the real, intimate details of the game. They also show the officials in the performance of their duties.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Felix the Cat Switches Witches"
(Educational—One Reel)

ONE of the best Felix cartoons the Sullivan studio has ever turned out. It is particularly appropriate for Hallowe'en as it boasts an atmosphere of dark and sombre woods, witches, owls and magic broomsticks. The kiddies will enjoy it tremendously. Moviegoing adults, too, will find much to laugh at here. Or perhaps we should say laugh with and not at for Felix has as light and bubbling a nature as his name implies and can always be counted on to arouse infectious laughter and chuckles. He is a harbinger of good will.

The execution of the backgrounds, the figures and the general appearance of this cartoon are all in the A Number 1 class. The term, production tone, so often applied to features, can, in turn, be applied to this one reel of moving black and white. Scan closely this number and notice with what artistry the drawings have been done. Surely, Pat Sullivan's staff is easily foremost in line when one attempts to draw up a list of the present-day cartoon makers and their relative worth.

Mystery lurks behind the trees and rocks of the forest through which Felix walks. It is Hallowe'en—the time when wind pranks are sprung with surprising suddenness, and an evening tense with the unexpected for Felix is capped when a wise old owl tells the cat his fortune. The bird declares that he will see the face of his future wife if he will but follow a certain formula. The cat does so, but all that he can summon is a hideous old witch who, claiming him for her own, pursues with her magic broomstick. But the cat's horror is dispelled in the climax when she suddenly turns into a white cat, whom Felix embraces as his ideal.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Daddyboy"
(Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BEN TURPIN, Alma Bennett, Johnny Burke, Ruth Taylor, Mary Mabery and others of the Sennett players, staged a pretty lively little comedy in this two-reeler, which has quite a number of humorous situations. It is not of the usual hilarious slapstick nature, though it has some gags that are funny.

Ben is an old boy who likes 'em young and younger. He is engaged to Alma, who at twenty-six is a trifle too old for him, but the ambitious mother cares for that by dolling Alma up in a youthful blonde wig and rompers, though Alma objects because she is enamoured of Ben's secretary. The youthful ruse of Alma works and Ben falls for her again, but she puts one over on him and elopes with the secretary. Ben, as the dyspeptic, does some real good pantomime. The rest of the cast also does some good work.

"The Big Tent"
(Fables-Pathe—One Reel)

THERE is quite a bit of good comedy injected into this cartoon of the antics of Milton Mouse, Rita and the villainous Thomas Cat in "The Big Tent." The story is better than usual, and the characters are put through some very humorous stunts. Little Milton Mouse is the clown in love with Rita Rat, the star of the circus. Rita indiscreetly accepts the attentions of Thomas Cat while Milton is doing his act. A lion breaks loose and their is general consternation, with Thomas trying to sacrifice Rita to the lion in an endeavor to save himself. Milton comes to the rescue, entangles the lion in a tree and escapes with Rita after flattening Thomas.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"New Wrinkles"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS comedy seems to get nowhere. It can really be divided into two comedies. The first half deals with the attempts of Lloyd Hamilton to purchase a hat while the second part brings Hamilton into a beauty parlor where he performs in slapstick fashion. Very little humor permeates its length. Hamilton has worked more impressively in past vehicles than he does here. The big comedian just ambles along with his exaggerated walk and his facial expressions of injured innocence. There's not enough substance in what he has to do; perhaps, if he had a line of vaudeville patter to hand out, the lack of this would not be so noticeable. But as he has to rely solely upon pantomime, he is not so effective.

The highlight of the hat store sequence is a gag that has to do with a derby—or several derbies. Hamilton tries on one of these hats. He takes it off, only to discover that there is a smaller derby underneath. He takes that one off also and finds another derby of a still smaller size. He removes derbies for quite a while until he has reached the final derby, so small that it looks like a bump on his head. Audiences are quite generous concerning the weaknesses of comedies; they do not take film fare as seriously as do critics in projection rooms. Therefore, they may, with a languid air, find something worthwhile in Hamilton's latest. Our opinion is that it is feeble stuff.

"His Ticklish Predicament"

(Bray—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THIS offering of the Skylark brand presents the efforts of a dumbbell graduate of a movie correspondence school to scale the well-guarded ramparts of Hollywood. Having taken one of those phoney courses in the art of Thespia, Jack Cooper considers himself a regular Barrymore. But, alas! None pay homage to his genius; the studio doormen violently bombard him with invectives; the stony faces of directors and studio managers do not soften to his entreaties. It is only when he has conceived the idea of impersonating a dummy that he succeeds in gaining admittance into the studio. And his luck holds when a troupe of players depart for a seaside location, bringing him along as one of the dummy props.

So far, so good! All is progressing nicely when the dummy has the misfortune to be unceremoniously dropped into the tent where the bathing girls' change of costume is made. He is vigorously ejected. Failure staring him in the face, Jack makes a desperate try to win the director. He makes such a fine impression that the haughty megaphone wielder relents and promises him the role of the victim, who, his sight gone, unwittingly walks over a lofty cliff. Jack finally takes the dive after several unsuccessful attempts.

It's an amusing comedy. Glen Lambert directed and Tiny Ward impersonated the director.

"Shooting Wild"

(Educational—One Reel)

JACK LLOYD, Eva Thatcher and Jack Miller are the trio in this Cameo which was directed by Mark Sandrich. It is fair as a laugh-getter.

Lloyd is an Englishman in the wild West section of the United States. He wears a silk topper, patent leathers, spats and sports a cane. In fact, he presented as grand a sartorial appearance as Miss Thatcher had ever dreamed of. Miss Thatcher impersonates a plump woman who is getting along in years and is still looking for a husband. Upon spotting the decked-out Lloyd, she jumps at the conclusion that he is her prospective husband come direct from the Eureka Matrimonial Agency. She clasps him to her bosom, he squirms and protests, but can really no nothing for watching him with baleful eye is little Eva's brother, a bad gun man of the West. So that is Jack's predicament and he cannot escape it no matter how he tries. His efforts to get out of the mess, the air of possession with which Eva and her brother regard him, supply the comedy, of which there is not so very much. There is a sufficient quantity, however, planted at intervals throughout the 1,000 feet of this release to make it suitable for the neighborhood and general audiences.—RAYMOND GANLY.

"Fresh and a Devil"

(Bray—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THERE'S some good comedy in this account of the efforts of two rivals to win a pretty girl. Andy Clyde and Bill Irving are the rivals and Molly Malone is the object of their attentions. Directed by Glen Lambert, the trio had several worthwhile gags to work with; these comedy situations coupled with the fact that the speed of the comedy is fast and snappy result in a satisfactory laugh number.

Irving is the better comedian, to our way of thinking, but he loses out to the weak and timid Clyde. The latter when confronted with the larger and bulkier Irving seems to wilt and be ever ready to retreat. But towards the end of the film he becomes, in some mysterious fashion, inflated with courage and accurately socking the corpulent Irving puts him out of the picture, thus winning the alluring Molly. A stereoscope and an accordion gag will probably result in laughs and the same can be said of the efforts of the two to outdo each other. A further source of comedy is found in the introduction of three hoboes.

The general tone of this Skylark comedy denotes an improvement over previous releases of this series. Audiences in the general class of houses should find it to their liking.

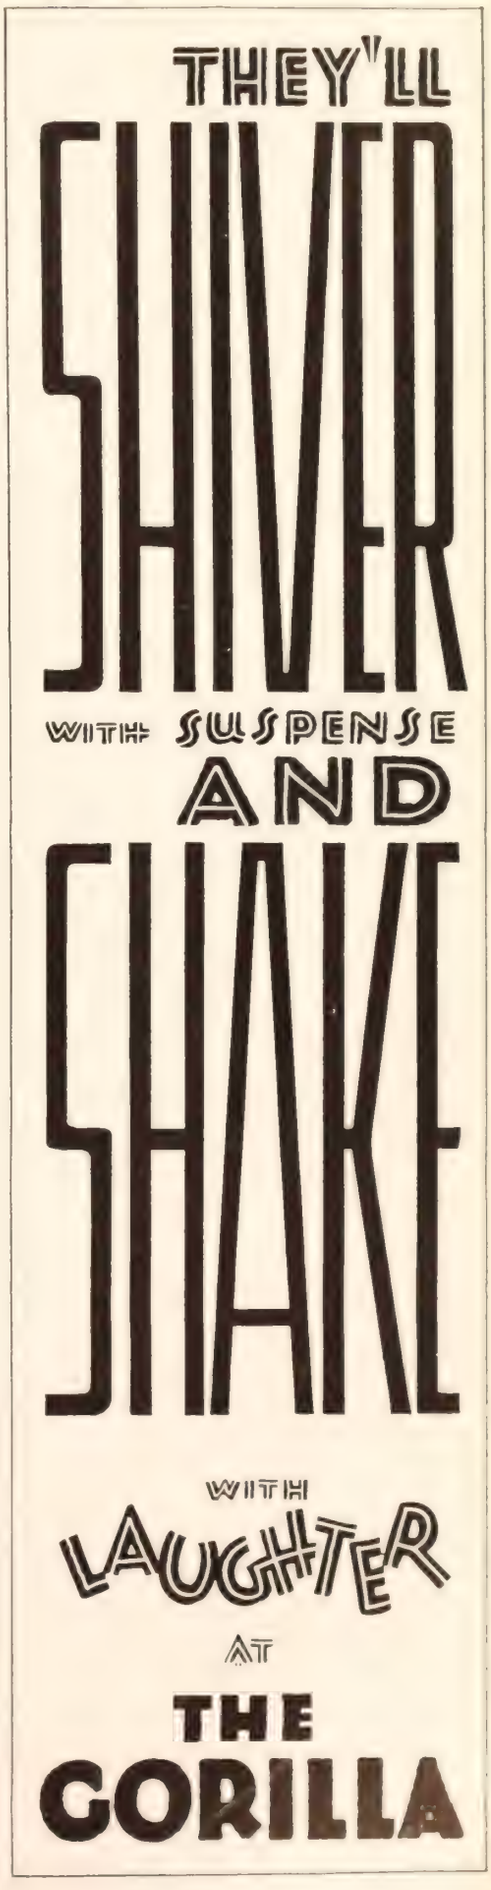
"Smith's Cook"

(Pathe Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

THE importance of a good cook is aptly illustrated in this two reeler, and we must say that Polly Moran, as the cook, gives a most creditable account of herself. Ruth Hiatt and Raymond McKee are her employers, and they are on a fair way toward losing their cook's services when she suddenly decides to get married. Ruth and Raymond cooperate to the best of their ability, but another admirer of Polly's, a mean motorcycle policeman who has been eating in the kitchen for two years, finally, through a series of low-down tricks, throws a monkey wrench in the matrimonial machinery. Polly at last realizes her mistake—not too late to regain her position in the kitchen. This will do very well.

"Up The Ladder"



(Pathe Sportlight—One Reel)

IT'S a hard, uphill fight to become the champion of any sport, as this one from Grantland Rice will illustrate. Good swimmers usually get their start when youngsters—and we have some good shots of several kids. The reel goes on to show the hard training of the gridiron; the crack polo player, Guest, and a well known champion golfer. You can't miss on these short subjects if your audience is in any way suited for them.—E. G. JOHNSTON.

"From Soup to Nuts"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS one is just what the name implies. It is of the Rare-Bit series, and depicts a dinner from the field to the consumer. One is taken to various parts of the world to where the commodities are grown, and each course is shown from its inception to the time it reaches the table. It is well arranged and interesting.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

American Beauty

Pictorially Pleasing—and That's About All

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHEN an actress possesses such good looks and charm as Billie Dove there's not much that can be done for her in the shape of sizable stories despite the fact that she has a goodly share of talent. "American Beauty," the fair Dove's new entry, is just another motion picture—one that contains pictorial values, but leaves a vacuum as concerns its plot.

It pretends to be a comedy—one of those polite affairs, but it releases very few chuckles. The best description would be to call it a hybrid, since it provides a fashion show, a sprinkling of slapstick and a dash of romance.

The story features a check girl in the restaurant of a hotel—a girl with "gate crashing" tendencies. Believing that she was born to be rich she makes a play for a millionaire. After carrying on a deception she suddenly realizes the futility of it and comes to her senses in time to dash off with the young mining engineer.

The characters don't take on any likelike pretentions, but the players work hard in their attempt to breathe life into them. The episodes are all quite far-fetched, but the settings do much toward overcoming the weakness of the story. Miss Dove is gorgeously arrayed and sure does decorate the picture. Lloyd Hughes has very little to do in supplying the love interest, but, like that brand of cigarettes, he satisfies.

The Cast: Billie Dove, Lloyd Hughes, Walter McGrail, Margaret Livingston, Lucien Prival, Al St. John, Edythe Chapman, Alice White, Yola d'Avril. Director, Richard Wallace.

THEME: Romantic comedy of working girl with ambition to be rich. After setting trap for wealthy man she realizes that love of poor but honest youth is best.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The effort of heroine to swing a bluff. The episode of the "borrowed" gown. The charm of star and the tone of her acting. The settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up star who is billed as the "American Beauty." Feature the story of an ambitious working girl who finds out that deception doesn't pay. Play up Lloyd Hughes.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average houses. Should please feminine fans.

Produced and Distributed by First National.
Length, six reels. Released, October, 1927.

Alias the Deacon

Lots of Appeal in Former Stage Success

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A GOOD job by all concerned has been done in transferring the former stage success of John B. Hymer and Leroy Clemens to the screen. Packed plentifully with qualities to which audiences are quick to respond, it impresses one as excellent entertainment suitable for practically every type of house. Hersholt fits easily into his role, giving a smooth performance, notable for its fine reserve. The suaveness and ingratiating manner of the Deacon, his pious front so deceptive to sheriffs and potential victims, the tenderness beneath this questionable exterior—all of this is found in the Dane's performance, an interpretation with a fine sense of character building.

As the story goes, circumstances force a girl to hit the road and so she finds her way into the company of a card sharp, dressed as a deacon, and a young hobo. The latter protects her from the other hoboes, and, when they have reached a town and obtained employment, finds that his interest in her is a bit more than personal. Substituting in a prize fight to win enough money which will purchase a home, he is double crossed by the fight manager and later arrested when that worthy is found unconscious, robbed of the gate receipts. The Deacon, interested in the fortunes of the young couple, captures the real culprit and presents the two with the reward as a wedding gift.

Berton Churchill created comment with his vivid stage characterization; to Hersholt likewise would we donate a few palms.

The Cast: Jean Hersholt, June Marlowe, Ralph Graves, Myrtle Stedman, Lincoln Plummer, Ned Sparks, Tom Kennedy, Maurice Murphy, George West. Director, Edward Sloman.

THEME: Card sharp aids fortunes of girl and boy, when latter is accused of robbery. He finds real thief and presents them with reward.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Freight car scenes, card games, prize fight and Deacon's capture of criminal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up popularity of stage original. Mention fine acting, concentrating on Hersholt's other roles in "Old Soak" and "My Old Dutch."

DRAWING POWER: Good for all types of houses.

Produced and Distributed by Universal.
Length, 6,869 feet. Released, January, 1928.

Firemen, Save My Child!

Beery and Hatton Do Their Stuff in Lively Comedy

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THAT pair of character actors, Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, who have found their true forte in comedy, have in this burlesque of a fireman's life, a comedy which should establish them securely as funmakers. Having had their fling at satirizing the war they now go in for fighting fire. How they do it calls for a full display of gags and hokum.

The piece is funny enough, but it seems to us as if the comedians could be more amusing had a little more imagination been employed at the finish. It sags lamentably toward the end. Wally and Ray clown through the episodes all the way, both capitalizing a full play of expression. Their faces indicate that they don't know what it's all about. The slapstick starts when the Fire Commissioner's daughter asks the firemen to help her move the piano and attend to other household duties. She gets the firemen out by ringing the alarm.

There is a lot of good "business" recorded in the fire-house, and the fun becomes real riotous when the chubby firemen jump into a huge mud puddle. The acting is clever and the piece can safely be catalogued as a hit, even though it comprises a series of gags strung together.

The Cast: Wallace Beery, Raymond Hatton, Josephine Dunn, Tom Kennedy, Joseph Girard, Walter Goss. Director, Edward Sutherland.

THEME: Comedy of two firemen and their antics in extricating themselves from troublesome situations.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The piano-moving episode. The fire-house comedy. The mud puddle gag. The subtitles. The clever work of stars.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tie up with Fire Department, etc. Exploit Beery and Hatton, each being a complement to the other in capitalizing comedy.

DRAWING POWER: Title has possibilities in attracting patronage. Stars should bring them. For any type of house.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount
Length, six reels. Released, October, 1927.

The Jazz Singer

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

AL JOLSON, the big blackface and mammy man, makes his film debut in a heart interest picture and scores with the aid of the Vitaphone. Singing a group of songs that run the scale from sacred to mammy melodies, his voice registers well and carries over the top. As a screen actor, the greatest character singer of them all has much to learn. That he has grasped the fundamentals of pantomime cannot be disputed. As yet he is a trifle self-conscious (especially out of burnt cork), and not sure of himself, but there's no denying that his personality is colorful enough to make him as popular on the screen as on the stage.

It may be that the theme of the story—one having to do with Jewish customs, etc.—may go over the heads of those who do not belong to the faith. But they will capture the sentimental and heart interest touches. It is made too sobby, inasmuch as Jolson is not called upon to flash any comedy.

As box-office material in should draw because of Jolson's wide popularity. It has many moving moments and some fine acting

The Cast: Al Jolson, Eugenie Besserer, Warner Oland, Otto Lederer, Anders Randolf, May McAvoy. Director, Alan Crosland.

THEME: Heart interest story of jazz singer who prefers stage to becoming a cantor. Is reconciled to his father, but continues stage career.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Jolson's singing with the aid of Vitaphone. His rendition of Kol Nidre. The scene of the dress rehearsal. The intimate touches of home life. The reconciliation of son and father. Jolson's acting in blackface. Lederer's fine work.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Jolson is your "copy." Play him up as greatest burnt cork artist. Feature the Vitaphone.

DRAWING POWER: Star's name should draw them. Songs will put picture over.

Produced and Distributed by Warner Brothers.
Length, eight reels. Released, October, 1927.

LOEW'S State theatre will inaugurate a new policy starting October 16th. On that date Vitaphone will be a regular feature of the daily program. This, in addition to first-run photoplays and six acts of vaudeville. Vitaphone was installed in the Stillman theatre last season. It is now being transferred to the State. The Stillman will confine its policy to continued runs of featured photoplays, with special stage presentations. Maurice Spitalny will offer orchestral overtures and will play the accompaniments to the pictures. Vitaphone synchronizations will be presented at the State whenever Warner pictures are offered. At other times, the Vitaphone numbers will be specialty acts. The Circle theatre will also resume its Vitaphone programs on October 16th. These were discontinued over the summer.

New York & New Jersey

WITH nothing much else but trade conference talk in the air, other news this week is a trifle scarce. Most of the exchange managers of New York's film row seem to feel that there's "something in the air" and that the meeting at the Bar Association's building will be a fruitful one.

Many comments were heard in connection with Sydney Cohen's startling speech at the conference.

Leon Rosenblatt was a busy man last week attending to convention and many other pressing matters.

Last Sunday evening was a gala one for residents of the Boro Park section of Brooklyn when Universal's handsome, John Ebersen-designed, atmospheric theatre opened its doors to an audience which demonstrated its impatience by making an onslaught on the doors of the main entrance—over "cops" and everyone.

Carl Laemmle was there, surrounded by an admiring throng. In view of his recent illness, Mr. Laemmle looks healthy enough.

John Eberson was here and there, and all around the new house. Some of the tiling was laid during the day of the premiere. Mr. Eberson said: "It's the New York way."

"Joe" Weil, of the Universal home office, stood near the main entrance, guarding a huge vase—a receptacle for charitable donations.

The last glimpse we caught of Manager Arthur Brillant was when that gentleman was in a hurried and serious conversation with a flock of policemen.

The Universal will probably be the forerunner for more of its kind in this section of the country. It is a distinct innovation among New York City's theatres.

The policy of a split week of vaudeville and pictures will undoubtedly make a hit with the residents of Boro Park. The audience especially seemed pleased with the vaudeville part of the program.

The "Little Theatre" movement took a kick recently when both the Mayfair and Edyth Totten theatres were ruled against by reason of variance with the city building and fire departments. The Mayfair never actually got under way while the Edyth Totten ran but a week before suspending operations as a motion picture theatre.

The very least that can happen when Loew's new Oriental theatre opens its doors in the neighborhood of 86th street and 18th avenue, Brooklyn, is that someone will get hurt in due time. The Benson, Marlboro and Stillwell are but a short distance away and the prediction is that there will be some stiff competition. The Oriental's first night will occur on Thursday, Oct. 13, with "Beau Geste" as a strong opening attraction.

Another local theatre with license troubles is the Tip Top theatre, Wilson and Gates avenues, Brooklyn, N. Y. This house will be temporarily closed until matters are straightened out.

George Steiner is the new manager of the Montmartre theatre, a small de luxe motion picture theatre in the downtown shopping section of Brooklyn.

With the opening of a second new theatre during the past year, Canarsie—that much-discussed far corner of the earth, among the small-time vaudevillians—must be thought of of at last coming into its own. On Tuesday evening, October 11, M. Bleendis held the premiere of the Canarsie Opera House, Avenue L and East 93d street.

The boys were lining up in good shape on Tuesday of this week at the Belmont theatre, West 48th street, where, in what is termed "direct defiance of a law," the Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures are being shown for $1.10 a copy.

The Fourth Avenue theatre, 4th avenue and 22d street, Brooklyn, operated by Gottlieb and Goldmark, will run a daily change since its reopening.

After extensive remodeling, the Blake theatre, Blake and Schenck avenues, Brooklyn, reopened October 7. Messrs. Schwartz and Smith's new 1,800-seat Elton theatre, 43rd street and New Utrech avenue, Brooklyn, opened last Friday, October 7. This house is but three short blocks away from the newly opened Universal theatre.

Sam Gillespie is the new manager of the Ritz theatre, 474 Wilson avenue, Brooklyn.

Closed for the summer months while repairs were being made, the Benenson theatre, a Joelson-Suchman house, at Washington avenue and Clermont Parkway, reopened Thursday, Otober 6.

Chicago

The large new theatre erected on the site of the old Maplewood at 2811 W. Diversey will be opened shortly by I. Brotman & Sons, who have selected as its name, Avaloe. Messrs. Brotman also own and operate the Clybourn.

William Mick, for some time connected with Fitzpatrick & McElroy as manager of their Michigan City house, is now with Saxe Enterprises, and is in charge of the Retlaw at Fond du Lac.

E. O. Schmid, owner of the Palace theatre, Gilman, Illinois, was seen on film row this week.

The Coronado theatre, Rockford, Great States splendid new de luxe house, got away to a big opening on Sunday, under the direction of Louis St. Pierre. A large number of Chicago film and theatre men attended the opening and were enthusiastic over the house.

Gregory & Bernasek inaugurated a new policy at their Palace theatre, Cicero, Illinois, this week, and will, hereafter, play musical comedy stock on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of each week, the musical tab shows being supplemented by feature pictures. A straight photoplay program will be billed on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and on Sunday the house will combine five acts of vaudeville with pictures.

Gregory & Bernasek have appointed James Craidon manager of their Gayety theatre, Ottawa, which reopened a few days ago. Mr. Craidon was formerly in charge of the Owl theatre, this city.

M. A. Chonski was an added member of the Chicago delegation which left for the Federal Trade Hearing in New York. The original delegates were President Jack Miller and Secretary Ludwig Siegel of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, and it was at the suggestion of the members of the organization that Mr. Choynski was added.

The executive board of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago has filed a formal protest with the Chicago American against the recent increase in advertising rates. Fred McQuigg, manager of the American Theatrical Department, met with the committee and promised that their protest would be taken up by Herman Black, publisher of the American.

The continued growth of National Screen Service in the Chicago territory has necessitated another enlargement in the staff and Manager H. C. Young has added two more employees to the service department.

Manager Clyde Eckhardt, of Fox' Chicago exchange, has become a commuter, having established his family in a handsome Wilmette residence.

Fischer's Circuit has added another house to the large number now under its banner. It is now operating the Home Theatre at Portage, Wisconsin.

The New Apollo theatre, at Crawford and North avenue, formerly operated by the Lynch Circuit as a picture house, is now operating with musical and dramatic stock companies.

Their many friends on film row and theatre men throughout the territory are sympathizing with Earl, Edwin and Leslie Silverman in the loss of their father, who passed away on Saturday after a lingering illness. Mr. Silverman had been in bad health for many months previous to his death.

Many Chicago exhibitors are cooperating with the Chicago Fire Prevention Bureau in the observance of fire prevention week, starting October 9th. Slides and trailers are being utilized to call the attention of the public to the prevention of fire and the elimination of causes of fire.

Gift nights, which have been run by many of the medium sized and smaller Chicago theatres, have come under the ban of the Chicago police department, which is now actively enforcing the law prohibiting games of chance, with the result that many Chicago exhibitors have been forced to discontinue gift nights and similar events involving a drawing for prizes. Police are acting on instructions from the district attorney's office, the statute having been on the books for some time, but being generally regarded as a dead letter.

It is reported that Clarence Lauten is ready to start work on his proposed Egyptian theatre, which is to be located on Chicago's northwest side.

A. E. Weingand is making preparations for the opening of his new Grand theatre, at Hillsboro, Illinois, and has fixed the date for October 17th.

Another handsome small city theatre which is being pushed to completion is John Miller's new house in Woodstock, Illinois.

W. D. Patrick, formerly an exhibitor in Bothan, Ala., who expected to open a theatre in West Palm Beach, Fla., announces that his plans have been changed and, instead, he will soon open a house at Kelsey City and Boynton, Fla. At the former place, the auditorium at the city hall will be used as the theatre, while at Boynton Mr. Patrick has bought the Herald theatre of that city, but has closed that house, it being small, and secured the lease on a much larger and better one, which he is remodeling. He hopes to have both theatres opened at an early date.

James Clement Furman arrived the latter part of last week to assume the post as director of publicity at the Howard theatre, succeeding Gus Grist, who has been called into the home office of Publix Theatres, Inc., in New York.

Mr. Furman comes to the Howard from Birmingham, Ala., where he served as assitant to Sidney Dannenberg, city manager for the Publix theatres.

"Blind Boone," 63 years old, internationally famous negro pianist, died at Warrensburg, Mo., on the night of October 5th from dilation of the heart. He had been ill for several months.

During his life time Boone appeared in many of the leading theatres of the Middle West, and also played in the East and in foreign countries.

James Kirkwood, stage and screen star, will appear in person at the St. Louis theatre the week of October 16.

Reports from Southern Illinois are that the reopening of coal mines has brought about a spirit of optimism and it is probable the motion picture houses of the coal mining towns will have fair business this fall and winter. However, there has not been the general revival in coal digging throughout Egypt that was hoped for. Many operators have decided to permit their shafts to remain idle, contending that they cannot profitably operate under the prevailing wage scale. Non-union coal from Kentucky and West Virginia has taken much of the Southern Illinois market away for this year and it is very doubtful if Southern Illinois coal will regain the prestige it once enjoyed. Naturally the theatres of the coal fields will suffer if the coal mines cannot come back.

Denver

THE Majestic Theatre, Pueblo, Colo., was visited by robbers on Sunday night a week ago, who gained entrance by removing a piece of plate glass from the box office in front of the theatre. The yeggs broke the combination from the safe but secured only $70 in cash, twenty dollars of which was in two and one-half dollar gold pieces. Angered because they secured so little cash the vandals proceeded to damage the equipment in the projection room of the theatre. The lens on each projection machine was broken with a hammer and the generator was badly damaged with the point of a screwdriver. Not satisfied with what damage they had done in the projection room, they went to the advertising department and tore up all the advertising which was being prepared for coming attractions. Then they left a note addressed to P. H. Hoppen, manager of the theatre, threatening his life unless he left more money in the safe thereafter. No trace of the culprits have been found by Pueblo police. The loss is covered by insurance.

One of the boldest robberies ever attempted was almost pulled at the Aladdin theatre last Sunday night, October 2nd, when two young bandits walked into the manager's office of the theatre with drawn guns while hundreds of people were entering the theatre for the evening performance about 7:30 P. M. The robbers held up Giles Foley, auditor, the only person they found in the office at the time, demanding him to open the safe, which was locked, containing the receipts of Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Foley replied that he did not know the combination of the safe and, after numerous threats on the part of the robbers, Foley finally convinced them that he did not know the combination. They demanded Foley to telephone down to the box office and get someone who did know the combination and Foley called Miss Patricia Barry, cashier. Just at this time the secretary of the Denver Film Board of Trade, Duke W. Dunbar, was preceding Miss Barry to the manager's office, to see Mr. Huffman, manager of the theatre for his signature on the certification of delegates to the Federal Trade conference. Dunbar knocked on the door, which was opened, the bandits thinking some one had arrived to open the safe. Dunbar was ordered to "stick 'em up" but instead he slammed the door, ran down stairs and out of the building to police headquarters, a block and a half away. Knowing an alarm would be turned in, the robbers fled immediately after Dunbar left without securing anything. Several arrests were made shortly after but all were released. This is the second attempt to rob the Aladdin theatre; the first time the theatre was visited early in the morning, the yeggs using nitroglycerin to blow open the safe. They secured over $400.

James Epperson is the new manager of the local Pathe exchange, succeeding S. B. Rahn, who has been transferred to the Pathe office in San Francisco. Mr. Epperson comes from Salt Lake City, where he has managed the Pathe branch office for several years. Mr. Rahn has been in charge of the Denver office for the past two years. The change is a result of the recent merger of the Producers and Pathe interests.

The Denver Orpheum theatre, in line with the Orpheum theatres throughout the country, will add a feature motion picture to their program of vaudeville, the new policy to go into effect sometime in November. The fact that the circuit, the combined Orpheum theatres and Keith-Albee, arranged for the distribution of Pathe-Producers product in their own theatres, made this arrangement possible. All contracts for the showing of pictures in the local Orpheum theatre were made in New York City.

Florida

THOMAS MEIGHAN and his wife are visiting in Florida. Mr. Meighan is the owner of considerable property in the state and has a home at New Port Richey; the theatre in that city being named for him. A marked appreciation for his good will and community spirit of co-operation was shown to Manager George E. Hoffman, of the Arcade Theatre this week by The Kissimmee Valley Gazette in a front page laudatory praise.

Mr. Hoffman was host last Tuesday to a matinee party honoring school teachers.

Canada

A DARING robbery occurred at the Eden theatre, Hull, Quebec, the second largest theatre, during the night of October 2, when an entrance was forced from the rear of the house. Donat Paquin, proprietor, reported the loss of $485.25 in cash, which was taken from the safe in the manager's office. The robbers have not been traced.

The robbers opened the door of the office by working the spring lock with a knife. The combination of the safe had been left unset but the crooks did not realize this fact because they forced the safe, necessitating the repair of the combination. Apparently the same gang also tried to gain entry to a nearby store the same night but were foiled because of heavy iron bars on the rear windows.

Donat Paquin is also the proprietor of the new Laurier theatre, Hull, which was recently reopened after being enlarged and improved.

Detroit

OWNERS of neighborhood houses here are viewing with considerable interest the activities of John F. Simmons, secretary of the Detroit Federation of Labor and secretary of Typographical Union No. 18, who recently appeared before the common council and asked that free advertising be curbed by the city. Should the law become effective, many of the exhibitors will be deprived of a valuable method of advertising.

Al Boasberg, former Paramount exploiteer in Michigan and now a writer of gags for pictures, has married for the third time. Last week, he was joined in wedlock to Miss Rosalind Goldberg of Minneapolis.

Robert Cotton has resigned as district manager for Pathe and Frank Stuart, a former Michigan resident, has left the Indianapolis branch.

The Idle Hour in Riverdale was closed recently for nearly a week while the house went through a remodeling process and Dick Rockwell, the manager, took a brief vacation.

Free automobile parking is one of the accommodations supplied to customers at the new Hollywood. Other unique features are the crying babies' room and a nursery, from either of which the entire program may be viewed with ease. Thomas McGuire, the publicity director, is billing this service in the theatre's advertisements. As a result, cars from all parts of the city have been parked in the lot adjoining the house.

Theatre "rushing" by the University of Michigan students at Ann Arbor will not be tolerated this year by college authorities, according to a statement issued last week by Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president. Expulsion of those found guilty of attending entertainments of any type without tickets was threatened by Dr. Little in an address to freshmen last week.

Des Moines

MORRIS COHEN, who is remodeling his theatre at Council Bluffs, where he has the Strand theatre, in partnership, is not closing the theatre while the changes are being made. Work on the exterior of the house has already been completed and as complete a transformation is being effected on the exterior of the house. It will probably be a month before the work on the theatre will be completed.

September 17 was the opening date of the Crystal theatre at Waterloo, Iowa, which was closed for almost a year following fire, which practically destroyed the theatre interior. New furnishings have been put in the Crystal and entire new equipment installed. The theatre is operated by Ford-Diebold.

Work is progressing on the new $750,000 theatre and office building which is being constructed at Cedar Rapids. The structure is being built by the Century Building Corporation and the theatre will be leased to A. H. Blank. It will be included as one of the Blank-Publix houses. Mr. Blank last week consulted with contractors who will do the work on the theatre, contractors for the refrigeration, heating, etc., and also with artists who will take over the decoration of the interior and the planning of the drapes and lights. The theatre will not be opened until March and the definite date has not yet been set. The theatre will be the most magnificent house in the state when completed.

Frank Merz, who has theatres at Jessup and at Cowgen, is now in the hospital. He is convalescing at the hospital at Waterloo, Iowa.

W. T. Biggs has the management of the Palace theatre at Adair, Iowa, which has been remodelled and newly equipped. Mr. Biggs also has theatre interests at Anita, Iowa.

George Nalor, manager of the Universal office in Des Moines, was in Chicago for the regional convention of managers.

A. H. Blank left last Saturday for New York City.

Milwaukee

N. J. BLUMBERG, manager of Milwaukee Theatre Circuit, and R. B. Radtke, comptroller for Universal chain, left Friday for New York on business. Mr. Radtke has been in the Milwaukee office for the past two weeks.

The new Majestic theatre at Cudahy will be opened on or about the 15th of October, according to Jake Disch, owner and manager.

E. H. Brechler, manager of the Opera House, Fennimore, was in the city on business early in the week.

A. C. Accola, manager of the Bonham, at Prairie du Sac, left his plane at home on this last trip to the city and deigned to take the trusty train.

Neil Duffy, manager of the Elite at Appleton, made a flying (not literally flying) trip to the city for a reel or two of film and hurried back.

Dan Kelliher, of Elkhorn, Lake Geneva and other southern points, was in the city during the week. Mr. Kelliher says his new house at Burlington is nearing completion.

The partners, Ainsworth and Smith, of the Orpheum theatre at Fond du Lac, made a dual appearance in the city on Wednesday.

Walter Rourke was in the city making final arrangements for his new house in Horicon.

William Roob, manager of the Grand at Port Washington, and H. S. Wales, of the Rialto theatre at Sharon, were among Film Row visitors this week.

George Huebner, of the Strand at Oconomowoc, came to Milwaukee on business during the week.

Jack Hickey, of the Grand at New London, came down in spite of the pouring rain to visit the various exchanges.

The Masik theatre, at Racine, being built by Mr. Masik is rapidly nearing completion. The Masik is an 800-seat house.

Parkis Waterbury, of the Idle Hour at Jefferson, was in the city on Wednesday and visited exchanges.

George Gaston, formerly associated with the Regent theatre at Prairie du Chien, is going to build a theatre at Richland Center, according to recent report.

Central Penn

CONTRACTORS have begun work of erecting the new $500,000 Colonel Drake theatre, which the Vemark Theatre Company, controlled by George J. Veach and M. Marks, plan to build at Seneca and Duncomb streets, Oil City. The house is to be named for the man accredited with having been the first to strike oil in the Pennsylvania oil fields. It will be a very handsome structure, designed by Rapp & Rapp, and will in some respects resemble the new Roxy theatre in New York City. The building will be 225 by 150 feet, facing on the two streets, and will have an arcade with rooms for 22 stores. The seating capacity of the auditorium will be 2,200.

Charles Gaige, feature organist of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, left on October 9 for a vacation to be spent in New York City and his former home in Hackensack, N. J.

The new Embassy theatre, built by Harold Cohen in Lewiston with a seating capacity of 750, was opened for business early in October.

The Lancaster chapter of the National Association of Organists held its first meeting of the fall season in the Capitol theatre, that city, on October 9. Committees were appointed to have charge of the season's activities and after the business session the organists were permitted to inspect the Capitol's Robert Morton unit organ.

The Earle theatre, Allentown, which will open about November 1, and of which William Seitz is the owner, will have a seating capacity of 850. Heim Jacobs will be the house manager.

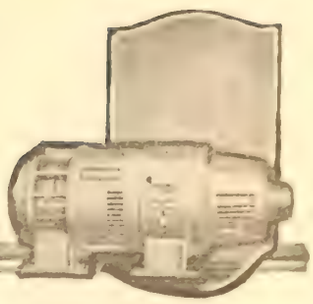
Alex Fetsko has taken over the new Ridge theatre, Allentown, and renamed it the Peerless. The manager will be H. A. Dubeoski, who formerly was in charge of the Diamond theatre, Hazleton.

All the principal down town theatres of the Wilmer & Vincent company in Harrisburg, arranged to announce the play by play results of the World Series baseball games, which were received by radio and special leased wires.

A published report that the Capitol theatre, Shamokin, had been taken over by the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, Inc., of that city, is denied in a statement issued by an officer of the Arcadia Amusement Company.

Josh Daly, of New York City, has succeeded Hugh Bernard as manager of the Colonial Theatre, Lebanon, Mr. Barnard having recently resigned to go to Boston, where he has accepted a position as manager of the Casino Theatre.

The first of a series of Saturday matinees for children, at the Hamilton theatre, Lancaster, under the auspices of the women's organizations of the city, was held on October 8.



After undergoing extensive improvements the Poli theatre, Scranton, has been reopened with Edward L. Pash, many years with the Comerford Amusement Company, of that city, acting in the managerial role. He succeeds Moe Goodman, who has been transferred to a post in a Shenandoah theatre.

Results of the World Series baseball games were announced in the matinee performances at the Harris-Majestic theatre, Johnstown, without interruption to the regular program.

Stage Floods as Operated from the Projection Room

IT is the exceptional theatre these days which does not provide some degree of supplementary embellishment to the "straight movie" part of the program. However small this "side show" part of the program may be, it is a fact that few theatres make use of motion picture projectors alone.

Instead, reliance is placed upon auxiliary equipment such as spot lamps, flood lamps, effect projectors and stereopticon lanterns to assist the "movie" end of the show in holding the interest of the patrons for a period of two hours or more.

This practice, first inaugurated by the de luxe house, is rapidly spreading to even the small community theatre. Such extensions to the program, in turn, naturally call for the use of additional equipment designed to do just such work.

Use of Flood Lamps Common

This auxiliary equipment in its simplest form may consist of but a single flood lamp for illuminating the entire stage with light of various colors. It is common for even small theatres to do this and, indeed, this often constitutes the first step toward working up a modified form of de luxe program in imitation of the larger city theatres.

In spite of the fact that such elaborations to the motion picture entertainment call for extra projectors it is often possible for the theatre manager to make one piece of apparatus serve two or more purposes, thus reducing the cost of showing such extras. It is not always wise to work each piece of equipment to the limit but where conditions are such that expense must be closely watched the manager is justified in this procedure.

A Suggestion for Double-Duty Projectors

The small theatre, especially, should be quick to grasp these opportunities and in this connection we would like to describe how the manager of a small town house is making his reflector arc lamps serve the double purpose of projecting motion pictures and flooding the stage.

Mr. Samuelson, manager of the Newton Theatre, Newton, N. J., recently showed the writer how this was done and at the same time suggested passing the idea along to other exhibitors and projectionists.

The equipment in the projection room of this theatre consists of two Simplex Projectors equipped with Peerless Reflector arc lamps and one Brenkert Effect Projector. Even though the effect projector is used for showing colored floods and spots, Mr. Samuelson said he had constant need for flooding the entire stage with various colors and while waiting for the installation of a spot-flood lamp he hit upon the idea of using one of his reflector arc lamps for a fixed stage flood.

This is how he did it. The entire reflector arc lamphouse was pushed to one side as if for showing stereoptican slides and a suitable projection lens was mounted on the side of the projector in order to pick up the light from the reflector arc. This projection lens may be a simple bi-convex type of short focal length.

On the front wall of the projection room, an additional port hole is cut to pass this light beam and a large color box is then mounted on the front wall directly over the port hole cut for this purpose. This color box contains about six frames for holding various colored gelatines and may be purchased complete since it is of the same type for mounting on the front plate of a standard spot lamp. A string is attached to each color frame and is led out through the top of the box and then hooked to one of its sides so that each color frame can be raised or lowered to either place in the light beam or remove it therefrom.

Masks Placed in Slide Carriers

When flooding the stage, the lamphouse is shoved over to one side, the large round plate (at the front of the Peerless lamphouse) on which the slide carrier with its condenser lens is mounted, is put in position and a suitable mask is placed in the slide carrier for confining the projected light to just that section of the stage which is to be lighted.

The result is a reflector arc flood light which gives quite a brilliant flood and at but small additional expense. It is also possible for the projectionist to use a variety of masks, placing them in turn in the slide carrier conveniently handy for just this work.

This describes one type of stage flood which, it is safe to say, is not commonly used. Another more commonly used type employs a standard high intensity arc lamphouse in conjunction with two or three projection lens of graded focal length to give choice of either spot or flood, together with the necessary framing shutters and color holders.

These lamps use from 120 to 150 amperes and the entire equipment, in effect, comprises a stereopticon lantern. Small diameter projection lenses are used because the arc crater is focussed approximately in the projection lens and this crater image seldom exceeds 1½ inches in diameter.

Strange though it may seem, this flood lamp in spite of the fact that it uses the high intensity arc does not give a higher intensity of stage illumination than that provided by a standard type of spot-flood lamp when compared on an equal current basis. This would indicate that the method of using the high intensity lamp in this manner was inefficient.

As a matter of fact, the high intensity arc floodlamp, as above described, will give a beam candlepower of approximately 200,000 on a current of 150 amperes. An ordinary type of spot-flood lamp, operated on a current of 100 amperes will also give just about 200,000 beam candlepower, so that the advantage as far as light is concerned is with the standard type of flood lamp.

Reflector Arc Flood Efficient

It is interesting to note in this connection that the reflector arc flood lamp, of a type similar to that described above, will give flood candlepowers ranging from 400,000 candlepower up to, and even exceeding 1,000,000 candlepower on a current of 40 amperes, so that it becomes apparent at once that here is a very efficient type of stage flood. It is more than likely that the future will see the development of such a lamp for use as a regular part of the projection room equipment.

New Lens Made by Chas. Rosher, Cameraman

A new type of short-focus lens has been perfected by Charles Rosher, veteran camera man, and photographer of all of Mary Pickford's screen productions. The new lens, upon which Rosher worked for several years, is officially known as the Rosher-Kinoportrait Lens and is suitable only for close-ups. Its short focus and wide diameter give unusual depth to a picture, it is said, producing an almost stereoscopic or bas-relief effect. As there were no suitable grinding facilities at the United Artists' studio, the lens was made in Germany. The new Pickford vehicle, "My Best Girl," has offered the first opportunity for a practical try-out of Rosher's new lens.

Plans Completed for New Stanley Theatre

Announcement is made that plans have been completed for the $600,000 theatre that the Stanley company will build in East Liberty, in the Pittsburgh district. It will be a picture house with a frontage of 181 feet and the building will have space for a number of store rooms.

"Vocal Trailer" Service To Soon Appear

Announcement has just been made of a new service for exhibitors which its promoters believe, because of its uniqueness, will prove popular among the trade.

The innovation is in the form of a record on which will be recorded in the voice of the star appearing in a coming attraction, the highlights and interesting episodes appearing in his or her picture. The patron of a theatre will be means of this record, which will be heard in the theatre the week previous to the showing of a picture hear in the star's own voice just what the picture is all about.

The recording will be done on records which will permit the star's voice to be heard all over the theatre clearly and distinctly.

It is understood that the company plans to record between 52 and 60 of these "Vocal Trailers" the first season, this number to include the bigger and better pictures produced.

Ben Fitzer, who has been in the exhibiting end of the motion picture industry for over twenty years, has taken over the presidency of the company.

Builds First House Under New Canadian Law

The first theatre to be constructed under the new building bylaws of Winnipeg, Manitoba, is the Tivoli at Maryland Street and Westminster Avenue, which is now nearing completion. It is being erected by the local interests which operate the Osborne Theatre.

The new Tivoli is constructed of concrete, steel, brick, tile and stone, with a four-inch gypsum roof, all being fireproof. Exits lead out to streets or laneways without steps, making practically a perfect type of exits. The equipment includes a Reynolds system of ventilation, two DeLuxe Motiograph projectors fitted with Ross English lens and dissolving arcs. The Daylight screen is the largest of any screen in the city.

National Supply Appoints New Branch Managers

The National Supply Company recently made three changes among its many branches when transfers of the following of their personnel went into effect:

C. P. Anderson, well known in Oklahoma territory, succeeds A. G. Smith as manager of the Oklahoma City branch. The latter has been transferred to take charge of the Kansas City office. T. J. Cole, former Kansas City manager, resigned in order to devote his entire time to other interests.

Through his new connection Mr. Anderson will be able to render the type of equipment service which he has long felt was needed in the industry, and National feels extremely gratified in being able to back him up in his efforts.

R. G. Faulds, who for the past two years has been selling supplies and equipment in Minnesota and the Dakotas, has been transferred to Omaha, Neb., in the capacity of branch manager. Mr. Faulds will assume charge immediately and will have as his assistants, I. E. Newman and Joe O'Neill, both of whom are being transferred from the general offices in Chicago.

"Rudy" Faulds is a hustler, having made a splendid record for National service in the Minneapolis territory and exhibitors in Nebraska and Iowa will find him ideally fitted and always ready to care for their requirements in all equipment matters and with promptness and satisfaction.

Before assuming charge of the Omaha office, Mr. Faulds spent a week at the General Offices in Chicago, where he received special instructions in the working of the National Complete Service Plan.

Another example of the one-contract equipment contracts is the following through by National Supply of the equipment problems of the Monte Vista theatre, a house recently built by the Montgomery Amusement Company in Cincinnati, Ohio. Matters were placed entirely in the hands of National Supply from start to finish.

Albuquerque's New Theatre of Unique Design

The new Kimo theatre, Albuquerque's elaborate 1500 seat amusement place opened its doors to the public about ten days ago. The new theatre is of the Navajo Indian design to the smallest detail throughout, and is believed to be the only theatre of its kind in the world. The construction of the theatre itself is replete with the latest of improvements and theatre conveniences. The opening was an elaborate affair, city officials taking part in the opening exercises and a party of Navajo Indians performing tribal rites to dedicate a building whose motif and design was inspired by their own lives and customs. The theatre is owned by the Bachechi Amusement Company, this company having operated the Pastime theatre of Albuquerque, N. M., for a number of years. The new theatre will be managed by Otto and Victor Bachechi.

Typhoon Appoints Lichtig to Managership

The Typhoon Fan Company announces the appointment of B. Lichtig to the managership of the organization. He is taking the place of A. Sorin, who resigned recently to go into business for himself.

Mr. Lichtig is well known in the motion picture industry, particularly in Spain, Cuba, Brazil and the Latin Americas, having been long associated with the Universal Pictures Corporation in establishing distributing offices in these countries. Mr. Lichtig is also on the board of directors of the DeForest Phonofilm Corporation of New York.

Confer on Plans for New Cedar Rapids House

Contractors for heating, refrigerating, and general plans for the new theatre at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, of which A. H. Blank will have the management, were in Des Moines last week to confer on plans for this new house, which will be by far the finest house in Iowa when it is completed, it is reported. The opening of the theatre will not be planned until about March first. The theatre, which has not yet been named, will be included as one of the A. H. Blank-Publix houses, and it is probable that one of the men from the East, trained by the Paramount school, will be brought in to take the management of the house.

New Kansas City Theatre To Open Soon

The Garden theatre, down town theatre of Kansas City seating about 2,100 will reopen and blossom forth under a new name in a few days, it has been announced by Dan McCoy, who will manage the theatre. The house, which will run seven acts of vaudeville and a feature picture afternoon and night, will be known as the Uptown theatre. Improvements costing $25,000 have been made on the theatre, including redecorating, new drapes and a children's room. The admission price will be 25 cents.

Work Well Under Way on New Loew Theatre

Construction work is well under way on the new Loew Theatre on Weybosset street, Providence, on the site of the old Gaiety theatre and adjoining properties. Foundation work has already started, several weeks having been required to clear the site of office buildings.

Front of Theatre Causes $50,000 Damage Suit

The Royal theatre, Kansas City owners of the building and show, were sued for $50,000 damages in federal court in Kansas City this week by Samuel M. Fechheimer of Ohio, owner of a 2-story building north of the theatre, a Publix house, the 2-story building being occupied by the Robinson Shoe Co. The petition alleges that the theatre's electric sign and canopy, by protruding across the sidewalk, cut off light, air and view from the south and thereby damage Mr. Fechheimer's property. Robert F. Lakenan is named as owner of the theatre building and the Kansas City Operating Corporation as owner of the show.

Fischer to Build Theatre in Cambridge, N. Y.

A new theatre is to be erected in Cambridge, N. Y., for Lew Fischer, who already has houses in Fort Edward, Ticonderoga, Hoosick Falls and Chatham. The house will cost $25,000 and the work will begin at once. It will be opened on Christmas Day. The theatre will be built on the site of the Liberty which was burned to the ground about a year ago.

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Erlanger Theatre, Atlanta

Constitution: "Revealing power to run gamut of human emotions, power to clutch very core of heart with dramatic intensity and proving to be amazing and astounding spectacle. Opened before one of largest crowds that has ever jammed into playhouse and fairly entranced every man, woman and child present with its sustained appeal. Great War classics may come and go, but it is certain that they will hardly surpass 'What Price Glory.' By far one of greatest pictures ever seen in Atlanta."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Empire Theatre, Lawrence, Mass.

Tribune: "The throngs which attended the Empire Theatre yesterday to witness . . . The greatest motion picture in history. Throngs were thrilled and pleased with real human characters. McLaglen, Dolores Del Rio and Lowe shone in brilliancy of their perfect roles."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Palace Theatre, New Orleans

Times-Picayune: "A great picture, as great as any year has seen, at least one of 'ten best.' Has a world of strength and more comedy. Almost all comedy, but crusty, human comedy. . . . Picture is really glorious thing in all details."

Tribune: "Is closer to perfection than any picture ever made, and in years to come will be placed among classics of screen no matter how much art of cinema develops. . . . The best picture of 1927 and among best five of all time."

"Alias the Lone Wolf"—Columbia Pictures, Hippodrome Theatre, New York City

Herald-Tribune: "The best thing on program. Denouement was a surprise to us. Edward H. Griffith, director, has kept story up at rapid pace from beginning to end. There is not a single extraneous scene. Lois Wilson looks extremely pretty, and she plays with her usual sincerity. Bert Lytell the wisest choice we can think of for Lone Wolf. Please stay for picture when you visit Hippodrome."

Times: "Quite diverting, especially to those who devour detective stories. There are some excellent "shots" on deck of ocean greyhound."

World: "Mr. Griffith has directed his melodrama in a realistic marine atmosphere . . . he is to be congratulated."

Evening World: "Better than average crook story . . . well done by capable cast."

American: "Holds one's interest. There is no doubt that it will afford a pleasurable hour."

Sun: "By far most entertaining photoplay of week. Situations offer excitement and suspense."

"Chang" — Paramount, Berlin, Germany

Berliner Tageblatt: "Here we have Kipling at last in his very true image. They (Cooper and Schoedsack) lived, hunted and feared, together with Laos, working with never tiring power, and results: a wonder film. We in the dark room tremble and tremble again, together with them, in happiness, fear, anxiety and joy."

Der Montag Morgan: "All Berlin will make a pilgrimage to 'Chang.'"

Die Rote Fahne: "One sees probably grandest scene one ever saw in an animal film—how a herd of 300 elephants destroy a village."

Der Tag: "Unquestionably this picture is an event in history of motion pictures."

'A Man's Past" — Universal, Colony Theatre, New York City

America: "Real gripping thriller. Full of suspense and thrills of a nature new to picture audiences. Veidt excellent."

Herald Tribune: "Veidt has never done anything as good as his convict surgeon in 'A Man's Past.' Melford belongs in list of ten best directors for work in this picture. Veidt magnificent actor. Whoever selected cast knows his business."

Daily News: "Absorbing film fare. Melford has directed well."

Morning Telegraph: "Worthy of your prompt attention. Run—don't walk—to Colony this week."

Daily Mirror: "Good cast headed by Veidt. Picture the superior of other two openings on Broadway this week."

"Chang" — Paramount, Plaza Theatre, London, England

Kinematograph: "Film is marvelous; should do an enormous business. An elephant charge is perhaps one of most remarkable things yet recorded by camera."

Daily Film Renter: "Paramount's astounding epic of jungle, 'Chang,' opened to large audience, who were spellbound by film the like of which has never before been seen on screen. Is greatest jungle picture ever seen; it is not just a wild animal adventure film, but a thrilling and dramatic entertainment, which will appeal to old and young alike. Provides one of greatest entertainments we have ever seen. It has to be seen to be believed."

Cinema: "Intensely, terribly real, bringing jungle of Siam and its denizens to our very doors in unforgettable fashion. Every cinema in land should screen it, for it will not only increase general prestige of industry, but make many new patrons. A high-grade box-office entertainment for any cinema, and it offers big opportunities for showmen. No one can afford to miss it."

Simplex

With this Unit you save money and improve your Projection

TO every exhibitor whose theatre is of medium size, the Simplex Incandescent Lamp Projection Unit presents possibilities of greatly reduced cost in maintenance and operation.

The incandescent lamp provides a light source which will give adequate screen illumination over a throw of about 100 feet providing it is properly installed and operated with the proper type of equipment.

The Simplex Unit is so designed that maximum light from the lamp is projected on the screen. Its simplicity is a feature quickly appreciated by every projectionist. It is of the same high standard of quality in regard to mechanical construction and efficiency as that for which all Simplex products are noted.

Many exhibitors have told us that only through the use of the Simplex Unit could they obtain all the advantages of incandescent lamp projection. The advantages are numerous:

Economy---A saving of about 50% on current consumption.

Ease of operation---Once adjusted the lamp requires little or no further attention.

Healthfulness---No dust fumes or excess heat comes from the lamp. The light has a tonal quality that makes it easy on the eyes of audience.

Good Projection---Light is spread evenly over the entire screen. There is no flicker or shadows. Pictures are clear.

An investigation of the Simplex Incandescent Unit may save you hundreds of dollars. Send for full information now. We will gladly arrange a demonstration for you.

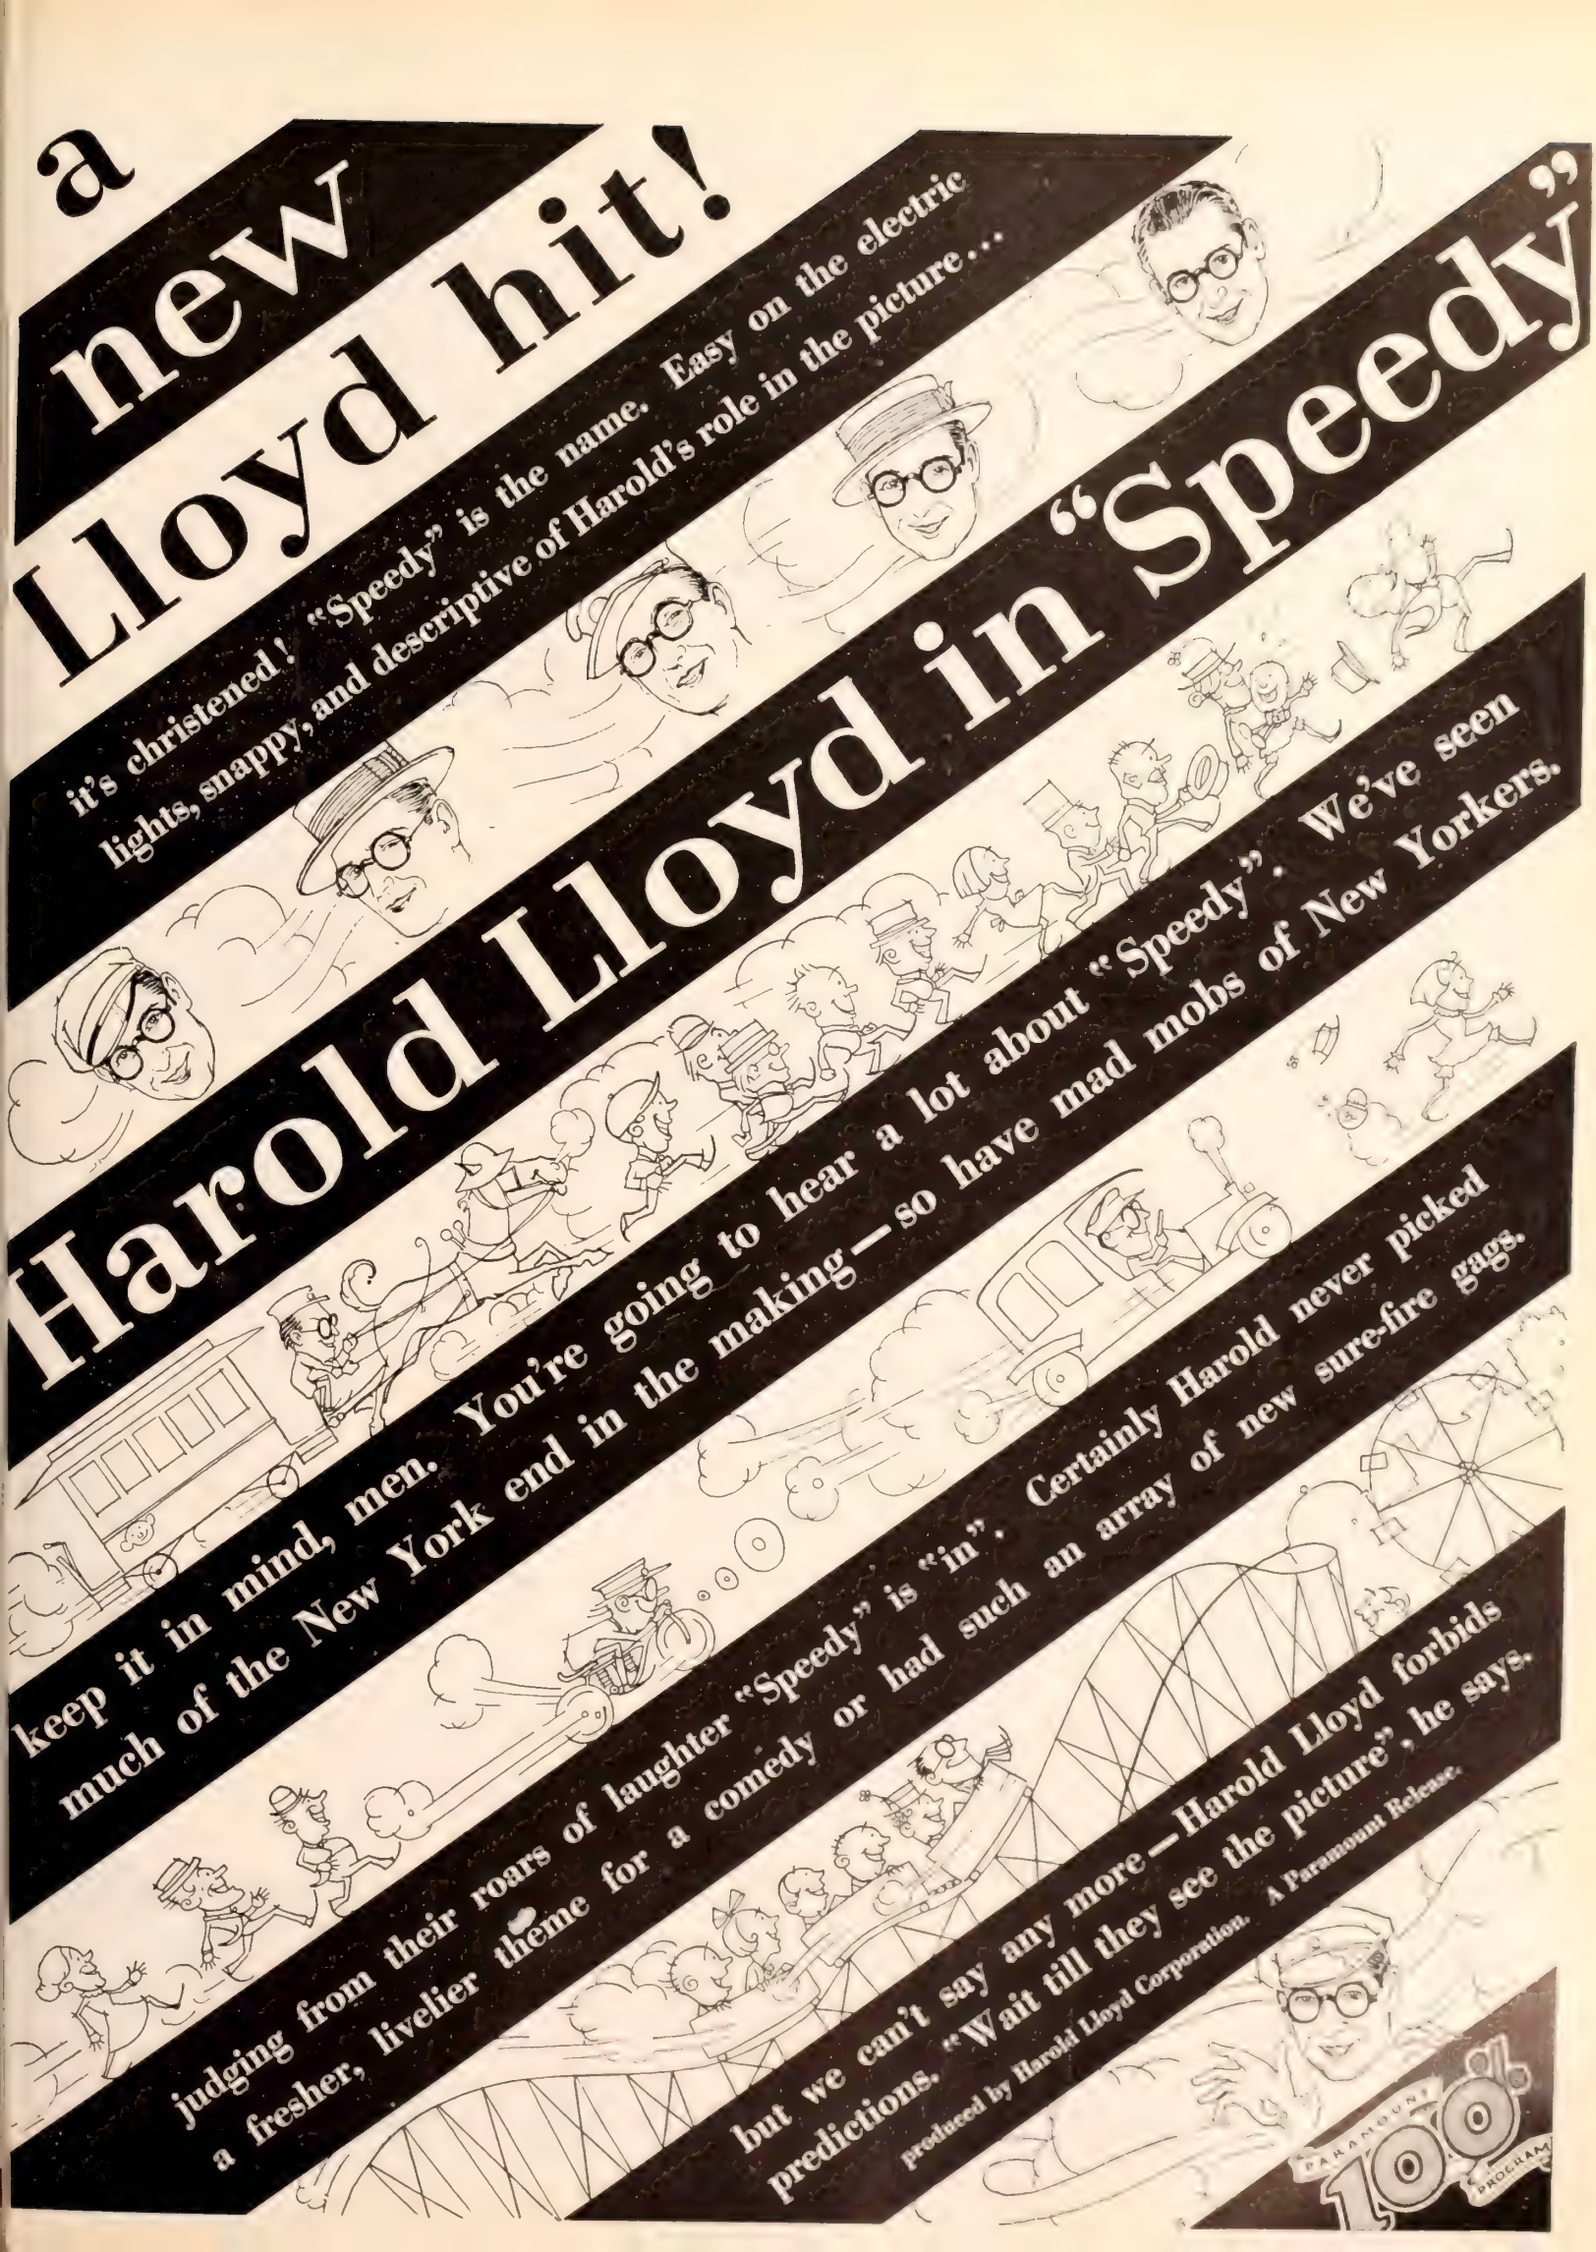
Detroit, Michigan



The organists of America have nothing but words of praise for the Wurlitzer Organ. Its tonal majesty, reliability, and absolute flexibility all contribute toward making it the peer of them all. Then, too, the exclusive features built into the Wurlitzer enable the organist to obtain effects that are impossible of accomplishment with other organs. Its tremendous hold on musicians and public alike is made manifest by the large and ever increasing number of installations in the important theatres. Attractive catalog sent upon request. a new Lloyd hit!
it's christened! "Speedy" is the name. Easy on the electric lights, snappy, and descriptive of Harold's role in the picture...
Harold Lloyd in "Speedy" keep it in mind, men. You're going to hear a lot about "Speedy". We've seen much of the New York end in the making—so have mad mobs of New Yorkers.
judging from their roars of laughter "Speedy" is "in". Certainly Harold never picked a fresher, livelier theme for a comedy or had such an array of new sure-fire gags.
but we can't say any more—Harold Lloyd forbids predictions. "Wait till they see the picture", he says.
produced by Harold Lloyd Corporation. A Paramount Release.
PARAMOUNT 100% PROGRAM

another record-wrecker!

¶ Yes, sir, we laid off talking about this "Tell It to Sweeney" picture till we knew from actual box office returns that we had another big winner. Worthy to add to the smashing Paramount specials that have made this season one continual golden harvest for Paramount exhibitors. ¶ "Tell it to Sweeney". Debut of George Bancroft (star of "Underworld") and Chester Conklin (unsung star of a hundred pictures) as a comedy team. Produced by Gregory La Cava, who made "Let's Get Married" and many other laugh hits. Paramount introduced the first comedy team in Beery and Hatton. A mob of near-Beerys and Hattons have followed but—. Paramount waited till we could give you another real comedy combination as good as the original. ¶ Here it is—Bancroft and Conklin in "Tell it to Sweeney". And—glory be, boys!—there is no war, trench or racial, in it! No thumb and nosing. No rehash of stale laughs. A fresh type of comedy yarn in a brand new setting. Lavishly made, swift, smart, loaded with roars. A new era comedy—and how!

the big ones are all paramount!

The one way to be sure

Screen quality is important to the public and therefore to the box office. It is too important an item to be overlooked by the exhibitor.

There is one way to be sure of getting the highest photographic quality in your productions. Specify prints on Eastman film—the film that made motion pictures possible—and look for the important words "Eastman Kodak" in the margin of each reel.

"Westerns" are "Westerns" always—with the exception of Tom Mix productions; they are different! Mix pictures are played and replayed, remembered, talked about, watched for. They are depended on by many Exhibitors as "rent payers". Despite the fulsome advertising of other Western stars the fact remains that in the class of Western productions Tom Mix pictures are supreme. Here is one test—infallible:—Tom Mix pictures bring the highest price of any Western productions. The crowds that storm your theatre when you play Mix pictures give you the answer. Mix pictures today, as for many years past, are in a class by themselves.

Who Has the Most Heart-Warming Grin in America?

BIG BOY!

When his flashing smile lights up the screen, Pallid Care and Wrinkled Worry scramble for the nearest exit. And that goes for you as well as for your audience.

There never has been a more delightful or more lovable kid on the screen. No man, woman or child can resist his heart-gripping appeal.

And he is endowed with amazing talent. "Big Boy" is such a remarkable performer he does not seem to act his parts; he seems to live them.

If you ever had a chance to make big profits with Short Features, you have it in "Big Boy"-Juvenile Comedies. Clean, sparkling, spontaneous fun. Backed by national advertising; supported by some of the finest exploitation tie-ups on record. And eight chances this season to cash in on "Big Boy's" fast growing popularity and power.

BIG BOY in "SHE'S A BOY"

You can promise your patrons a dandy "Big Boy" comedy in "She's a Boy." The little fellow's name has become synonymous with quality entertainment, and this particular two-reeler is in better form than ever. It is interesting to watch the progress of a kid actor, see how he is expanding and growing more varied in his appealing art. "Big Boy" has assumed new expressions and the intelligent youngster responds wonderfully under the direction of Charles Lamont. . . . "Big Boy's" slim little frame has passed the toddling stage. The kid is growing up, not only physically, but adding additional strength and charm to his natural Thespian powers. We are sure of one thing, that he is the most inviting and attractive kid actor on the screen today. . . .

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

NEW YORK, N. Y.—

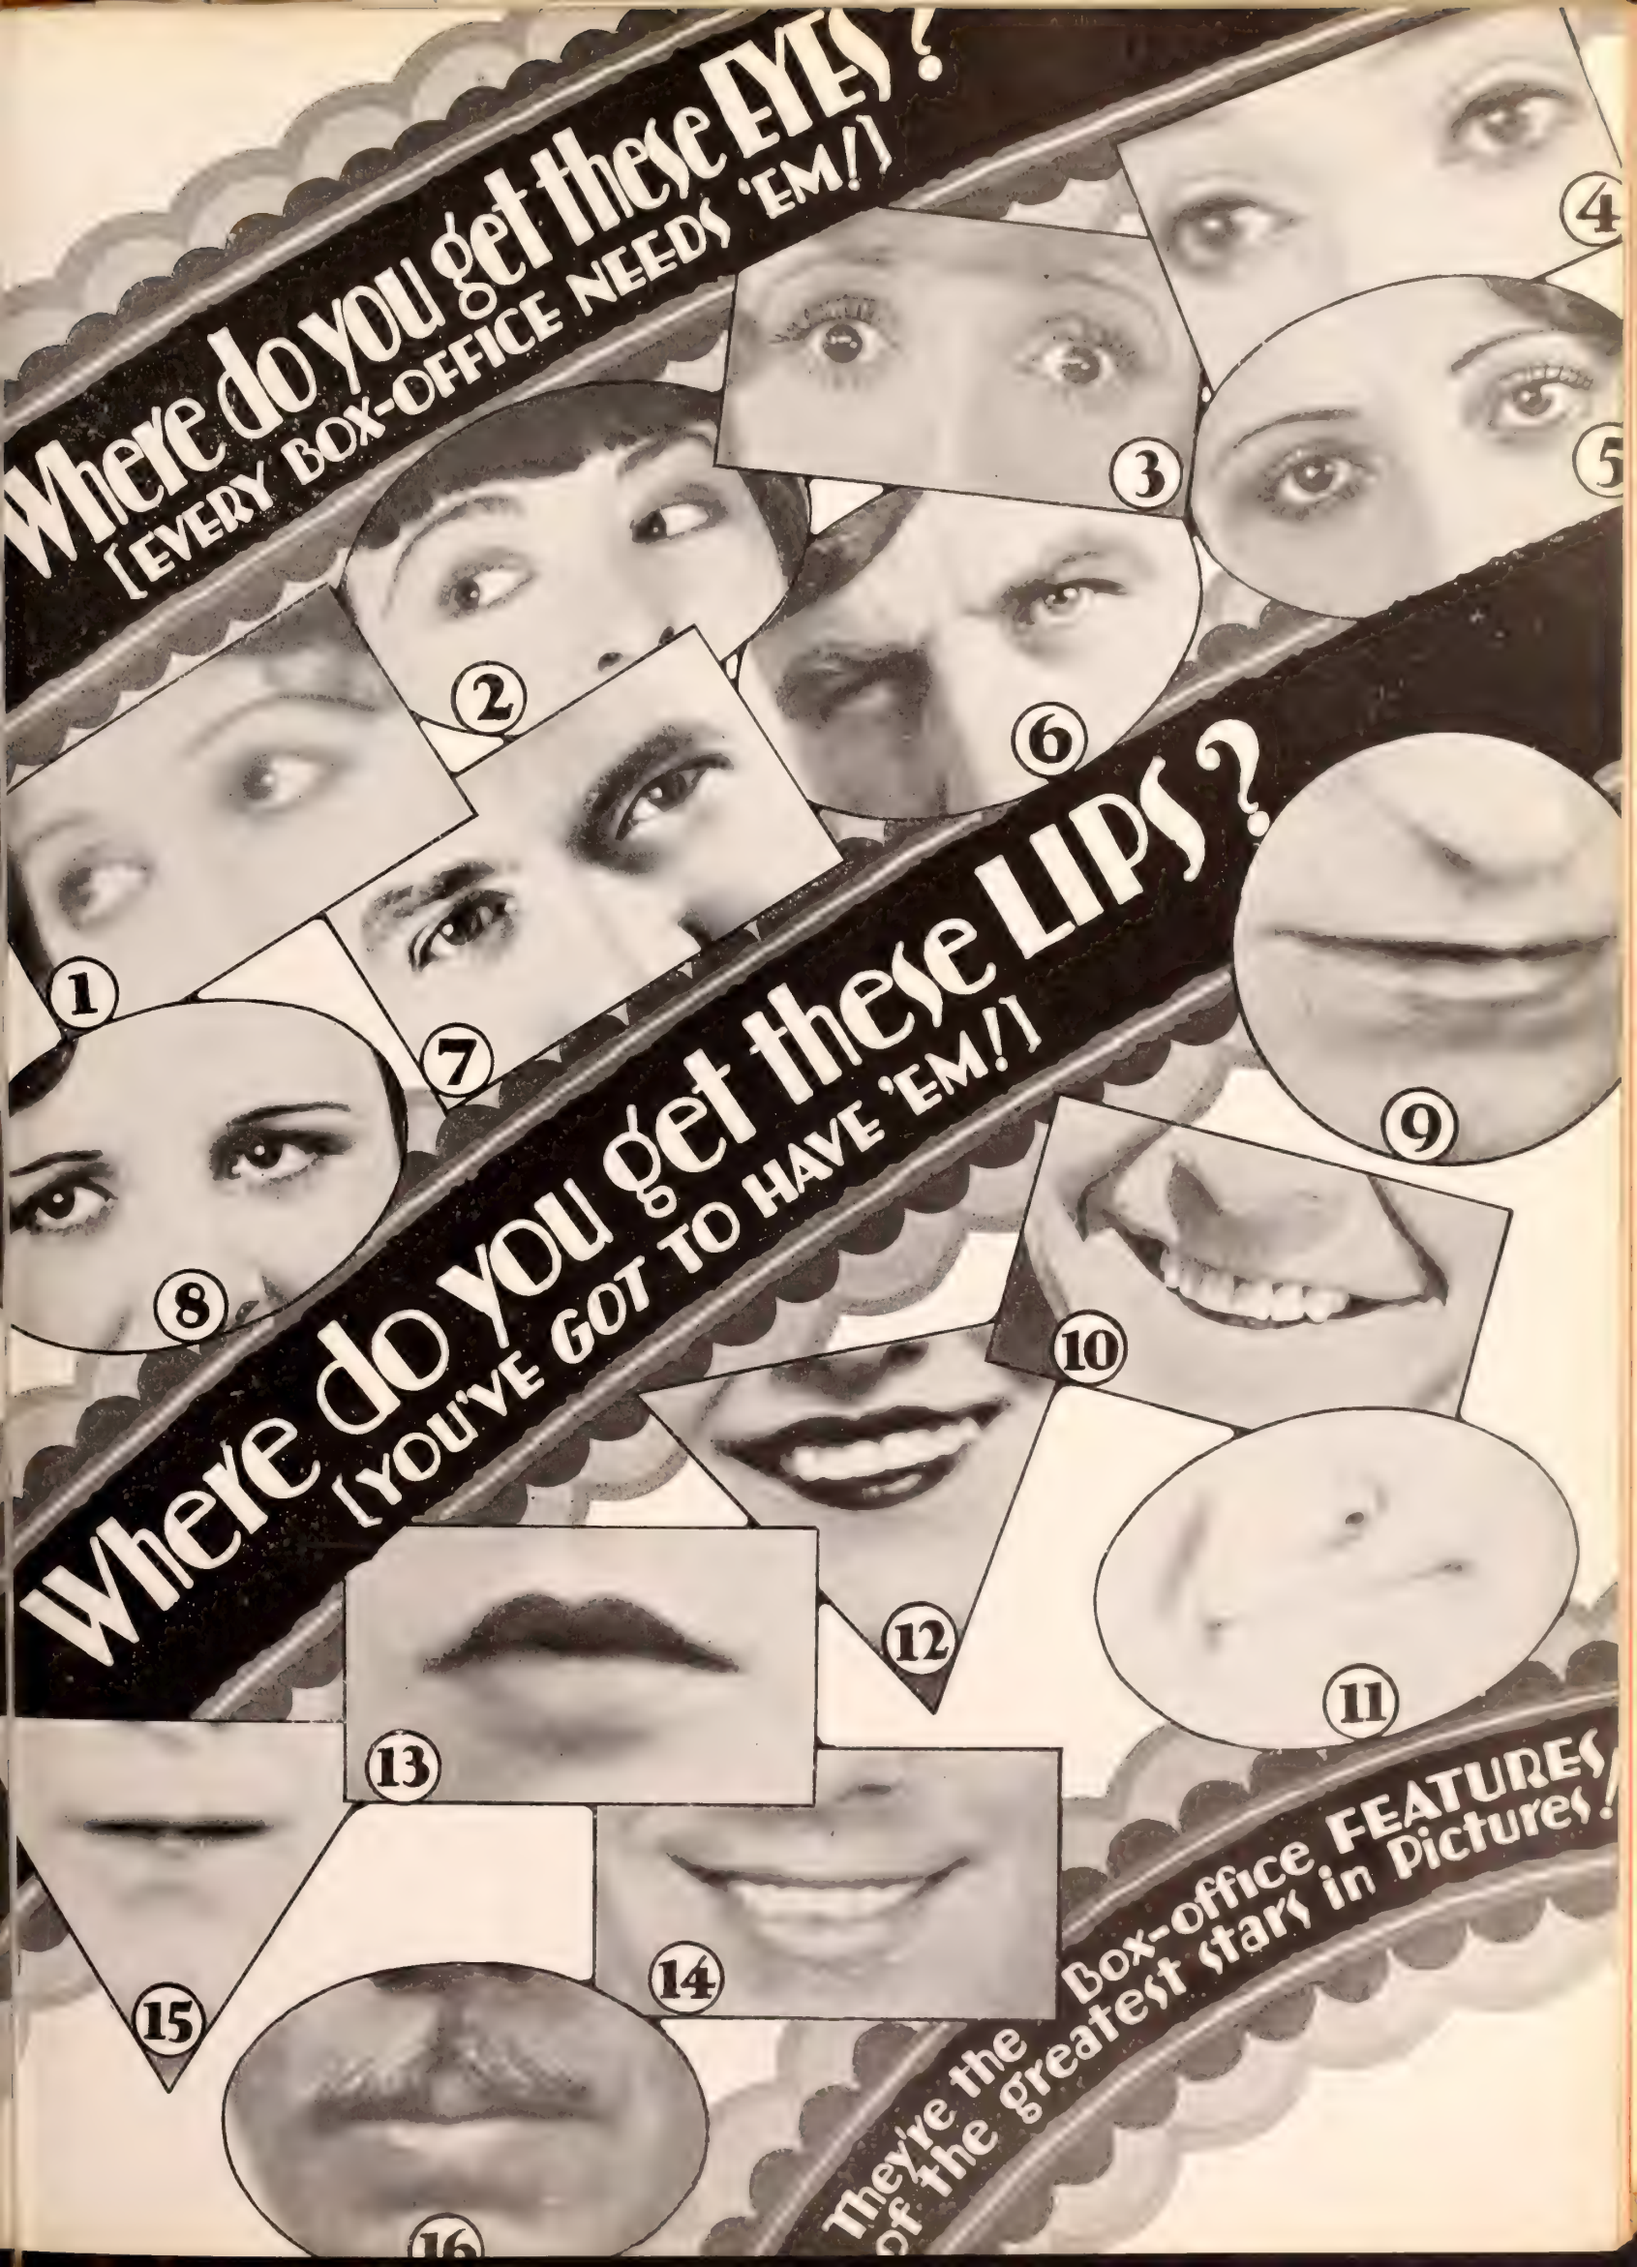
The beautiful Embassy Theatre is enjoying better business with "THE GARDEN OF ALLAH" than ever before in its history. Records established with "The Merry Widow" and "Tell It to The Marines" are now surpassed. The Embassy plays twice daily at $2 admission.

PHOENIX, ARIZ.—

Newspapermen and photographers are still congregated here covering Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Flying Lion stunt. Thousands of words have been telegraphed from this city to all points concerning the novel airplane and its Lion passenger whose rescue from the desert is now accomplished. Leo will continue his triumphs on tour.

ALBANY, N. Y.—

Local M-G-M office reports "The Big Parade" has broken all records at Rialto Theatre, Monticello; Weller Theatre, Alexandria Bay; and Gayety Theatre, Inlet, N. Y. Every day brings additional reports.



DETROIT, MICH.—

New theatres opening in Michigan favor M-G-M pictures. The last four houses to open are Temple, Saginaw; State, Kalamazoo; Ramona, Detroit; Wayne Theatre, Wayne. The first two are Butterfield Theatres, the latter are Koppin houses. M-G-M leads in this state.

ASBURY, PARK, N. J.—

An unusual situation arose here when local theatre after running "Ben-Hur" has now contracted to bring it back soon for a full week, the return beating the first engagement. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is commanding public interest here.

Benevolent Regulation

The Trade Conference and the Uncured Structural Disorder

By William A. Johnston

THE results of the Trade Practice Conference are, as Commissioner Myers has said, substantial, but not complete.

It was hardly to be expected that they would be. The job was too big for a single conference. There were too many conflicting interests to permit of full harmony within a period of six days.

In the main, however, the Conference was a good thing. It showed the industry, more than any other one event in its history, that it has a definite responsibility to the public interest which must be, and will be fulfilled.

It also reduced some of the swollen egos, and removed from certain minds the idea that the people in this industry are a privileged class.

It brought out into the open the much-discussed Standard Exhibition Contract and Arbitration system and provided for their revision. This, in itself, was a genuine achievement.

Block-booking, the main and imperative issue, deadlocked the meeting. The independent exhibitor group demanded its complete condemnation and offered a substitute. The distributors, at first, felt that they could not agree to any modification whatever, because concessions might prejudice the legal case which, if the signs are right, will wind up in the United States Supreme Court.

In the role of harmonizer, Commissioner Myers, whose handling of the whole affair was nothing short of brilliant, intervened, and the Six Points Compromise resulted.

No legal rights are waived by either side. The courts, evidently, will decide in the end. Meanwhile, block-booking has been modified in some respects, but it still remains the prevailing sales method.

What these modifications are, we set forth in detail elsewhere. No substantial changes in the selling or booking of films can take place before the beginning of the next season—say, next May.

With this exception, and it is highly important: coercion or intimidation are outlawed. This must be the meaning of the first of the Six Points, which reads:

"1. The sales method known as block booking shall not be used for the accomplishment of any illegal purpose".

Just what an "illegal purpose" would consist of, in all its ramifications, is a matter for court decision, or definition by the Commission, when its full membership considers the report of Mr. Myers and studies the record of the conference.

That will come later, next month, no doubt, when the extension given to Paramount by the commission in the matter of the "cease and desist" order expires. It should be understood that the resolutions and suggestions of the Conference do not officially become the industry's Code of Ethics until the Commission passes upon and approves them. When it does, they will have all the effect of law.

We turn now from consideration of the specific events of the conference to its larger application to the industry and its future.

Mr. Hays speaks of the Conference as a "demonstration of constructive co-operation". In the main, he is right, we believe. Get men together in a room and let them argue out their differences, and good is likely to result—provided, there is pressure from some source to induce them to arrive somewhere.

It was present at this Conference—in person, and through unquestioned public interest. As a plain matter of fact, the Federal Government began to regulate the industry from the moment Mr. Myers' gavel fell the opening day of the Conference.

Benevolent regulation—which says: "Regulate yourselves with the Government's aid, or the Government will regulate you in a way you may not like".

Acceptance of indirect Federal regulation —which is what was done when this Conference was agreed to by the industry—may prove to have been a wise step in the long run, and it may not. On that point, we are from Missouri, but it has been done and it is entirely possible that the whole situation may work out constructively.

This much, however, is perfectly clear: the industry, as a result of the Conference, is squarely out in the open as a public utility, with all the responsibilities appertaining thereto and is now on official record as acknowledging that fact.

And a fact it is. The carvers of pie will have something new to think about from now on. There has been too much disposition on the part of a few to consider this business as something to be divided up among themselves, without regard to the public interest, but according only to the measure of greed and power possessed by these individuals.

The Government has stepped in—benevolently so far. We shall see how much further it will go.

The great difficulty remains just what it was: a structural disorder whose main seat is in Hollywood. The evils connected with block booking have their origin there, because an arbitrary number of pictures is produced, without regard to public demand.

As we have so often stated, it is the struggle of the industry to absorb these pictures, arbitrarily determined upon, that causes all the trouble.

It is the simple matter of putting the cart before the horse. The producer shoves the product through the theatres to the public; the present system does not permit the public to pull the product from the producer.

This grave, fundamental weakness of our operation as an industry was not handled by the Conference; probably it could not be, from several viewpoints.

But now that the industry is in an era of benevolent regulation, now that it has gone into a Government-supervised trade conference as a protective measure against the cranks and the censorship fanatics, it would seem that it must, within itself, go the whole route and deal with the main structural disorder.

The initiative in this matter will come, we believe, from the great theatre groups. It seems likely that they, under the stern operation of economic laws, may prove to be the physicians who will cure the structural disorder.

In any event, the industry will be in a thoroughly healthy state only when and if this chief ill is corrected. Meanwhile, economic laws go right along governing the picture business, as they do every other business.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

THE sensational success of "The Jazz Singer" has set some of he wise men making new prophecies about future motion picture entertainment.

One of these, and his name counts heavily, says that the present lapse into bands and vaudeville will be followed by a combination of pictures and sound movies. The prologues and presentations will be sound movies, and so will the orchestration, while the feature picture as well as the short features and news pictures will have their dramatic effect heightened by talking, musical, or sound effects.

Interesting—and, we believe, a wise and true forecast.

Not many years ago Famous Players-Lasky made two pictures with Caruso as a star. The noted singer was then at the height of his world fame and popularity; his phonograph records were selling in vast quantities. A high price was paid for his picture services, of course. But, in general, the idea was hailed as sure-fire.

Yet the first picture flopped; so dismally that the second was never released. In fact, it stands as the only completed picture Famous ever put away on the shelf.

Then came the enterprising Samuel Goldwyn with his widely heralded contracts with Geraldine Farrar and Mary Garden. Aside from "Carmen" these pictures were not successful, and "Carmen" itself fell far short of the high expectations of those interested, in particular Morris Gest.

And now comes Al Jolson in a picture of no great calibre whatever, and, lo, it puts Broadway up on its toes. The sound movie does it. Just as the sound movie would have changed the Caruso picture into a sweeping success and made quite another story of Farrar and Mary Garden on the screen.

Looks like the sound movie might supply that one mysterious thing the picture lacks today in today's public favor.

If so, we'll have another era—another industrial era, too—in motion pictures.

All of which Motion Picture News has contended right along.

THE box-office career of "What Price Glory" is being followed with interest. There were predictions, when it opened, that it had a limited appeal, because it was not a woman's picture, and therefore could not succeed on a big scale.

The predictions, apparently, were wrong. The picture has done as well in rural cities and towns as in the metropolitan centers. We say this not for the purpose of boosting, but as a matter of record, because the fate of a picture is one of the things this industry is vitally concerned about.

It ran 26 weeks at the Sam Harris Theatre, New York, followed by a three weeks' engagement at the Roxy, where it played to 493,059 paid admissions and grossed $408,152.45. The first week, $144,267.30, set a world's record.

Other cities return these results: Los Angeles—24 weeks at Carthay Circle; Chicago—12 weeks at the Garrick, followed by six at the Monroe; Detroit—twelve weeks at the Detroit, and six more at the Fox-Washington; Boston—12 weeks at the Colonial-Majestic; Philadelphia—13 weeks; Newark, N. J. six weeks; San Francisco—eight weeks; Cincinnati—four weeks. And others of similar length.

In cities where a two weeks' run is unusual, "What Price Glory" played a fortnight each as follows; Albany, Utica, Syracuse, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, St. Paul, New Orleans, Atlantic City, Harrisburg, Pa., Reading, Youngstown, O., and Omaha.

THE other day, just as the publicity representative of a person thoroughly unimportant to the film business was 'phoning, asking us to leave a busy desk and sally forth to interview said person, Harold Lloyd strolled into the office to make one of his regular calls.

Which seemed an interesting coincidence, and one which requires no further remark, except to say that we often see important people at our office and as often are haled forth to see a number without whom the industry could worry along most successfully.

CALLING at trade paper offices is not the only nice and sane thing about Harold Lloyd.

Here are some other characteristics which we submit to the High Hats of Hollywood—meaning stars and would-be stars and the directors and would-be directors:

He is eternally asking questions and never tells how it is all done.

He has a keen knowledge of and sympathy for those wheels of the industry that begin when his negative is ready for the master-print.

He would rather talk about the business of motion pictures than about himself.

There isn't a pose in his system; he gives all his acting to the camera.

He is earnest, diligent, keen, genuine.

What a different Hollywood we would have if the high hats gave way to Harold Lloyd's cap!

ANOTHER Harold—and an important one, too—called, too; Harold Franklin, the one man in the country who operates all the other fellows' theatres.

It is interesting enough that he has put West Coast Theatres on a sound and paying basis. But it also appears that he has done a good job for the theatres of Loew's, Famous Players and the North American Company.

The fact is that Mr. Franklin's industrial laboratory—for so one may style his unique job of operating the majority of the theatres of the great west coast section is, seemingly, the most interesting and important piece of work now being done within the industry.

The public—and how important that is!—has been benefited. At least they are paying more money in at the box-office, a pretty sure sign of public satisfaction. The producer has been benefited by proper allocation of pictures. And even the independent theatres have been, or at least in the long run will be, benefited by the better application of the supply of pictures to the demand.

This piece of work—in the hectic motion picture business—sounds like the wisdom of Solomon.

The fragile and charming Lillian Gish as she appears in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Enemy"

Dolores Costello just can't bear the voice of that director any longer. The hefty megaphone wielder is Archie Mayo and he is guiding Dolores through "The College Widow" for Warner Bros.

Lia Tora, judged most beautiful of Brazilian girls, who has signed with Fox Films

Colleen Moore and Director Marshall Neilan receive a distinguished visitor to Burbank in the person of Sec. of Labor James J. Davis. Though they are in the presence of Labor they seem to be taking things easy

Because he lost a bet to Wally Beery on the Hawaii air races, Raymond Hatton had to answer all the Beery fan mail. Hence the Mussolini-like air of Beery. The two Paramount comics latest is "Now We're in the Air"

Dimples Lido, discovered by Carl Laemmle, Jr., as she arrived on the Berengaria. Needless to say she has signed a Universal contract

Little Buzz Barton, F B O's juvenile Westerner, listens to Director Frank Clark describe a scene in "Wizard of the Saddle." Take it from us, Buzz is a regular hornet when he's on a horse

The baby leopard is safe in the clasp of Jacqueline Logan, who is now playing in Pathe's "The Leopard Lady"

ANOTHER caller was W. C. Quimby, owner of the five downtown theatres of Fort Wayne and one of the country's most successful showmen. His new theatre, and a beautiful one, opens in February. It will cost a million, and will have all the newest appliances, including an elevating platform for the orchestra and equipment for radio, looking into the far future.

Mr. Quimby is 'way up on the list of the really progressive exhibitors of the country.

THE list of "don'ts," introduced and passed as a resolution at the Trade Practice Conference, was the subject of extended comment by Robert E. Sherwood, one of the foremost photoplay critics, in an article in the New York Evening Post. Mr. Sherwood is always as courageous as he is witty. We reproduce his article in part, as showing the reaction of an important critic writing for an influential newspaper:

A MOVING PICTURE trade conference has been going on in New York, at which Louis B. Mayer, representing the producers, delivered a resolution intended to promote artistry and morality on the screen.

"His resolution consisted principally of 'don'ts' for film makers, and a close scrutiny of it fails to reveal any suggestions which will contribute to the artistic elevation of the silent drama. As for morality—well, if Mr. Mayer's ringing words are taken seriously (which they won't be) the screen will be more than clean; it will be positively blank.

"Here are some of the elements which shall not appear in any pictures in the future:

" 'Pointed profanity—by either title or lip,' including irreverence or the use of such horrible words as h—(hell) or d—(damn). Which means that William Fox will have to withdraw at once, his profitable product, 'What Price Glory,' and that M. Mayer himself will immediately cancel all future bookings of 'The Big Parade.'

"Any licentious or suggestive nudity—in fact or in silhouette; and any lecherous or licentious notice thereof by other characters in the picture." (This means the elimination of every picture ever produced, with the possible exception of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "Chang").

"Ridicule of the Clergy." (Or, lay off 'Rain').

" 'Willful offense to any nation, race or creed.' (This applies principally to the Irish, the Jews and the Mexicans; its all right to kid the English—they don't seem to be so sensitive).

"Here are some of the other dangerous elements which, urges Mr. Mayer, are to be handled with the utmost care:

" 'Theft, robbery, safe cracking and dynamiting of trains, mines, buildings, etc. (having in mind the effect which a too-detailed description of these may have upon the moron).' I notice that Mr. Mayer says nothing about dynamiting dams; if that were forbidden, every scenario writer in Hollywood would have to quit his job.

" 'Brutality and possible gruesomeness.' (It might be Lon Chaney.)

"Excessive or lustful kissing, particularly when one character or the other is a 'heavy.' "

"This last stipulation, translated means that excessive or lustful kissing is pardonable when practiced by John Gilbert, but not when practiced by Noah Beery.

THE Hollywood rumor market is active this week. We set down some of the current reports, which are buzzing around the film capital, but we do not vouch for their truth:

That Watterson R. Rothacker will retire from First National at the end of his year's contract.

That D. W. Griffith will join the Pathe-De Mille-First National combine when, if and as that combine is effected.

That Josef von Sternberg, after cutting down "The Wedding March" to about five miles of film, gave it up as a bad job, and Eric von Stroheim is back again on the cutting assignment.

That Dolores del Rio has refused to play the feminine lead in "The Cock Eyed World," sequel to "What Price Glory," in which the cast of the latter was to be reunited.

That Ben Lyon and Greta Nissen will be co-starred or co-featured by United Artists in a picture. Mr. Lyon is under contract to Robert T. Kane, First National producer. The rumor is that they recently had an argument in which Mr. Kane told Mr. Lyon to go out and find a better job, which, it seems, he did.

PAUL THOMPSON, one of the country's best known news photographers, left this week for Hollywood to write special articles on motion picture personalities for magazines and newspaper syndicates.

Mr. Thompson, previous to his photographic work, was sporting editor of The New York Evening Sun, and editor of The Illustrated Outdoor News. For the past year he has been a valued member of the staff of Motion Picture News. He has contributed a number of articles to leading fan magazines, including Motion Picture Classic, Motion Picture Magazine, and others, and wrote "The Film of the Month" for The Schrine Magazine.

Laemmle's Radio Tour a Novel Entertainment Idea

UNIVERSAL went on the air last Wednesday night from Station WOR with a radio program marked by novelty and an ingenious method of supplying an entertainment of appeal to the operators of the receiving sets as a vehicle for direct publicity on forthcoming productions from Universal City.

Carl Laemmle addressed the radio public in person, acting as official guide on a mythical tour of Universal City and a visit to the sets where several important photoplays are in course of production.

The program was presented in the form of a tour, with a guessing game introduced as an added feature of interest. Music arranged by Hugo Riesenfeld and played by an orchestra which he directed, furnished the entertainment around which the game was built. Mr. Laemmle asked his listeners to draw their own conclusions as to which set was being visited by the musical accompaniment played by Riesenfeld's competent and well directed orchestra.

Those productions which the listeners-in were to see in the course of production were described by title and a brief sketch of the story by Mr. Laemmle. A musical score suited to the mood and background of the pictures thus described was than played by the orchestra.

From the standpoint of obtaining publicity as well as an entertainment of popular appeal to command a large audience, the Universal program was the most successful of any of the radio programs thus far introduced in connection with motion pictures.

Trade Conference Will Be An Annual Event

Group Chairmen Ratify Hays' Suggestion to Hold Next Meeting in October, 1928

TRADE Practice Conferences will be held annually by the industry, it was decided this week.

At the suggestion of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., the chairmen of the four groups represented at the Trade Practice Conference, called by the Federal Trade Commission, agreed that another conference of the industry will be held next October. The chairmen of the groups are R. F. Woodhull, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, for the non-affiliated exhibitors; Fred Desberg of Cleveland, chairman of the affiliated theatres' group; R. H. Cochrane for the distributor group and Louis B. Mayer for the producer group.

The group representing the public, members of important national organizations, which attended the conference last week, also will be asked to have a part in these annual meetings.

"There is no doubt in the minds of the exhibitors that material progress was made at the Trade Practice Conference," said Mr. Woodhull, "and the Federal Trade Commission did the industry a signal service in getting us all together to discuss our problems. That we are well satisfied with the conference is evident in our ready acquiescence to the thought that annual meetings should prove most profitable."

Representatives of churches, women's clubs, Y. M. C. A.s, Boy Scouts, and all other organizations representing the public, will be asked to present ideas for advancing the interests of the public.

"One of the most constructive results of the Trade Practice Conference," said Mr. Hays, "was the removal of the suggestion at times made by the public that block booking forces objectionable pictures to be shown. The statement of principles by the distributors eliminates any suggestion of what is known in other trades as 'full line forcing,' it gives exhibitors the opportunity to cancel pictures out of blocks that they have bought at wholesale prices, and eliminates pictures that may be locally offensive to race or creed.

"These annual conferences will give the industry a chance to agree upon new ideas for the good of all, and to see that practices that are adopted are being carried out."

R. H. Cochrane, chairman of the Distributors' group said "Some of us carried with us until the third or fourth day of the conference the idea that the whole thing would be only a waste of time. We found in the end, to our amazement, that real progress could be made. The Federal Trade Commission forced us to live together for a week, and we all found that we could work out some of the difficulties that most of us believed to be insurmountable. We believe it would be a profitable education for all branches of the business, if get-together meetings could be held every year."

"By all means let us have another conference," said Mr. Mayer, chairman of the Producer's group. "All our difficulties in the past have been caused by lack of understanding and the Federal Trade Commission has shown us how to bring about that understanding between the various groups. We want to continue them because, with proper cooperation among ourselves, there is no problem that we cannot solve amicably."

Moe Silver Promoted to Mark Home Office

Moe Silver, formerly general manager in New England for the Moe Mark interests, has been promoted to the home office of that company and left the middle of the week to take up his new duties.

It is understood the promotion is made to fill the position formerly held by Walter Hays.

Al Newhall has been advanced to the position formerly held by Mr. Silver in the New England territory. Mr. Newhall has been in charge of the Lynn theatres of the Mark Strand circuit and has also acted as assistant to Mr. Silver in the larger field.

FBO Announces Seventy-Five Per-cent Production Schedule Completed

WILLIAM LE BARON, vice-president in charge of production for F B O, arrived back on the coast last week after a three weeks' conference at the home office in New York, to find that 75 per cent of the company's product for the 1927-28 season had been completed.

In addition to 29 films already finished, Le Baron found that shooting on 4 specials had been concluded last week, with 8 in process of filming. The pictures concluded last week were, "Coney Island," "Freckles," "Red Riders of Canada" and "Her Summer Hero."

The 8 in course of production are: "Legionnaires in Paris," "Chicago After Midnight," "Wall Flowers," "Alex the Great," "The Little Yellow House," "Phantom of the Range," "Breed of the Sunset" and "The Better Man."

W. H. Clune, Pioneer Film Man, Dies

WILLIAM H. CLUNE, film pioneer, who helped to finance "The Birth of a Nation," and who was one of the richest men in the industry, died on October 18 at his home in Los Angeles at the age of 65.

He started in the penny arcade business, then became an exchange owner and finally entered production. One of his best known productions was "Ramona." He was also a theatre owner. He retired three years ago.

Chicago Theatres Increase Prices 10 to 30 Percent

A general swing upward in the scale of prices has taken place in Chicago theatres, film houses increasing their prices from 10 to 30 per cent.

In all their houses, Balaban and Katz have raised their evening prices from 60 to 70 cents. A similar increase will prevail at the Uptown, Tivoli, Chicago and Oriental theatres. McVickers and the Roosevelt have also boosted their prices.

The reason for these increases may be found in the more than $1,000,000 losses suffered by Chicago theatres during the recent strike.

Barrymore Begins Work on "Tempest" for U. A.

Actual filming has begun at the United Artists studio upon "Tempest," John Barrymore's second production for United Artists release, in which the actor plays the role of a Cossack in the wake of the Russian Revolution. Vera Veronina is playing the chief feminine role and Slav Tourjansky is directing. In support of Barrymore are Louis Wolheim, Feodor Chaliapin, George Fawcett, Alberg Conti, Vadim Uranoff and Jesse Devorska. John W. Considine, Jr., is producing the film.

Columbia Film Exchanges Opens New Offices

Columbia Film Exchanges, Inc., the newly formed distributing organization of Columbia Pictures, has opened permanent offices in Butte, Montana, and Portland, Oregon. A deal was closed recently by which Columbia Film Exchanges took over the space vacated by P. D. C. in those two cities; temporary cities had been open for some time. The Butte office has Adolph Rosecan as branch manager. L. E. Tillman is branch manager at Portland.

Schines Acquire Lockport Theatre From Publix

A deal has been closed with Publix by Schine Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., whereby the Palace Theatre in Lockport, New York, will be taken over by the Schines company. W. B. Frieday has been made manager of the Palace and the Rialto.

Block Booking Still Unsolved; Six Concessions Made

Deadlock on Main Issue at Trade Parley Broken by Commissioner's Intervention, and "Six Points' Compromise" Agreed to With Reservations

By OSCAR COOPER

A COMPROMISE was reached on block-booking in the final hours of the Trade Practice Conference on October 15. Some concessions were made by distributors to the demands of the independent exhibitor group, but these are not regarded as going to the heart of the problem, and it now seems probable that the final determination will be made by the courts.

For virtually two days the conference was deadlocked on this all-important issue. It was only upon the insistence of Chairman Abram F. Myers, representing the Federal Trade Commission, that any plan was agreed upon at all. Mr. Myers, whose ability as a presiding officer and harmonizer won the praise of the delegates, conferred with Will H. Hays when it became apparent that the conference was deadlocked.

Mr. Myers is understood to have urged Mr. Hays to bring the members of his organization into agreement on some plan. Eventually this was done, after a prolonged session of the distributors, followed by a joint session of their committee with conferees from the unaffiliated and affiliated exhibitor groups.

The Chairman likewise used his harmony efforts successfully when it seemed that the independent exhibitor group, in caucus, might fail to approve the distributors' plan. Finally, both groups agreed to the plan, with the reservation that the legal rights of neither would be impaired when the matter goes to the courts.

The Six Points' Block-Booking Compromise, as agreed upon, was presented by J. Robert Rubin, of M-G-M. It follows:

Text of Compromise

"The distributors, after an extensive and exhaustive discussion among themselves, have agreed, in substance, upon the following expressions of future policy:

"1. The sales method known as block booking shall not be used for the accomplishment of any illegal purpose.

"2. No distributor will require as a condition of permitting an exhibitor to lease its pictures that such exhibitor shall also lease pictures of another distributor.

"3. If any exhibitor shall claim within a reasonable time prior to the date fixed for the exhibition of any picture included in any block leased by him that such picture will be offensive to the clientele of his theatre because of racial or religious subject matter, such claim shall be arbitrated by the board of arbitration of the proper zone, and, if sustained, such exhibitor shall be relieved of obligation to take and pay for such picture.

"4. If any exhibitor who has purchased an entire block of pictures offered by any distributor so elects within a reasonable time prior to the date fixed for exhibition of any picture included in such block, such exhibitor may refuse to take such picture by paying one-half the allocated price thereof, provided that the pictures so rejected out of any block shall not exceed 10 per cent of the number included in such block, and, if a rejected picture is resold by the distributor, one-half the net price received on such resale shall be credited against the exhibitor's obligation in respect of such picture up to the amount of such obligation.

"5. Reissues will not be included in any block with new pictures.

"6. News reels and short subjects will not be included in any block with features and the lease of news reels or short subject blocks shall not be required as a condition of being permitted to lease feature blocks or vice versa.

"7. The matters dealt with by paragraphs three and four shall be covered by appropriate provisions to be included in the new uniform contracts."

Goes to Commission

The Six Points' Agreement, together with the resolutions passed by the Conference, will be considered by the full Trade Commission, upon receiving the first-hand report of the proceedings from Commissioner Myers. It is expected that his report will be ready within a month, or about the time the sixty-day extension given to Paramount expires on November 8.

It will be recalled that the "cease and desist" order was issued by the Commission against Paramount in connection with Block booking and other practices.

After the code of ethics is promulgated by the Commission, it will have all the effect of law, and every individual and company in the industry will be expected to comply with it.

In case of refusal, the Commission can issue a complaint against the offender. However, the person or corporation cited in such a complaint can appeal to the courts.

The final session of the Conference, scheduled for Saturday morning, was delayed while the block-booking problem was being considered in committee.

The distributors, when they reached a decision to agree to the Six Points' Compromise, made it clear that these were not to be considered trade practices, from their viewpoint, but as statements of company policy, to be announced by the individual distributors.

This was done undoubtedly for legal reasons, pending the final disposition of block-booking. If Paramount decides to fight the block-booking order in the Federal Courts, it would take a year to eighteen months before the matter could be adjudicated and it would probably eventually go to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The distributors understood that, while the "cease and desist" order assigned applied to Paramount specifically, it would also govern them inasmuch as all companies but one book en bloc.

Controversy on Producer Theatres

On their side, the independent exhibitors made it clear that they regarded the Six Points' Concession as "infinitesimal," and they announced through R. F. Woodhull, chairman of the group, that they must be understood as not waiving any of their rights in connection with their unanimous condemnation of block-booking.

Before the exhibitor caucus agreed to accept the Six Points, there was a lively debate. Charles L. O'Reilly read the proposed compromise to the caucus, and explained the points that had been made for and against it in the meeting with the distributors.

Just before the end of the conference Saturday afternoon, a controversy developed on the subject of the acquisition of theatres by producers or distributors for purposes of coercion.

The independent exhibitor group had already introduced a resolution on the subject, and the producers and distributors had introduced a substitute. It had gone back to the producers-distributors committee for further consideration.

At the concluding conference session, the exhibitors asked that it be brought up, and

Leaders Sum Up Conference Results

Commissioner Myers also declared that it should be taken up by the whole Conference. Gabriel L. Hess, of the Hays office, demurred on the ground that the producers and distributors had not been able to decide on the wording of the resolution.

The independent exhibitors then reintroduced their original resolution. It read:

"Resolved: That the building, buying, leasing or otherwise acquiring or threatening so to do, of any theatre building or buildings, or theatre or theatres, for the purpose and with the intent, or with the effect of intimidating or coercing an exhibitor or exhibitors of motion picture films to lease or book and exhibit motion picture films produced or offered for lease or leased by a producer or distributor, or for the purpose and with the intent or with the effect of intimidating or coercing an exhibitor or exhibitors of motion picture films to surrender his theatre holdings, either in whole or in part, in an unfair trade practice."

Chairman Myers then called for a standing vote. The independent exhibitor group voted solidly for it; the producers, distributors and affiliated theatres solidly against it.

R. H. Cochrane, chairman of the distributors' committee, agreed to the Commissioner's invitation that they would send communications on the subject to the Federal Trade Commission. The producer-distributor group also got into the record the statement that, while they were in sympathy with the principle voiced in the resolution, they needed further time to study the language in which it was expressed.

The resolution on the cutting of pictures by exhibitors was referred by the exhibitor group to the Committee of Six on Revision of the Uniform Contract.

The conference came to an end at 2.10 o'clock Saturday afternoon, after the various groups and the Commissioner had exchanged thanks for the courtesies shown.

Following are expressions on the results of the Trade Practice Conference as viewed by some of the leaders who participated:

Will H. Hays, President M. P. P. D. A.: "The result of the conference, of course, is a material progress. The industry's position on several matters heretofore not understood by many is made definite and plain.

"The provision for the modification of the sales contract by arbitration including the arbitration of all disputes under the contract and the endorsement of the industry's purpose to promote commercial arbitration is of vast value. The motion picture industry could not stand the loss incident to the possible litigation involved in ten million contractual relations every year.

"The pronouncement of the distributor's policy in relation to block booking, agreed to unanimously by the exhibitors, is the complete assurance to the public that in its operation this sales policy shall not be misused and that any pictures which might possibly actually be offensive locally, by reason of any racial or religious content, will not be shown, and that at the same time there shall be no secession of the steady supply of good pictures including those especially desired by the discriminating public. And not the least accomplishment is the demonstration of constructive co-operation."

R. H. Cochrane, Chairman, Distributors' Division: "The conference has proved a definite step forward. Real good has been accomplished, and accomplished without friction. There was a feeling of friendliness and co-operation which was commendable.

"While at times a little acrimonious debate evidenced itself, we appreciate the fine spirit that was shown throughout the conference."

R. F. Woodhull, Chairman, Independent Exhibitors: "While the concessions made by distributor are comparatively small, they were accepted in the spirit of co-operation with which exhibitors entered the conference.

"We are appreciative of the commission's fine efforts in our behalf and, in accepting the distributors' offers, we do so without any prejudice of our rights in the matter on the question of block booking. There has been a fine spirit shown throughout the conference, and all branches worked hard to reach accord on the problems involved. Each now has a better appreciation of the rights and problems of the other, and the conference has been a productive one.

Fred Desberg, Chairman, Affiliated Exhibitors: "We are very appreciative of the spirit displayed here. I think the industry has made more progress this week than it has during the last decade. Everyone met in the spirit and with the attitude of wanting to do something, not to make a speech. There was more work done here than I ever have seen at any conference or meeting, and I think the results speak for themselves.

"One of the finest results of the conference was the willingness of both exhibitor and producer to understand more of each other's troubles. As soon as the exhibitor was willing to recognize the problem of the producer-distributor by standing ready to share the loss of pictures he did not care to play, progress was made. The exhibitor in the past has had an idea that the producer, making rafts of money, should stand the loss of poor product. Now, by an understanding of the many conditions which the producer has to face, we find this attitude has undergone a change. We took the mask off and by telling each other the truth, made a definite advance. I think the industry has stepped forward considerably."

J. Arthur Hirsch, Chairman, Conference Committee, Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce: "For those who believed that a new constitution could be written for the industry in a week, the conference might be considered a failure, but, for those who looked to it for a constructive step towards such a Constitution, I believe the conference proved itself a success.

"The outstanding accomplishment, in my opinion, was the agreement to give the exhibitors an equal part in the writing of a new contract.

"The outstanding achievement was the placing before the Commission of evidence that, unless the present special privileges being enjoyed by the producer-owned circuits were curtailed, and eventual trustification of the industry, through the elimination of the independent exhibitor, would take place.

"The fact that a group of unorganized exhibitors drawn from all parts of the country could, within twenty-four hours, agree upon the major unfair practices that were affecting all, is significant when compared to the failure of the splendidly organized and prepared producers to bring in one major practice that was affecting them, and that, when confronted with the statement of facts on these major ills, they became so divided as to end the conference by refusing to approve their own resolution.

"The change from the spirit of arrogant obstinacy by the producers and of sarcastic distrust by the exhibitors as shown on the

Commissioner's View of Trade Parley

THE following statement was made by Abram F. Myers, of the Federal Trade Commission, who presided at the Trade Practice Conference:

"In the matter of formal resolutions adopted, the accomplishments of the conference were substantial but not full as I had hoped they might be.

"The committee appointed to negotiate a new contract have an opportunity to do much in the way of providing against conditions that are now the subject of complaint, and thus add to the tangible benefits of the conference.

"The vital thing in an industry is not the great properties accumulated or investments made, important as they are, but the welfare and happiness of the men and women engaged therein.

"No industry can be said to be in a healthy, happy condition so long as the largest group numerically feels that it is victimized or exploited by the other branch, and to the extent that such misunderstanding results from lack of acquaintance, it can be largely overcome by association and conference.

"A very important result of the conference has been the contact established between the several groups, which will continue during the negotiations for a new contract.

"All branches manifested a co-operative spirit and I believe that, had preparations been made for a longer conference with more time for committee work, even more would have been accomplished, as the spirit of accommodation is contagious and was spreading as the meeting came to a close."

Contract Revision Starts in January

opening days of the conference to the get-together policy that was displayed at the final sessions, is a tribute to the genius, ability and fairness of the presiding Commissioner.

"To us laymen, his chairmanship was a mental treat."

The Committee of Six, appointed at the Trade Practice Conference to draft a new uniform contract and revise the arbitration rules will hold its first meeting in January.

This committee is composed of three unaffiliated exhibitors, and three distributors. Three affiliated exhibitors, who will have no voting power, will meet with the committee.

The method selected to revise the contract and the rules is tantamount to arbitrating the contract. If the committee gets into a deadlock, they are empowered, by the resolution adopted at the conference, to select a seventh arbiter. This they must do unanimously. If they cannot do so, Chief Justice Taft of the United States Supreme Court is to be asked to name the seventh arbiter.

The committee is made up as follows:

Independent exhibitors—R. R. Biechele, Missouri; B. I. Berinstein, California; Nathan Yamins, Massachusetts. Alternates—J. Louis Rome, Maryland; H. A. Cole, Texas; Joseph Walsh, Connecticut. Distributors—Felix Feist, M-G-M; J. R. Grainger, Fox; Phil Reisman, Pathe. No alternates. Affiliated exhibitors—E. A. Schiller, Loew's, Inc., New York; Harold B. Franklin, Wesco, Los Angeles; Fred Desberg, Loew's Ohio Theatres, Inc., Cleveland; Alternates; E. V. Richards, Jr., Saenger Enterprises, New Orleans; Dan Michalove, Universal Chain Theatres, New York; and Harry Crandall, Stanley-Crandall Corp., Washington.

In connection with the decision to arbitrate the contract, R. F. Woodhull, President of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, said this week:

"One of the leading accomplishments of the Motion Picture Conference, which just concluded its sessions in this city, is the introduction of the good offices of the Government in providing a way to avoid a deadlock on the contract negotiations. This question has long remained in the disputed division because representatives of the different elements within the industry failed to agree on the more important phases of contractual relations and there was no agency at hand to break this deadlock. The provision made in the new plan is to have the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court name the deciding member of the Contract Committee in the event that no agreement is reached on any part of the new contract."

Continuing he said: "As most of the disputed situations within the industry can be adjusted through agreed contract provisions, it is very important that complete success attends the efforts of the new joint Contract Committee, which consist of three members representing Producers and Distributors and three members representing Independent Exhibitors. This Committee will meet in New York City soon and take up the work of completely revising and rewriting the contract. This will, I feel sure, contain such provisions as will bring about fair trade practices within the industry and afford all concerned entire business protection in keeping with the advancement and evolution of the Motion Picture Industry.

"Special precautions were taken by the Exhibitor Members of the Conference in the selection of the members of the Contract Committee. This work necessitated giving attention to geography and representative capacity. Theatre Owners are fortunate in their selections as the men named fit well into these situations. Nathan Yamins, of Fall River, has substantial Theatre Holdings and has for years been in close touch with Exhibitor problems through our National Organization, of which he is a director. He is also an attorney of much ability.

"R. R. Biechele, of Kansas City, has been a leader of Exhibitors in the Middle West for years, and his ability to handle all of the varying business conditions is without question.

"Benjamin Berinstein, of Los Angeles, who has been made a part of the Contract situation for years, knows the varied problems intimately and will be able to give an excellent account of himself on the Committee. Mr. Berinstein is also a director of the National Organization.

"The alternates, Joseph Walsh of Hartford, Louis Rome of Baltimore and Col. H. A. Cole of Marshall, Texas, are also of the highest type. The best legal advice will be available for the members of the Committee and it is now generally believed that an absolutely fair contract will follow the deliberations of this important body.

"The Conference was a marked success in many ways, thanks to the splendid work of Commissioner Myers, M. Flannery and others of the Federal Trade Commission."

"I cannot refrain from saying that in all my experience with Exhibitor bodies I never presided over a more responsive or better disposed group. The Exhibitors of the country are to be congratulated on the fine character of the men they sent to represent them."

How Washington Views Conference

BY CLARENCE L. LINZ

Washington Correspondent, Motion Picture News

WASHINGTON, October 19.—Although the motion picture conference in New York last week failed to come out flat-footed with a ban on block booking, members of the Federal Trade Commission feel that their efforts were by no means wasted, for the meeting did adopt resolutions in six points which, although they have not yet been thoroughly analyzed, are believed to cover the most salient points of this hotly contested subject.

At any rate, the Commission is entitled to the credit of having brought out in open meeting a number of subjects of a highly controversial nature, regarding which there has never before been a "round table" discussion, and it is believed here that, at the very least, a good start has been made toward the voluntary suppression of practices which do not meet with the approval of the Government.

A great deal of credit is being given Commissioner Abram F. Myers for the qualities he displayed in conducting the conference. Faced with the embarrassing task of having to reconcile the various opposing forces and with the necessity of guiding the discussion along constructive lines, his sincerity, ability and utter fairness won for him the friendship of all, as has been attested by the highly favorable comment which has already reached Washington.

The Conference has apparently resulted in greatly altering the sentiment of the industry regarding the Commission, again thanks to Mr. Myers. Formerly believing that the commission was eager to "make" cases to justify its existence and needed only a hint of possible unfair practices to induce the issuance of a complaint, the delegates to the New York meeting learned, much to their surprise, that the Commission was anxious only that unfair practices should be eliminated from the business of the country, and that it was more pleased when an industry undertook to make such eliminations voluntarily than when it forced such action by order.

The next step on the part of the Commission will be to receive the report and recommendations of Commissioner Myers and then determine whether the points agreed upon in New York are comprehensive enough to serve as a code for the industry or whether it will be necessary to insist upon compliance by Paramount-Famous Players with the order issued last July.

Paramount has until the end of the first week of November in which to file its response to that order, under the 60-day extension granted by the Commission, and, of course, no decision can be reached as to future action until the company has filed or refused to file its report. In other words, if the Commission decides to insist upon compliance with the report, rather than adherence to the findings of the Conference, it cannot decide whether court action is necessary until Paramount has given some indication of the attitude it will adopt.

Capitol Sets New House Record for Week

Grosses $95,312 With First Program Under New Stage Policy

NEW YORK theatregoers are responding to the new policy shows at the Capitol, with the result that a house record of $95,312 gross receipts for the first week was established by the program inaugurating the new style of presentations.

Major Bowes introduced his new policy at the matinee performance Saturday, October 15, and business started off with such a rush that by Sunday night two house records were broken.

It was evident at the outset that the Capitol was going in for "names" on the new stage bills, and later developments proved this to be the case. The show had Pat Rooney, Marion Bent and Pat Rooney 3rd, Paul Specht, Rome and Dunn, and others prominent in vaudeville and musical comedy. On the current bill Major Bowes has Nora Bayes and Ben Bernie, as the principles, and for next week he has announced that Van and Schenck will be featured with Ben Bernie remaining to lead the "Capitolians," the new jazz orchestra, and act as master of ceremonies.

Equipped with new stage devices, including an orchestra lift, two stage lifts, a moveable bridge, electrically operated stage platforms that travel on steel tracks set in the floor, a complete counterweight system, and lighting, the Capitol inaugurated the vaudeville policy with an unusually elaborate bill.

From its gold cloth curtain to the illuminated stairway, the feature of the revue called "Oddities," there was a lavishness of setting and a generous supply of stage talent specializing in the vaudeville and night-club variety of entertainment to regale the customers. With the assistance of the remarkable stage resources which the Capitol now claims, there was a spectacular finale which for novelty as well as protentiousness was the equal of the most ambitious stage effects attempted by the bigger Broadway musical shows.

The show was opened with an offering called "Echoes from the Opera," which carried out the best traditions of the previous presentations at the Capitol. This act enlisted the services of the orchestra under David Mendoza, and four vocal soloists, appearing in operatic scenes. Also included in this presentation were the Capitol singing ensemble and a ballet corps.

A newsreel, of about ten minutes screening time, followed. The full orchestra accompanied this presentation. Next there was a combined screen and musical number, with a small orchestra, installed in one of the upper proscenium boxes and vocal artists interpolating songs and instrumental music in conjunction with a reel of Western views on the screen.

The stage revue opened with the appearance of the jazz orchestra on a moving stage, traveling downstage, with Pat Rooney going through the motions of leading the musicians through a sprightly tune. Rooney then turned the baton over to Paul Specht, who mounted the platform as the automat was moved backward and picked up by one of the stage lifts. The jazz orchestra was then elevated about six feet above the stage level, and Rooney continued through his act, during which he introduced Marion Bent and Pat Rooney 3rd. Rome and Dunn, a singing team followed, working before the jazz orchestra, which was brought down to stage level for the number.

The following feature was the appearance of the Keller Sisters and Lynch, who did their act on the piano section of the orchestra lift. At the conclusion of this group of popular songs, the piano elevator was lowered as the stage curtains were drawn on a spectacular set, with the various stage lifts moving into position to form a stairway leading from the stage floor to the top of the set at the rear. The Chester Hale Girls paraded down the stairs into the setting, singing to the accompaniment of the "Capitolians," grouped at either side of the stairway at the second level.

This bill represented an outlay of about $10,000 for salaries to performers, exclusive of the orchestra, the singing ensemble, Chester Hale girls, and the vocal soloists who appeared in the operatic number.

The screen feature was "The Road to Romance," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production based on Joseph Conrad's "Romance" and starring Ramon Novarro.

The Capitol advanced the new and greater stage policy with a vigorous and well planned advertising and publicity campaign reported to have cost about $50,000. The remodeling of the stage, completely overhauled and transformed into one of the finest and most resourceful of any to be found in a picture theatre, is said to have cost $175,000.

Red Cross Roll Call for '27 Will Cover Industry

Already occupied in formulating a comprehensive Roll Call program, Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, plans to extensively cover the entire motion picture field in New York City. Mr. Lasky is acting as volunteer chairman of a specially organized motion picture group. The Paramount executive served as chairman of a similarly organized group in the Roll Call of last year. He anticipates generous support for the forthcoming appeal and is aiming at a 100 per cent enrollment of the personnel throughout the motion picture industry.

The Roll Call opens on Armistice Day. The volunteer alignment will be based on the plan of wide-spread committee groups headed by chairmen culled from the various industries; these chairmen will probe their respective industries for a response to the Red Cross organization's annual appeal.

"Gorilla," F. N. Special, a November 15th Release

"The Gorilla," First National's second special production for the new season, will be generally released on November 15th. The first special was "Rose of the Golden West." The third will be "The Private Life of Helen of Troy."

Charlie Murray and Fred Kelsey play the detectives in the screen version of the Ralph Spence mystery play which Alfred Santell directed. In the cast are Tully Marshall, Claude Gillingwater, John Colb, Walter Pidgeon, Gaston Glass, Alice Day, Brooks Benedict, Syd Crossley and Aggie Herring. The name of the actor playing the gorilla has not been released.

First National has advanced the release date of "No Place to Go," so that it will be the last of the five releases of October, replacing "Gun Gospel," which is now scheduled to lead the November releases from First National.

"Blue" Law Battle Still Raging in Homestead, Fla.

The Sunday "Blue Law" war in the little Floridan city of Homestead came to a head Sunday last when J. W. English, manager of the Seminole Theatre, gave the citizens a taste of what a really "closed" town was by having deputies close every place of business in Homestead that attempted to operate.

The stunt achieved the effect desired for, according to report, the city government assured him that he might operate his theatre on Sundays without interference. When he re-opened last Sunday, four pastors combined the following day and requested a warrant for his arrest for alleged violation of the state "blue" law.

The case was discharged because of insufficient evidence by W. H. Edwards, justice of the peace.

Eight Pathe-DeMille Feature Pictures for Broadway Houses Same Week

PATHE-DE MILLE feature pictures will be shown simultaneously in eight Broadway motion picture theatres the week starting October 29th. There will be eight different features on display, which is said to be a record for Broadway houses. In addition to the features, Pathe News, a number of two-reel comedies, Fables and Topics of the Day, all Pathe product, will be shown on program with the features.

The theatres and features to be shown during the week are: Roxy Theatre, "The Main Event;" Paramount Theatre, "The Forbidden Woman;" Mark Strand Theatre, "Dress Parade;" Colony Theatre, "The Angel of Broadway;" B. S. Moss Cameo Theatre, "The Wise Wife;" B. F. Keith's Hippodrome Theatre, "The Girl in the Pullman;" B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre, "A Harp in Hock;" Gaiety Theatre, "The King of Kings."

Param't Pep Club Presents Zukor With Portrait

Climaxing the series of Paramount Pep Club banquets, and in Adolph Zukor's words, climaxing, too, his career as the Paramount president, a painted portrait of Mr. Zukor, executed by Giuseppe Trotta, was unveiled at a dinner at the Hotel Astor in New York this week. More than 700 men and women, all employees of the Paramount Famous Lasky Corporation, applauded at the unveiling and enthusiastically received Palmer Hall Stilson's speech of presentation, and the remarks of Jesse L. Lasky in accepting the painting for Paramount. "This is the greatest personal tribute ever paid me," declared Mr. Zukor.

At the conclusion of the dinner, the retiring president, Mr. McLaughlin, thanked the members of the club for their support during the past year. Melville A. Shauer, manager of the Paramount Ad Sales department, then introduced, as toastmaster, the new president, Vincent Trotta. The officers elected at the polls in the Paramount building on September 30th were installed. They are: Vice-president, Joseph R. Sweeney; Treasurer, Arthur Leonard; secretary, Catherine Kent. The Board of Governors is Eugene J. Zukor, Palmer Hall Stilson, Belle Goldstein, Joseph R. Wood, Joseph P. McLaughlin, William S. McIllvain, Arthur Dunne, Chalmers S. Traw, Rebeckah Shuman.

Lloyd Finishes N. Y. Scenes for "Speedy"

Harold Lloyd and his company, which has spent the last two months in New York filming scenes for "Speedy," his next Paramount starring comedy, left last Wednesday for Hollywood.

Accompanied by his wife, the former Mildred Davis, their daughter, Mildred Gloria, his father, J. Darsie Lloyd, and his brother, Gaylord Lloyd, who acts as his assistant director, Lloyd had several drawing rooms in a car of the Broadway Limited as it pulled out of the Pennsylvania station shortly after 2 o'clock last Wednesday.

According to Lloyd, his present comedy is within two months of completion. Several sequences remain to be shot on the West Coast, and then will come the work of cutting, titling and editing, which to Lloyd is always one of the most important jobs on his films.

Predicts Good Season for Northwest Theatres

Crop conditions in the northwest are still reported wonderful, and theatre owners are smiling at the good times in prospect. Government estimates for October raised both the corn and spring wheat figures by many million bushels over the September predictions, and thtat means so much more money in the northwest to be spent in the theatres. Everybody agrees that it is one of the best grain crops in years.

Violence Marks St. Paul, Minneapolis Strike

Two Theatres Bombed and Other Offenses Are Committed as Settlement Nears

VIOLENCE marked the strike this week in Minneapolis and St. Paul of 500 stage hands, picture operators and musicians, when two theatres were bombed during the week and other minor offenses were committed. The city council is offering theatre goers every protection and has authorized the appointment temporarily of 100 extra men to the police force.

The Logan Theatre, a neighborhood house in Minneapolis operated by W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest Theatre Owners Association, and the Forest Theatre in St. Paul, were the bombed houses. The Logan was dynamited at 1 A.M. with only the night watchman in the house. The rear of the theatre and the projection screen were damaged and a few windows broken. The owners' association immediately offered $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the guilty parties.

The blast in the Forest Theatre occurred while 250 men, women and children were in the house. One woman was injured in the rush that followed the explosion. Attendants prevented serious disorder by quieting the crowds. Not much damage was done the theatre, though twenty windows in a nearby hall were shattered by the blast.

Police guards have been stationed at every theatre in Minneapolis and for a time it was thought the National Guard would be called out, but Mayor Leach frowned upon this measure as unnecessary. Some members of the council favored closing the theatres until the strike was settled.

A number of minor cases of violence were reported during the week. A former theatre usher was arrested and charged with spraying an obnoxious liquid in the Hennepin-Orpheum. A stench bomb was thrown into the Porter Electric Company, which had been doing considerable work for the theatres.

Negotiations between the theatre owners and strikers were broken off abruptly following the bombings, but they have again been renewed and there is some prospect of an early settlement, as both sides are suffering. The owners have offered to submit the entire case to a special city council committee for arbitration but the strikers rejected the proposition, countering with a new plan of their own which is still under discussion.

The strike started when the stage hands of Minneapolis and St. Paul demanded one day a week off with no reduction in pay. When the theatre owners refused and employed non-union stage hands, the operators and musicians walked out in sympathy.

Paramount Perfects Negative Machine

A NEW negative developing machine, which, it is claimed, will revolutionize methods of developing motion picture film and will eliminate the danger of breakage of the film, has been perfected by Frank E. Garbutt, who has been working on the device for three or four years in conjunction with Leigh Griffith at the laboratory department of Paramount, B. P. Schulberg, Paramount executive, announces.

The developer is approximately 40 feet long and nine feet high. The laboratory is conducting final experiments with it prior to its actual use on a program picture.

The machine is made up of rollers, the mechanism controlling them and tanks of developing and film cleansing fluids. There are also rollers in the developing liquid tanks. These rollers, operating at a fixed speed and maintaining an absolute even tension on the film, thread the undeveloped negative through the developing tanks and into an inclosed drying cabinet. The machine is said to lessen to an infinitesimal degree the danger of the negative becoming too taut and snapping, causing camera retakes.

Seven New M. P. Firms Obtain N. Y. Charters

Newly incorporated motion picture companies, granted charters during the past week by the department of state, at Albany, New York, included the following: Brady and Wiman Productions Corporation, capitalization not stated, William A. Brady, Dwight D. Wiman and M. I. Trimble, New York City; Miseris Productions, Inc., $10,000, Irving Aaronson, Frederick E. Ahlert, New York City; Frank J. Friedman, Brooklyn; Sayville Amusement Corp., $10,000, Henry Liman, Rose Leff, Brooklyn; Leslie Lester, New York City; Coross Production, Inc., capitalization not stated, Sidney Lieberman, Edward Berkowitz, Edward Whiteside, New York City; Hi-Mark Film Sales Company, $20,000, Nat Nathanson, Winifred Mason, Rudolph Schor, New York City.

Five M-G-M Features Set for November Release

"The Garden of Allah," "Quality Street," "Man, Woman and Sin," "The Thirteenth Hour" and "Becky" are Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's releases for the month of November.

The first production is now in its seventh week at the Embassy in New York City. Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovich are its featured players. "Man, Woman and Sin" has John Gilbert in the starring role with Jeanne Eagels his leading lady. "The Thirteenth Hour" marks the debut of Napoleon, a new dog star. In "Becky" Sally O'Neil and Owen Moore are the [illegible] leads.

Annual Conventions On

Problems of More Than Usual Importance Are Up Before State Exhibitors

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners associations of the different states either have just held or are about to hold their annual conventions for discussion of their problems and to elect officers for the ensuing year. These conventions this year are of more importance than usual because of new conditions and questions that have arisen in the past few months.

How the result of the Trade Practice Conference held in New York City will affect Ohio exhibitors will be one of the chief questions of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Ohio to be held November 15-16 at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel, Columbus. William M. James, President of the Ohio body, and P. J. Wood, Business Manager, attended the hearing.

Business Manager Wood announced this week that he is completing a list of speakers for the annual banquet which is to be held at the Deshler-Wallick Hotel on the evening of Tuesday, November 15th. Among them are James T. Begg, congressman from the Thirteenth Ohio District, John L. Clifton, Ohio commissioner of education, and in charge of motion picture censorship in Ohio; and Attorney-General Edward C. Turner, of Ohio.

The meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Utah took place October 7th at the Newhouse Hotel, Salt Lake City and a discussion of the problems of motion picture exhibitors regarding Sunday closing laws occupied most of the time. All of those present at this conference pledged themselves to support the organization against the Sunday closing laws for motion picture houses, and against the invasion of their field by schools and churches.

The officers elected for the coming year were: C. Mell Stringham of Ogden, as president; Carl Porter of Salt Lake, as vice president; J. E. Ryan of Brigham City, as treasurer; Andrew Murdock of Heber City, and J. J. Gillette of Tooele, as directors.

The Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, Inc., held their annual meeting in Indianapolis October 7th, in the Chamber of Commerce Bldg., and this was the largest meeting the exhibitors of Indiana had in years, about three hundred theatres being represented from different parts of the state.

H. M. Richey of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., was the principal speaker of the day. Mr. Richey and the exhibitors present at this meeting took up the problems of block booking and producer owned theatres in competition to the already established independent theatres, and the Indiana exhibitors went on record as favoring the abolition of block booking and producer owned theatres.

Seventeen of the Board of Directors were reelected by acclamation, namely, V. U. Young, Gary; J. N. Wycoff, Terre Haute; Walter Easley, Greensburg; Wm. Brenner, Winchester; O. I. Demaree, Franklin; Chas. R. Metzger, Indianapolis; A. C. Zaring, Indianapolis; Jean Marks, Indianapolis; B. D. Cockrill, New Castle; Arthur Jackson, Crawfordsville; R. E. Remley, Richmond; Sam Neall, Kokomo; H. H. Johnson, LaFayette; Harry Markum; Indianapolis; Paul Melloy, Shelbyville; Harry Vonderschmidt, Bloomington; Billy Conners, Marion. In addition there were three new members elected to the Board of Directors, Floyd R. Bietman, Indianapolis; Jack Belger, Bluffton and Joe Schilling, Connersville.

The officers of the association were reelected by acclamation.

St. Louis Benefit for Tornado Sufferers Called Off

The theatrical and motion picture benefit show that was to have been given in the St. Louis Coliseum on Friday, October 21, under the joint auspices of the St. Louis Theatre Managers Association, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of St. Louis, and the St. Louis Municipal Theatre Association to raise fund for the St. Louis tornado sufferers has been called off.

The decision to abandon the big show was reached following a statement accredited to the members of the Citizens Red Cross Tornado Sufferers Relief Committee that no further funds would be solicited at the present time. About $850,000 has been raised for the Red Cross committee and this is deemed sufficient for all needs.

Prior to the Red Cross announcement about 25,000 tickets had been distributed, but preliminary reports from motion picture theatre owners and others endeavoring to sell the admissions was the public had lost interest in the show because they believed additional relief funds were not needed.

Illinois Strike Over; Miners Can Again See Films

The announcement from Chicago on October 1 that the strike of the Illinois coal miners had been settled was received with joy throughout the coal fields of South Illinois, and has given the motion picture theatre owners in that section their first chance to smile in many months. Within a few weeks mine workers will again have surplus funds with which to enjoy their favorite recreation—good motion picture shows.

Under the terms of the settlement the mines resume under the old wage scale, while a special committee of four studies the Illinois mine situation. This committee will report back on Feburary 7, 1928. Its findings will be used as a basis for a permanent scale and working agreement for the Illinois mines.

Clifford Lewis Succeeds Fred Rath at Paramount

Resigning his position of assistant advertising manager of Paramount in order to devote his time to the writing of scenarios and legitimate plays, Fred Rath has been succeeded by Clifford Lewis, who has been connected with the industry for 12 years, the last two having been spent in the advertising department of Publix.

Mr. Rath has sold several vaudeville skits and plays. Al Woods will produce a play of his this fall. Georgie Price has made Rath a tentative offer to do a play for him, it is said. Universal has also purchased a number of Rath's stories.

British Film Head Tells of Solving Problems

SAM HARRIS, one of Great Britain's leading cinema figures, addressed a luncheon of the A. M. P. A. last week after being welcomed to America by Will H. Hays, who was also present at the luncheon, as was Carl Laemmle. Harris, after urging a greater distribution of British films in the United States, told how the British had solved the problem that were being discussed last week at the trade practices conference.

He said two years were spent in threshing out the same problems, through committees representing exhibitors, renters and producers in conference with the President of the Board of Trade. The particular clauses that solved the block booking problem were that all films must be trade shown before being booked; every film must be registered; they must be screened within six months after date of trade showing; not more than one film must be booked at any one time, and the penalty for infringement is 100 pounds or $500.

Pathe Offers Eight Shorts for Week of October 30th

A collection of eight short subjects whose headliners are a Mack Sennett comedy and a Grantland Rice Sportlight is offered by Pathe for the week of October 30th.

"For Sale a Bungalow" is the Sennett film. It was directed by Earle Rodney under the supervision of J. A. Waldron. Madeline Hurlock and Eddie Quillan are supported by Andy Clyde, Vernon Dent and Phil Whitman. The Rice Sportlight, "Down to the Sea," depicts the delights of beach and bay. Pathe Review, No. 44, offers: "Bronze Workers of the New World," "The Garden City of the Orient" and "The Gentler Sex." The serial, "Hawk of the Hills," reaches its last episode in "The Triumph of Law and Love." "A Brave Heart," an Aesop film fable, Topics of the Day, No. 44, and Issues Nos. 90 and 91 of the Pathe News complete the week's program.

Denver Wins Tiffany National Sales Contest

The Denver exchange of Tiffany Productions, Inc., has been found winner of the Tiffany national sales contest which ran for 13 consecutive weeks. Boston is in second position and New York is third.

In the bookers' division of the same contest, first prize went to Denver and second and third to Boston and New York respectively. The final divisional standings finished as follows: 1, Western; 2, Eastern; 3, Southern; 4, Central; 5, Mid-West.

"The Secret Hour" New Title of Negri Vehicle

Instead of "Beggars of Love," Pola Negri's newest Paramount picture has been titled "The Secret Hour." Rowland V. Lee directed the production with Jean Hersholt and Kenneth Thompson in important leading roles. It is scheduled for release on December 17th.

Production in Advance of Schedules

First National, M-G-M and Paramount Making Rapid Progress With Season's Output

PRODUCTION plans and schedules laid out at the beginning of the season are being closely adhered to and, in some instances, exceeded by some of the larger producing companies. Great satisfaction is expressed at the different studios at the progress being made.

Paramount announces that of 44 pictures scheduled for release from August 1, 1927 to January 21, 1928, 34 are now finished. With the completion of photography on eight productions now in the making, First National will have finished 29 of the 58 pictures scheduled. M-G-M sends word that more than two-thirds of the release schedule is either in production or ready for release.

Among the Paramount pictures completed and now ready for release are: "Shanghai Bound," "A Gentleman of Paris," "Underworld," "The Woman on Trial," "Open Range," "The City Gone Wild," "The Last Waltz," "Jesse James," "Now We're in the Air," "She's a Sheik," "The Street of Sin," "Beggars of Love," "Beau Sabreur."

Six features now in production are: "The Spotlight," "Honeymoon Hate," "The Gay Defender," "The Side Show," "Honky Tonk (tentative title), and "Serenade."

At the First National studios production is under way on eight features which will be concluded by the end of the month. Among these is the first of the new group of Colleen Moore pictures as yet untitled. It is from the pen of Howard Irving Young. Others of the unfinished productions are: "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," "The Gorilla," "The Shepherd of the Hills," "A Texas Steer," a Sam Rork special with Will Rogers; "Louisiana," "The Valley of the Giants," "The Chaser," "The Caravan Trail," "Home Made," "Man Crazy," and "Sailors' Wives."

Only two of the seven special M-G-M features in its 1927-28 schedule remain to be filmed. They are "The Cossacks," starring John Gilbert, and "Rose-Marie," featuring Renee Adoree. The other specials either ready for release or in the final stages of cutting are: "The Garden of Allah," "The Crowd," "Mademoiselle from Armentieres," "Napoleon," and "Body and Soul."

Of the star pictures, "The Hypnotist" is in the final stages of production, and "The Big City" is in preparation. Others in production or being prepared are: "Trelawney of the Wells," two John Gilbert vehicles, "Fires of Youth," "The Enemy," "The Divine Woman," "Quality Street," "The Fair Co-ed," a Syd Chaplin vehicle, "The Loves of Louis," "Spring Fever," "West Point," "Baby Mine," "Mixed Marriages," "Tea for Three," "The Adventurer," "Wyoming," "Buttons," "The Dog of War," "The Trail of '98," "In Old Kentucky," "Becky," "Bringing Up Father" and "The Lovelorn."

Motion Picture Club Takes Legal Steps

THE first legal and authorized steps in the history of the Motion Picture Club of New York were taken this week at a luncheon of the charter members and those who signed the charter. The action taken was legal in this respect that it was authorized by a charter granted on October 3rd. This was the first meeting since that charter had been granted.

The first action taken was a resolution presented by Howard Tierney and seconded by Paul Gulick, that the ten men who signed the charter which was granted in Albany should constitute a temporary membership committee for the purpose of passing upon the qualifications for membership of those who have already sent in their $100 initiation fee. These ten men are Al Lichtman, Arthur Loew, Arthur Stebbins, Victor Shapiro, William A. Johnston, Bruce Gallup, Walter Moore, William Brandt, Lee Ochs and David Chatkin. Inasmuch as Mr. Stebbins and Arthur Loew are both in Europe, it was determined that a quorum of this membership committee should be constituted by any six members of the ten.

Applications for charter membership, which will be very soon closed, should be sent to Mr. Bruce Gallup, secretary pro tem, 729 Seventh Avenue.

Seven Warner Films Now in Work at Coast Plant

With the placing of "A Race for Life" and "Five and Ten Cent Annie" into preliminary production, the total number of new screen pieces now in work at the Warner Bros. studio on the West Coast was increased to seven. Work is progressing on the five other productions: "Glorious Betsy," "In Name Only," "Beware of Married Men," "If I Were Single" and "Brass Knuckles."

"A Race for Life" is Rin-Tin-Tin's next, and it is being prepared for Ross Lederman to direct. Charles R. Condon is completing the script for "Five and Ten Cent Annie," which will be the next comedy vehicle for Louise Fazenda and Clyde Cook.

"A Bowery Cinderella" New Title of Excellent Film

Instead of "Bowery Rose," its forthcoming production to follow "Broadway Madness," Excellent Pictures has attached "A Bowery Cinderella" as the new title for the picture. It is thought that this new title more clearly defines the story. The cast consists of Pat O'Malley, Gladys Hulette, Rosemary Theby, Kate Bruce, Pat Hartigan, Ernest Hilliard, Pauline Parr, Leo White, J. Webb Dillon and the chorus of the Muse Box Revue.

Six Features, Four Shorts From Fox During Nov.

Exhibitors will receive six feature productions and four short subjects from the Fox Film Corporation during the four weeks of November. This is the beginning of the company's winter releases.

"Very Confidential," featuring Madge Bellamy, will be the first of the features to be released. On November 13th a new Sammy Cohen-Ted McNamara, as yet untitled, and "Blood Will Tell," a Buck Jones Western, will be issued. Tom Mix appears on November 20th in "Arizona Wildcat," with Dorothy Sebastian in the feminine lead. November 20th sees the release of "Ladies Must Dress," with Virginia Valli, Lawrence Gray and Earle Fox. The last of the features for the month will be "Shame," another of the John Gilbert reissues. The shorts for November release are: "Four Faces West," with Tyler Brooks and Dione Ellis, November 6th; "A Silly Sailor," with Gene Cameron and Kay Bryant, "November 20th; "The Moose Country," a Varieties, November 13th, and "Lights and Shadows of Sicily," a Varieties, November 27th.

Holding Out Film Costly

Court Awards Damages When Exhibitor Holds Print Waiting Return of Deposit

A DECISION handed down in the Common Pleas Court in Philadelphia should be of interest to exhibitors who feel they have a right to hold out a film on a distributing company that temporarily withholds a deposit paid by them. In a ruling during the week the court upheld a verdict of the arbitration board and granted Pathe (Producers Distributing Corporation) damages.

The case was decided against the Sunbury and Selinsgrove Railway Company, which operates the Rolling Green Park. The railway company contracted for a picture and advanced a deposit of $50. The picture was played and the railway company refused to return the print until the deposit was refunded.

When the distributing company refused the repayment of the deposit arbitration was resorted to, with the result that Pathe was awarded $1,080 and an additional sum of $20 a day until the print was returned.

The railway company refused to abide by the decision of the arbitration board and completely ignored the matter. The film subsequently was replevined and the damage action was started by Pathe. The trial before a jury started and continued for two days. After a complete hearing of the case the jury returned a verdict of $1,872.70 in favor of the distributor.

Walenstein Admitted In Reorganized Sterling

THE complete reorganization of Sterling Productions, Inc., and the admission into the firm of Irving L. Walenstein, former exchange and distribution man, has been announced by Henry Ginsberg, president of Sterling Productions, who terms the move as "the most important in the development and expansion of the company." The reorganization consists mainly in a larg increase in capitalization, which will be used chiefly for the purpose of producing a higher grade of pictures, and in the strengthening of the Sterling production personnel.

The executive officers of the new corporation are Henry Ginsberg president; Joe Rock, vice-president and general production supervisor; and Irving L. Walenstein, treasurer and secretary. The details of the reorganization were decided upon following the return of Mr. Ginsberg from Europe in a series of conferences with both Mr. Walenstein and Mr. Rock.

Laemmle Appoints Welsh Personal Representative

Carl Laemmle has appointed as his personal representative Robert E. Welsh, who for the last two years has been Advertising Manager of the Universal. Mr. Welsh's remarkable experience in trade paper work as Managing Editor of Motion Picture News, and in publicity, advertising and production, gives him unique qualifications for the work that Mr. Laemmle designs for him to do.

Nat G. Rothstein will again assume the advertising managership, in addition to his work as Exploitation Manager of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

"A Texas Steer" Now in Cutting Room at Burbank

"A Texas Steer," Sam E. Rork's production of the old Charles Hoyt stage play of that name, is now in the hands of the cutters at the Burbank studio. Will Rogers, the star of the piece, is writing the first titles while Frank Lawrence is doing the editing of the film. Mr. Rork feels that in "A Texas Steer" he has the foremost comedy feature of the season.

It is thought that the production will be ready for a New York opening about Thanksgiving week. It will be given a Broadway showing whether or not it is road showed. All activities at the Rork office in New York are centering on the New York premiere.

The exploitation of the picture is stressed by Mr. Rork, who mentions the cast supporting Rogers, the fact that the star's name is often seen in the public prints and Rogers' recent appointment as Congressman-at-large. There will be 6,000 billboards posted on 24 sheets. This arrangement is made possible through the co-operation of the W. K. Kellogg Co., of Battle Creek, Mich. These billboards will remain before the public for 90 days. There will later be 650 Kellogg salesmen arranging grocery store tie-ups. This huge hook-up will represent an expenditure of $800,000.

First Nat'l Grooms Eight Films for Early Filming

Within the next three weeks, the First National studio at Burbank will begin production on eight new pictures. Preparatory work is far advanced on the entire eight, and two of them are entering upon production.

Robert Kane has begun producing "French Dressing" with Allan Dwan at the megaphone. Lois Wilson and H. B. Warner are two of the featured players. Production has also been started on "Down Went McGinty," the tentative title of another Charlie Murray-George Sidney vehicle. Getting under way shortly are "The Noose," to star Richard Barthelmess under John Francis Dillon's direction; "Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath," in which Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall will be directed by Richard Wallace, and a new Milton Sills vehicle which Charles Brabin will direct.

Three pictures which will be ready for production by the first of November are "Once There Was a Princess," the tentative title of Billie Dove's next vehicle; "The Royal American," the tentative title of a new Ken Maynard Western, and a new Johnny Hines comedy, the title of which has not been announced.

Coast Film Will Build Two at Portland, Ore.

WASHINGTON-OREGON THEATRE ENTERPRISES will construct two motion picture houses in Portland, Oregon, their cost to be $1,500,000. On Portland's West Side, a 3,000-seat house to cost $1,250,000 will be erected while a subsequent run theatre will be built on Portland's East Side at a cost of $250,000. The location of either house has not been announced.

Washington-Oregon Theatre Enterprises has plans for two houses in Seattle, Washington, one at Astoria, Oregon, one at Vancouver, B. C., and another at Salt Lake City. The Seattle structure is already going up and will seat 3,000. Plans have been completed for the Astoria house which will cost $250,000. Ivan Hyland is president of the firm.

Sheehan Back on Fox Lot to Launch New Films

Now that the post of supervisor of production at the Fox Films studio in Hollywood is again occupied by Winfield P. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager, the Fox plant is humming with renewed activity. Several special photoplays are soon to be launched at the Los Angeles plant or other locations. At present Sheehan is concentrating on 12 productions, some of which are already in work. Two films have also recently been finished: "Grandma Bernle Learns Her Letters" and "Wolf Fangs." Director John Ford completed the former production after several months of work. The Ford production is one of Fox Films' specials.

Two important pictures about to be launched are: "The Four Devils," which will be F. W. Murnau's second assignment for Fox, and "The Cockeyed World," the sequel to "What Price Glory," on which Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson are collaborating. The principals and director of "What Price Glory" will again be reunited in "The Cockeyed World." Actual filming on the Murnau production is scheduled to begin early in December. It will be a picturization of the novel by Herman Bang, which deals with circus life. Berthold Viertal and Carl Mayer are doing the scenario and models and plans have been made under Murnau's direction by Walter Roehrig and Robert Herlth.

Also being shot are "Lady Cristilinda," "A Girl in Every Port," "Womanwise," "Balaoo," "Come to My House," "Free and Easy" and "Wildcat Law." Ludwig Berger, the German director, will soon be in Hollywood to start directing "The Dollar Princess."

Brenon to Direct Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh"

Herbert Brenon has signed a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer contract to direct Lon Chaney in "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," the David Belasco and Tom Cushing stage play which was first produced in New York at the Belasco Theatre in 1923 with Lionel Barrymore and his wife, Irene Fenwick; in the romantic leads. Brenon will move his offices to the Culver City studio after applying the finishing touches to "Sorrell and Son," his production for United Artists. Camera work on the new Chaney vehicle is expected to begin at an early date. It may follow "The Big City," Chaney's latest, on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production schedule.

Warners Will Release Four During November

Four releases have been scheduled by Warner Bros. for release in November.

"Good Time Charley," with Warner Oland, directed by Michael Curtiz, will be released on November 5th. "The Silver Slave," Irene Rich's starring vehicle which was directed by Howard Bretherton, will be issued on November 12th. "The Girl From Chicago," co-featuring Myrna Loy and Conrad Nagel and directed by Ray Enright, is set for November 19th. George Jessel's "Ginsberg the Great," directed by Byron Haskin, will come on November 26th.

Paramount News To Issue Regular and Occasional Regional Editions

EMANUEL COHEN, editor-in-chief of Paramount News, has decided upon regional editions starting with issue No. 18. Seven permanent regional editions have been established to be released twice a week, and in addition there will be ten occasional regional editions.

The permanent regionals will be released on the same days as the national editions and are to be attached thereto at the exchanges, the regionals always being made the first story of the reel.

The seven regionals, together with the cities wherein they are printed and distributed and the exchange territories included, are: New England, printed at Boston and including Maine; Southern, printed at Atlanta and including Jacksonville; Southwestern, printed at Dallas and including San Antonio; Central, printed at Cincinnati and including Columbus; Midwestern, printed at Chicago and including Milwaukee; Golden Gate, printed at San Francisco, and Pacific, printed at Los Angeles.

The occasional regionals will be the Gulf States at New Orleans, Great Lakes at Cleveland, Wolverine at Detroit, Missouri Valley at Kansas City, Mississippi at St. Louis, Rocky Mountain at Denver, Northwest at Seattle, Twin City at Minneapolis, Sioux at Des Moines, and Corn Belt at Omaha.

Columbia Denies Merger

Jack Cohn Declares Rumors of Consolidation Are Entirely Without Foundation

JACK COHN, treasurer of Columbia Pictures, denies emphatically that his company is considering consolidation with any other company, as had persistently been rumored. He declares Columbia is on a more sound basis now than ever before and that there is no reason why they should consider consolidation.

In his statement Cohn says:

"Columbia Pictures is not considering at the present time, nor has it been considering in the past, any plans for a consolidation of its interests with those of any other company or for the introduction of outside capital into its present organization.

"Our present position as a national organization of recognized importance has not been gained overnight, but is the result of a gradual and solid development, and we feel perfectly confident that no merger is needed for our continued expansion. We have greater plans and ambitions, but we feel that we can best accomplish them by proceeding as heretofore and following our policy of a steady but sure growth.

"Twice during the past year we have enlarged our personally owned producing plant by purchasing additional studios to take care of increased production. We now have our own exchanges in practically every important key city in the country, the latest addition being the five West coast exchanges.

"Never in the history of Columbia Pictures have we been so financially sound. Our present product has been acclaimed as on a par with the best, and the exhibitor approval, evidenced by the booking contracts, has been more than gratifying."

H. A. R. Dutton, president of The National Theatre Supply Co., which is celebrating the first anniversary of its organization

First Nat'l Buys Rights to Hurst and Glyn Stories

The world motion picture rights to a short story by Fannie Hurst and a novel by Elinor Glyn have been purchased by First National.

The Hurst story is "Roulette," which was first published in a volume of short stories, "The Vertical City." The Glyn Novel is "The Man and the Moment," originally published in 1914 by the D. Appleton and Company; it was recently reprinted. Robert Kane will produce the Glyn novel for First National. Allan Dwan's name has been mentioned as director.

Hughie Mack, Film Comic, Found Dead in Bed

Hughie Mack, [illegible] died this week at his home in Santa Monica, California. He was found dead in bed and physicians diagnosed his demise as having been caused by heart disease.

Lee Marcus of FBO Wedded to Claire S. Warner

Lee Marcus, F B O's general manager of sales, was married last Monday, October 17th, to Miss Claire S. Warner at Sherry's in New York. Directly after the ceremony, the couple left for a three weeks' honeymoon in Bermuda.

Exemplifying the good wishes extended Mr. and Mrs. Marcus by all their friends in the trade was the congratulatory dinner celebrated some days prior to the marriage by the executives of F B O. Attending this affair were: Joseph P. Kennedy, president of F B O; J. I. Schnitzler, senior vice-president; E. B. Derr, treasurer, Charles Rosenzweig, Jerry Safron, Hy Daab, Steve Fitzgibbons, Pat Scollard, Arthur Goldsmith, Tod Streibert and Ambrose Dowling.

Following the dinner the entire company took in a performance of "Five O'Clock Girl" at the 44th Street Theatre.

First National Releasing Two Specials in November

Two special productions on the First National program—"The Gorilla" and "The Private Life of Helen of Troy"—are included among the four features which First National has scheduled for November.

The schedule follows: "Gun Gospel," November 6th; "The Gorilla," November 13th; "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," November 20th, and "Man Crazy," November 27th. Ken Maynard is the star of "Gun Gospel." Featured in "The Gorilla" are Charlie Murray and Fred Kelsey. The large cast in "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" is headed by Maria Corda as Helen. The team of Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall is presented in "Man Crazy."

Ashton Dearholt a Business Manager at Burbank

Ashton Dearholt, film actor and independent producer, has joined First National at the Burbank studio as a business manager. He has just handled the business end of "Man Crazy." The production manager was Charles R. Rogers.

Dearholt entered the movies sixteen years ago working in the studios of the American Film company. Since that time he has been a featured player, business manager, studio manager and producer and director.

Substitutes Feature for Act in Test Venture

STARTING October 16, the Orpheum Theatre, Kansas City, of the Orpheum vaudeville circuit, adopted the policy of eliminating one act and substituting a first run feature picture, the picture to precede and follow the vaudeville bill. The venture, which has been tried out in other cities, will be a test in Kansas City, no feature picture ever previously having been shown in the Orpheum. The picture will necessitate starting the afternoon and evening programs one-half hour earlier.

"Whatever will increase business, that's what I'm for," said Fred Spear, manager, "although the feature picture policy, of course, is a test venture in Kansas City."

Samuel Goldwyn

Goldwyn Becomes Owner-Member of United Artists

By the unanimous vote of the other seven owner-members of United Artists Samuel Goldwyn was last week elected an owner-member of the corporation. The election occurred a few hours prior to the departure for England of Joseph M. Schenck, United Artists president, last Wednesday night.

Mr. Goldwyn became an independent producer for United Artists two years ago. Since joining the corporation he has released five films, three of them co-featuring Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman. He is offering "The Devil Dancer" and "Flower of Spain" on the 1927-28 program.

Mr. Goldwyn has been elected a member of the board of directors of United Artists. He has announced from Los Angeles that he will serve on the board himself.

Thos. Lawlor, New England Exhibitor, Dies

Thomas Lawlor of Lawlor Brothers, Greenfield, Mass., passed away early in the week. His brother, Nicholas Lawlor, died only three months ago. The two brothers were among the most popular of the New England exhibitors. Thomas Lawlor was a past exalted ruler of Greenfield lodge of Elks and was a member of the Democratic State Committee from that part of the state. The two brothers owned and operated the Lawlor Theatre in Greenfield as well as theatres in Amherst and Deerfield, Mass.

"College Hero" Columbia's First October Release

Columbia Pictures' first release for the month of October will be "The College Hero," featuring Bobby Agnew and Pauline Garon, and directed by Walter Lang, with Charley Paddock assisting in the capacity of technical advisor. Other roles are played by Churchill Ross, Rex Lease and Joan Standing.

Gotham to Make Special in "United States Smith"

Gotham Productions has plans to produce a special entitled "United States Smith," a story which was purchased last week by Gotham from the estate of the late Gerald Beaumont. The story originally appeared in the Red Book Magazine and deals with the U. S. Marines and the World War in what is said to be an entirely different manner.

Negotiations are in progress for the active co-operation of the Marine Corps from the San Diego base. Several months of preparation will be necessary before production can be attempted, says Gotham. Upon arriving in Los Angeles last week, Sam Sax, president of Lumas and Gotham, immediately went into conference with Sam Bischoff and Carrol Sax for the purpose of producing the Beaumont story.

Cleveland Film Men Back Wage Increase for Police

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association is officially backing a .7 mill tax levy for wage increase for local police and firemen. A letter to this effect has gone forth to every member of the Association with a request that every member run slides boosting the tax levy. This is not an effort on the part of the Association to take any part in local politics, but just to tell the public that 41 cities in the United States are paying their firemen and the policemen more than Cleveland is paying.

"Men, Women and Sin" Title of Gilbert Vehicle

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of newspaper life, starring John Gilbert and featuring Jeanne Engels, stage actress, in the leading feminine role, has had a change of title, and will henceforth be known as "Men, Women and Sin." The story, an original by Monta Bell, who is also directing it, was previously adorned with the working title of "Fires of Youth." Scenes for this film was recently shot in Washington, D. C., and the final sequences are now being filmed at the Culver City studio of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Param't Using Incandescent Lighting

REPLACING the customary arc carbons which have always been in use at motion picture studios, incandescent lights are being used at the Paramount studio on the West Coast for the filming of night sequences in Emil Jannings' new starring vehicle. The new lighting system has proved practical and it will be used during the production of all future Paramount pictures. The lights are of the Mole-Richardson type perfected by the Paramount electrical department after much research and experiment.

Panchromantic film is used entirely with the new incandescent lights and the Paramount camera department has been preparing for the changeover for some time.

Ideal Picture Theatre Programs

Bills That Appeal to Picture Fans Are Those That Are Built Around the Screen Attractions

(Editor's Note.—Following is the second and concluding instalment of Mr. Clarke's paper, "An Exhibitor's Problems in 1927," presented at the recent convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers. The first instalment was published in the October 21st issue of Motion Picture News.)

By Eric T. Clarke

General Manager, Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

IN all this floundering what is the ideal for which to work? New York with its unique floating population need not worry about ideals. Yet, that is the problem facing all exhibitors who, like ourselves, must appeal to virtually the same audiences week after week.

First and foremost let us recognize that the movie-goers aggregate the largest audiences that have ever patronized any of the arts. So large is the following that there is no effective substitute for the movies. When Chicago houses were recently shut down the legits did not gain appreciably. It follows that whoever places the film first in importance will appeal to the greatest numbers and do the biggest business. To such an exhibitor there is nothing to be gained by setting up a variety show along vaudeville lines. That policy may be best for combination houses buying only the cheapest pictures, but the public interested in this form of entertainment has never been more than a small fraction of the vast array of movie goers. The exhibitor who has the best pictures will do better to play them with no presentation at all than to surround them with incongruities.

Feature of First Importance

First in importance comes the feature, for it after all will chiefly determine the success of the show. Second in importance comes the weekly film news. The addition of two news reel services this season, I regard as the most significant accomplishment of the year. We purchase all six national news reels. True, the addition of these services has increased our expense, but the extra cost is well worth while. For good measure we add a seventh which is the Rochester Film News. This Rochester Film News consists of motion pictures taken by the staff photographer of one of our local newspapers. Those events suggested by our Publicity Director as being of general interest to the citizens of Rochester are photographed and the shots developed by the Eastman Kodak Company. The pictures are then sent to the Eastman Theatre for use if we consider them satisfactory for showing. The expense of this service is borne by the newspaper and the Eastman Theatre, the newspaper furnishing the photographer and the camera and the Theatre paying for the developing of the reels.

I cordially recommend this to exhibitors in other cities as bringing the biggest return on the money invested.

Third in importance comes the short subjects. As I stated a year ago, we cannot often make use of two reel comedies, nor are there often so many real good ones, but the single and half-reel subjects are of great importance. Among these the new Metro Oddities added to the Fox Varieties, the cartoons and novelties of other companies are proving most welcome.

Having now our film, what comes next in importance? Here I unreservedly place projection. Careful and adequate projection must be assured before it is worth bothering with orchestral accompaniment or stage effects. And by projection I mean to include all the lighting embellishments, patterns, etc., besides a cleanly projected picture. In my opinion there is almost a virgin field in the art of projection embellishment. At the Eastern Theatre we have made, I am proud to claim, considerable progress in this art, and when our Projection Engineer, Mr. Townsend, gets the free time after completion of the papers which he is presenting at this convention we shall undertake a general paper along this line.

Orchestral accompaniment comes next. There is little to add to what I have already stated on this head beyond the fact that this season I am experimenting with continuous orchestral accompaniment by splitting the orchestra into two units when the overture and acts are over and the feature begins. Half our orchestra, totaling 68 men, is sufficient for the accompaniment of most features, and half can rest while the other half plays.

I come now to the subject of acts which play an important part in the makeup of a bill. The important points to remember are:

1. The bill as a whole must build up to the feature, never overshadow it.

2. The bill must contain variety in character and tempo.

3. Yet the bill must make a cohesive whole so that Mrs. Smith will tell Mrs. Jones across the back fence the next morning "Be sure to see the Eastman program this week. The picture isn't so much, but I wouldn't have missed the show for the world!"

I am completely convinced that this type of bill is possible only when the acts are originated in the theatre by ourselves. I see no way of rounding out the character of a bill by setting an imported act against a feature. Since travelling acts are largely vaudevillian in origin, the inclusion is merely a step in the direction of the very combination show which I wish to avoid.

Ideas of Program Building

As no two features are exactly alike, so no two shows are exactly alike. There are, therefore, no set rules for making up the bill. The chief ingredient in making up a bill is idea; just as the chief ingredients for a stage act are good ideas for the beginning and ending. After four years' grappling with this problem, I have learned one important thing and this is to separate completely the What from the How. With this thought in mind, we have developed at the Eastman Theatre a unit which for want of better term I call the Scenario Department. This is a staff function, responsible for nothing more and nothing less than to prepare act scenarios appropriate to each bill as it comes up for consideration. The head of the department, who sees all the pictures which are to come to the Eastman, proposes the bill and maes a write-up of each act. I look upon this as an entirely new profession. After determining in this way what we are going to do, we can now discuss the approved write-ups to the Stage Director Ideal Picture Theatre Programs—CONT. . and consider how they are to be presented. He then brings them to regular weekly planning meetings attended by the heads of the Orchestra, Scenic, Costume and Projection Departments, not less than two weeks before the show is to go on. The Stage Director, besides directing the Eastman Theatre Company, is the coordinator of all work in the preparation of the show. He is responsible for the rehearsals right up to the dress rehearsal in the theatre on the Friday morning preceding the Sunday on which the show opens. The Stage Director continues his work with the cast in the acts for the remaining 20 performances of the week after the show is set.

Number of Program Units

The number of items on each bill will depend on the length and character of the picture. Ben Hur and Big Parade, for example, call for no overture, but require a short prelude leading into the stage prologue which in turn leads directly to the feature without interruption. Farce comedies and gala bills, on the other hand, call for great variety and will contain as many as eight items. I realize that there is no one right way of making the ideal program. There are many ways of building a bill around any feature. Our main purpose is in selecting the items which we can put over successfully and which in suitable variety will lead the audiences gradually and without abrupt breaks through various moods up to the opening of the picture which must come as the climax. A short film, light in character is necessary as a "chaser" to follow any feature which may end on a sombre note.

Columbia Progress Due to Co-operation

"CO-OPERATION has been the keynote in the success of Columbia Pictures," remarked Harry Cohn, Columbia executive, at a get to-gether dinner of department officials and workers held on October 7th at the Montmartre in Hollywood. To the spirit of harmony and understanding prevailing at his studio, Mr. Cohn attributed the progress and growth of his organization during the past seasons.

Remarking that criticisms and suggestions from any member of Columbia, from office boy to star, will be welcomed, Mr. Cohn said further that instead of cutting salaries, Columbia will offer bonuses for ideas and will reward new and constructive thoughts.

Stanley Nets $3,700,000 for Nine Months of '27

ACCORDING to a statement presented to the executive committee of the Stanley Company of America, the net income, after deducting interest and taxes, amounted to approximately $3,700,000 for the first nine months of 1927. The earnings exceeded dividend requirements for the full year; at the rate of $4 a share the dividends will approximate $3,176,000.

Quick assets as of October 1st, 1927, were $7,367,000 as compared with current liabilities of $748,000. At no time in its history has the Stanley Co. been in a better financial condition, the report indicates. The company has no bank indebtedness.

Only a small portion of the capital supplied by the stockholders earlier in the year and other invested funds have become productive, it is explained, and these only recently. Earnings of houses existing January of this year show an increase for 1927 over the corresponding period in 1926. The money invested in land, buildings, fixtures and cash on hand, earmarked for construction, averaged approximately $10,000,000; virtually none of this sum has earned any money.

"U" Buys "Grease Paint" for Conrad Veidt

"Grease Paint," an original story by Svend Gade, has been purchased by Universal as a future vehicle for Conrad Veidt, who is now working at Universal City. The story is of a traveling theatrical company. The role is said to have been written especially for the Continental star. The production will go into work some time this winter and will probably be scheduled for release on the 1928-29 program.

Glendon Allvine Joins Fox Film Corporation

Glendon Allvine, now at the Colony Theatre, New York, has resigned to join the Fox Film Corporation. He leaves Saturday for the Fox studio in Hollywood on an assignment from Winfield R. Sheehan.

"Green Grass Widows" Is Title of "Grass Widows"

"Grass Widows," one of the 24 Tiffany features to be delivered for the 1927-1928 season, has been changed to "Green Grass Widows."

Quigley Vice-President Vitaphone Corporation

C. E. QUIGLEY, New York attorney, was last week elected to the office of vice-president of the Vitaphone Corporation. He has served, for approximately ten years, the Western Electric Company as assistant general attorney in which capacity he was also connected with the Graybar Electric Company. For the past year he has been general attorney for the Electrical Research Products, Inc., the licensor of the Vitaphone Corporation. He assumes his new duties immediately with headquarters at the Warner Bros. home office.

Marmont Arrives in N. Y. for Gotham Appearance

Percy Marmont arrived in New York this week after a sojourn of six months in his native England. He will remain in the metropolis but a few days as he leaves shortly for California, where he will commence working in "The Fruit of Divorce," the first of a series of pictures which he has agreed to make for Gotham Productions. The continuity for the screen play has already been prepared by R. William Neill and the final approval of the star is all that is required before actually starting the cameras, which work has been tentatively set for October 15th. Gotham advises that in all probability Mae Busch will have the feminine lead, and that the direction will be in the hands of R. William Neill. The story is an original by Leon De Costa.

Three Paramount-Christie Comedies for November

"Easy Curves," with Billy Dooley, "Ocean Blues,' with Jimmie Adams, and "Mad Scrambles," featuring Neal Burns, comprise the three Christie comedies which Paramount will release during November, on the 12th, 19th and 26th respectively.

Vera Stedman plays opposite Dooley, Ann Christy with Adams, Virginia Sale in the Burns comedy.

Charlotte, N. C., to Have Theatre Costing $325,000

A theatre project is under way by Nat L. Royster of Charlotte, N. C., to build a theatre seating 2,500 persons to be paid for by public subscription. The cost will be about $325,000 and tentative plans have been drawn by Lockwood, Poundstone and C. K. Howell, architects, Atlanta, Ga.

Tiffany Finishing Third Dimension Production

TIFFANY'S special production made in the third dimension will be showing on screens about January 1st, 1928. The finishing touches are now being made for the completion of the picture which for the first time utilizes the invention of Emil Burkhardt and his brother, Jacques. Officials of Tiffany have seen several reels of the production photographed in the third dimension and are highly enthusiastic. A special showing of the picture will be held some time in the future before a specially invited audience.

First run theatres generally have made excellent use of prepared advertising material in exploiting their presentations of "What Price Glory." The above illustrations reproduce newspaper ads representing some of the most effective displays featuring this attraction. The ads illustrated were used by the following: Imperial, Charlotte; Lyric, Birmingham; Palace, New Orleans; Fox theatre, Philadelphia; Capitol, Cincinnati.

STYLE SHOW STAGE SETTING

Style Show a Sell Out

Cooperative Attraction Presented at Advanced Prices Draws Crowds to Carolina in Greenville

THIS is the season of fashion revues in the picture theatres, and the results so far sustain and even heighten the prestige of this form of cooperative showmanship. Those theatres, most of which are of the large downtown type, staging style shows as regular annual attractions in connection with some local merchant, provided bigger and better revues this fall, while many of the smaller houses not committed to an annual event of this sort have dipped into the enterprise with profit to themselves and their associates in the venture.

One of the most successful of the recent style revues took place at the Carolina theatre, Greenville, S. C., managed by Roy L. Smart, who took entire charge of the details of promoting, planning and executing a stage attraction which gave the Carolina one of its best recent drawing cards and the Carolina theatregoers a show that struck the popular fancy.

Presented at advanced prices, the show played to big business at the Carolina.

Billboard Stage Set

The Carolina fashion revue was sponsored by the Meyers-Arnold Co., Greenville department store, who furnished the models and paid the cost of the billboard stage set in which the entertainment features and wearing apparel were exhibited.

The revue was presented in four scenes. The stage setting featured a billboard showing the Meyers-Arnold Co., ad with an oval on one end opening on a platform with stairs leading to the floor of the stage. The set trees were gnarled oaks, decorated with vari-colored balloons inflated to various sizes. Fall leaves fluttered down across the scene.

The first scene opened with a novelty dance. At the conclusion of the dance lights were turned up with the girls bowing toward the oval panel in the billboard which opened on curtains behind the oval. These curtains parted and the first model appeared.

Behind the model was a box draped in gold cloth. After a moment's pause, she stepped through the opening and posed on the platform in front, displaying her shoes and hosiery in particular. As she walked down the steps, the organ played softly until she had crossed the front of the stage where she again posed before taking a seat on the rustic bench. Other models followed in a similar manner.

Introduces Vaudeville Act

Scene Two was a novelty musical number with Turk McBee, Jr., at the xylophones and Morris Nelso, Yodler—both minstrel stars who are rehearsing a vaudeville act.

Scene Three opened with a six-year-old girl dressed in a gold hat and bodice made of a hat box, high stockings and gold slippers. She came on the stage holding a silver staff and strutting across to stage center where she dropped her staff and did a butterfly dance and then a Charleston. This number was followed by the appearance of the models in a display of evening dresses.

Scene Four opened with nine young women dressed in pajamas, negligees and boudoir slippers—before a black drape and each holding a lighted candle. As the organist played "Goodnight, Ladies" the lights were gradually brought up to about half full lights.

FIRST NATIONAL has arranged a national tie-up with the Postal Telegraph in the interests of "The Patent Leather Kid." The arrangement will result in the display of special cards featuring the picture at agencies throughout the country. The display card reproduces two scene stills from the picture and four congratulatory wires, reproduced on actual Postal blanks.

MANAGER E. R. ROGERS, of the Tivoli Theatre in Chattanooga, Tenn., devised a neat tie-up line for featuring his showing of "A Gentleman of Paris," during the celebration in honor of Colonel Lindbergh's visit to the city. He featured the line "Greetings to Colonel Lindbergh from another important arrival who is also a Gentleman of Paris," on a small herald.

TAKING advantage of the Ask-Me-Another questionnaire craze then sweeping Lafayette, a college town in Indiana, Manager Hunter, of the Luna Theatre, there, published a questionnaire in the college newspaper to help publicize his showing of "The Big Parade." Passes were offered as prizes for correct answers to questions concerning the name of the director, lead, author, etc., of the picture.

MANAGER J. P. HARRISON, of the Hippodrome Theatre, Waco, Tex., had a Big Parade of Chevrolet automobiles as a street demonstration to attract notice to his presentation of "The Big Parade." The stunt was staged by the local agency, which furnished 30 cars and a 25-piece band to traverse the streets displaying banners featuring the Chevrolet and the Hippodrome show.

W. F. BROCK, manager of the Rialto Theatre at Chattanooga, Tenn., received some excellent cooperation from the art departments of all the High Schools by arranging for a map sketching contest in connection with his showing of "Nevada."

C. D. HAUG, manager of the Gillioz Theatre, Springfield, Ohio, built a circus week around the importance of peanuts in "Painting the Town." He used a frontal display of the circus type, with banners painted on muslin, balloons and sundry novelties making up the decoration.

WITH the cooperation of the local Liberty magazine dealer, Assistant Manager Walter L. Morris, of the Plaza Theatre, Asheville, N. C., obtained valuable publicity for "The Prince of Headwaiters." The magazine dealer pasted heralds on the front covers of the current issue of the magazine. These pasters featured the line "You've read the story in Liberty—Now see Lewis Stone in 'The Prince of Headwaiters' at the Plaza."

W. H. BERGEMANN, manager of the Strand Theatre, Ft. Dodge, Ia., found an excellent bit of exploitation for "Naughty But Nice" when he bought up a lot of lollipops which he tagged and distributed. The tag was red cardboard about 1½ by 3 inches, tied with a red string to the lollipop. The message on the card read: "This Is Naughty But Awfully Nice! See Colleen Moore in 'Naughty But Nice,' Strand, starting Monday."

A ballyhoo for a western, "The Circus Ace," starring Tom Mix, used by Manager Charles J. Jones in the lobby of the Colonial theatre, Harrisburg, Pa.

Newspaper and 37 Merchants Aid Brown's "Dance Magic" Stunt

GEORGE E. BROWN, manager of the State Theatre, Raleigh, N. C., has just concluded another treasure hunt, but one with a different angle of operation. Results were what were sought in this case, and the short cut method was used with practically no attendant costs.

The State Theatre tied up with the Raleigh Times, and the joint cooperation resulted in two double trucks breaking in one edition and enlisting 37 of the leading merchants in the Capitol City. This is the first time merchants in Raleigh have cooperated to any great extent in film exploitation.

The first flash landed on the front page of the Times four days ahead of the hunt which was staged to boost the box office receipts for "Dance Magic." The opening story was carried at the top of the page in bold face type, the entire story being indented. Other stories made front page throughout the campaign.

On the day before the hunt began, two double trucks appeared, carrying the ads of 37 merchants and carrying details of how the money, $50.00 in gold, was to be found. The scheme had been carefully worked out, and a vacant lot utilized for the final stopping point in the race. Having the hunt end in a vacant lot prevented any claims for damage to merchandise being filed. Each page of the double trucks carried two-inch streamers and complete details of the hunt. Each advertisement was numbered and indicated the progression of stops in the race.

One sheet card, advertising the attraction at the State and the play dates, were posted in each of the 37 windows, and also carried one clue word which, when all were assembled to the number of 37, completed a sentence of 27 words exactly locating the hidden gold. In order to prevent short cutting and cooperative hunting by groups, certain key words were withheld until exactly the minute the contest was announced to begin. The start was in front of the State Theatre.

Almost every conceivable form of locomotion was utilized by the hundreds who took part. The prize winner, although not the first to reach the field, made the 37 stops and drove a half mile to the field in less than 28 minutes. A front page story announced the winner. All merchants participating were well pleased, and still are talking about it.

Novel Presentation Stunt for "Cat and Canary"

A novel presentation, which put the audience in an appropriately spooky mood for the picture, was used for "The Cat and the Canary" at the St. Francis Theatre, San Francisco. With the orchestra playing the overture, all lights were turned out and a large cat, carrying a caged canary, slunk acrosss the stage in a green spot. Just before the cat exited, a flash-light powder, set off by an electric switch, was exploded in the center of the stage, and immedately the first subtitle of the picture hit the screen. Not even the main title was used.

Offers Cut Rates to Street Car Ticket Holders

Manager H. L. Hartman, of the New California Theatre, in San Diego, Cal., is making use of a novel medium of advertising through a tie-up with the electric railway company of that city, which uses a weekly pass plan on its lines, the passes costing $1.00 for an entire week. Mr. Hartman has had printed upon these passes an offer to honor the passes to the extent of 10 cents on adult admissions and 5 cents on children's tickets, upon showing the passes at the box office.

Owners of Black Cats See Show Free at Liberty

An exploitation stunt, that appealed greatly to the youngsters of Beaumont, Texas, and had a "human interest" quality that won it prominence in the newspapers, was executed by Manager F. W. Putnam, of the Liberty Theatre, in connection with his showing of "The Cat and the Canary."

Putnam offered admission free to any youngster bringing to a special matinee a black cat or kitten. He had a large cage built in the lobby, where the cats were checked while their owners were looking at the show.

Putnam insisted on black cats only as an admission ticket to his matinee. The event was well patronized, and black cats were at a premium, youngsters who did not own one of their own scurried out to borrow one for the occasion. The cats appeared to enjoy their popularity, particularly when they became the center of interest as occupants of the fancily decorated "check room" in the lobby of the Liberty.

Amos Uses "Shadow Sign" to Exploit Underworld"

Manager Chas. H. Amos obtained good results on a stunt that was worked nights for "Underworld" at the Florida Theatre, Jacksonville.

The stunt was worked with a spotlight with a small metal hand and arm in front of the condenser on the spot—the arm and hand being forty feet long when projected on the building. The building showing the shadow was directly opposite the Florida Theatre.

This stunt was used for a week without any copy whatsoever. Then, a few days before play date, a banner was hung on the building reading, "Florida—Mon., Tues., Wed.,—Underworld."

Key City Reports

New York City

WITH its array of "names," a different presentation policy, full columns of advertising in the New York dailies, what could almost be called a new Capitol theatre occupied the centre of Broadway's stage last week. The feature picture was "The Road to Romance" but very strong vaudeville talent was billed way over the picture and when the shekels were counted for the week they were found to be just about $5,000 short of $100,000—a new high record for the Capitol.

Even with the above strong counter attraction but a block away, the Roxy did nicely over the $100,000 mark with "The Gay Retreat." The customers seemed to find plenty in this one for dull cares. The Roxy has consistently been grossing well over the above mark and this means that S. L. Rothafel and all his aides are wearing satisfied smiles.

Next in line for honors of the week, when the size of the house is taken into consideration, is "The Jazz Singer" at Warners. This show has made a decided hit with both trade and public and is certainly in for a long run. Still on the subject of honors and small theatres, "Wings" at the Criterion must come in for its share of glory. This picture is still standing them up; also "Sunrise" at the Times Square, where this picture and the Mussolini Movietone are going great guns.

While the Paramount enjoyed a fair gate with "We're All Gamblers" and an average Publix presentation, this house undoubtedly felt the pull at the other end of the street.

The Strand held up very well with "American Beauty," a Billie Dove vehicle, and while the Rivoli is doing nicely with "Fireman Save My Child" this picture cannot hope to equal the record of its predecessor, "Underworld."

At the present time "The King of Kings is the daddy of them all on Broadway and is drawing steady patronage. The latter can also be said for "The Student Prince," at the Astor. Universal's offering, "Surrender," at the Colony, along with the Riesenfeld presentation, get by with a fair week and this also goes for the Embassy with "The Garden of Allah." After a very fair run of five weeks "The Magic Flame" went out of the Rialto and was followed with "Jesse James." The latter opened with a bang. First National's "Patent Leather Kid" is still drawing heavily at the Globe.

Chicago

TOTAL box office receipts for theatres located in the Chicago district appeared to be somewhat below those of the same period last year, with the large de luxe theatres holding up better than the medium-sized and small neighborhood houses.

"The Magic Flame" opened its extended run at McVickers' Theatre to good business while at the Roosevelt, "Annie Laurie" wound up its run, box office receipts being a little smaller than the previous week. The Chicago had as its feature picture "Shanghai Bound" and two stage shows, "Spitalny's orchestral production "Rigoletto" and "Tokio Blues" the bill proving a good business getter. "What Price Glory" played its fifth week at the Monroe, and business continued so good that still further extension for its engagement is talked of. At the Orpheum "Sailor Izzy Murphy" and Vitaphone, drew well. The Oriental played to its usual big business with "Mockery" on the screen and Paul Ash and his Gang in "Flashes of Jazz."

At the Granada "East Side, West Side," Charles Kaley in "Sparkles and Spangles," the Loomis Twins in person, and Vitaphone, played to average business. "The Road to Romance" and, on the stage, Verne Buck and his band, headed the bill at the Sheridan for an average week. "The Big Parade" showed its drawing power at the Uptown, which had a big week. The Norshore, with "Smile, Brother, Smile" on the screen, with Al Kvale and his jazz collegians, and Miss Chicago in person, did a normal business.

On the southside the Tivoli had as its screen feature "Hula" and on the stage, Benny Kreuger and his jazz orchestra, the combination playing to fair crowds. The beautiful Avalon Theatre offered "After Midnight" as its screen attraction, and on the stage Buddy Fisher and his band. Vitaphone completed the bill which brought in normal business. "East Side, West Side" was the offering at the Capitol, and Del Delbridge and his Merrymakers occupied the stage, Vitaphone completing the program, business being about average.

St. Louis

THE first-run and neighborhood theatres of St. Louis during the past week showed recovery from the slump caused by the tornado of September 29, and everything considered it may go down into history as a fairly good seven-day period. But, naturally, no receipt records were broken. But with Whiteman and his band ($10,500 per week, so they say) perhaps some new marks may be set shortly.

At the Missouri Theatre Richard Dix in "Shanghai Bound" was the big feature attraction, and it did very nicely.

The St. Louis Theatre, Grand Boulevard and Morgan St., had on its screen Leatrice Joy in "The Angel of Broadway." It did good business.

The Ambassador Theatre featured on its screen "Underworld" and it proved a very popular attraction.

At Loew's State Theatre, Ramon Navarro was the hero in the thriller "The Road to Romance."

The Grand Opera House's screen offering was "Rose of Kildare," while down at the Orpheum Theatre, in conjunction with the usual vaudeville bill, there was shown on the screen a comedy "A Harp in Hock."

Boston

BOSTON'S theatrical season is now in full swing and all of the down town houses report good business for the past week. Spotty business of previous weeks has given way to steady business throughout last week.

"Camille" at the Metropolitan completed the week with one of the best grosses of 1927. The surrounding presentation acts were of French character and the week's bill was well received. The Metropolitan has been enjoying an uninterrupted season of good business.

"Annie Laurie" at Loew's State Theatre gives Boston that film for the first time at popular prices and reports a heavy week's gross. Jaques Renard and his orchestra supply the music for the presentation number.

"The Cat and the Canary" is being shown simultaneously at four of the Paramount theatres, the Washington street Olympia, Fenway, Capitol and Scollay Square Olympia. Simultaneous showing of a film at these four houses is growing more popular, judging from the frequency with which it is being done.

"Potemkin," the Russian film, and "Manon Lescaut" make up a double feature road show which is being given at Symphony Hall. That Boston is ripe for showing of the French classics is best proven by the box office figures where these films are being shown.

Other films at down houses reporting good receipts are "The Road to Romance" at Loew's Orpheum, "The Bush Leaguer" and "The Girl from Gay Paree" at the twin houses, Modern and Beacon Theatres; a triple feature at the Bowdoin which includes "The Coward," "By Whose Hand" and "Queens Wild;" "The Chinese Parrot" at the Keith-Albee Boston; "The Way of All Flesh' and "Smile, Brother, Smile" at the University and "We're All Gamblers" at the Exeter.

Philadelphia

COOLER weather brought the best crowds of the past few weeks to the downtown motion picture houses.

The Stanley Theatre, with Richard Dix in "Shanghai Bound," played to good patronage all week. The main presentation act was Beth Beri, a former Ziegfeld star, in "A Night of Follies." She was supported by a company of 25. Considerable publicity was gained for Miss Beri through a lone flight in an aeroplane from Baltimore to Philadelphia at the opening of her engagement.

The Stanton continues to draw big crowds with "The Big Parade" in spite of its previous run at the Aldine.

"Cheating Cheaters" with Betty Compson and Kenneth Harlan at the Arcadia enjoyed a fairly good week.

The Karlton offering Florence Vidor in "One Woman to Another" played to audiences of fairly satisfactory sizes during the week.

"The Way of All Flesh," starring Emil Jannings at the Victoria, drew very good business and proved the popularity of the star.

"Hard Boiled Haggerty," a repeat from the Stanley, had a successful week at the Victoria.

The Globe got along nicely for the week with George Sidney and Charlie Murray in the "Life of Riley."

The Fox offered a revival of a John Gilbert production, "Honor First," to good patronage all week. The feature was augmented by Frank Cornwell's Crusaders, Beatrice Belkin, a member of "Roxy's Radio Gang," and Jans and Whalen, former musical comedy stars. An added feature was a "Movietone" production of Babe Ruth and the Belmont Races.

San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO'S first run motion picture theatres, generally, report another good week in spite of the hot weather experienced for a few days. The West Coast Theatres, in this section, under the able management of A. M. Belles, have been doing exceptionally well and all are surprised how these houses do so well in spite of adverse weather, holidays, etc.

"Ben Hur," at the California Theatre, played its last and fourth week to crowded houses, especially in the evenings. The "Cat and the Canary" played its third and final week to well filled houses at the St. Francis Theatre last week. The idea of the "spooks" was played up and attracted many. "The Woman on Trial," together with the featuring of Bankcoff and Cannon on the stage, filled the Granada Theatre.

Adolphe Menjou, always popular in this section, proved very popular in "A Gentleman of Paris," last week at the Warfield Theatre. The stage act also drawing many to the theatre, "Nevada," shown at the Imperial Theatre proved fairly popular, a great many being attracted by the low price for first runs.

The Golden Gate Theatre was more than packed because of the exceptional vaudeville acts and the first run picture, "The Head Waiter," featured. At the Pantages Theatre, "Colleen" led the performance together with a road show headed by Nicholas and Company.

In the residential houses, Nat Holt did well in the evenings with "Broadway Nights" on the screen and a musical comedy, "The Kentucky Mountaineer." "Tillie The Toiler" attracted many to the Coliseum theatre and the Alexandria Theatre did fair with "The Better 'Ole." "The Irish Girl" attracted many to the Casino Theatre.

Los Angeles

"LOVES OF CARMEN," which opened last week with the usual blaze of lights, stars and crowds, is popular at Carthay Circle. The atmospheric prologue, 'Spain," is receiving very favorable comment.

Another big opening which brought out the motion picture fans was that of "Two Arabian Knights" at the Million Dollar. The picture follows "Ben Hur" and promises to carry on the good work at the box office.

Over a half million persons have seen "The King of Kings" at Grauman's Chinese and it is believed that by the time that picture ends its run here, all local attendance records will be broken. It is announced that November 2nd is the date set for the premier showing of Douglas Fairbanks' "The Gaucho."

"The Fair Co-ed" went over big at the Metropolitan. Great interest was shown in the picture as most of the scenes were made on a local campus and popular high school and college students were used in the picture.

Abe Lyman continues to attract large crowds to the Boulevard. "The Chinese Parrot" did not check up so well as a drawing power at the box office.

Owing to the popularity of "Camille" at the Criterion Theatre, it was held over for a fifth week and caused the postponement of "The Cat and the Canary," which was booked.

"American Beauty" at Loew's State was satisfactory and the combination of Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes made up for a whole lot.

Kansas City

WITH legitimate theatres going full blast in Kansas City this week, little difference was noticed in the average attendance at down town first run houses.

At the Newman Lillian Gish in "Annie Laurie" played to a good attendance all week, while "Underworld" at the Royal continued on its second week at a money-making pace.

The only Tunney-Dempsey fight pictures in town at the Globe continued to draw well, the featuring picture being "The Bush Leaguer."

"Cameo Kirby" at the Pantages held up good all week, but did not quite come up to the usual average in attendance. "Les Miserables" played its second week at the Liberty and attracted a good attendance.

Minneapolis

BUSINESS is not all that could be desired in Minneapolis due to the strike. Two theatre bombings in the Twin Cities this week naturally made the public a bit nervous, but with the police giving the best protection possible, the crowds came anyway.

"Chang" at the Strand showed to fine audiences, and it was necessary to keep this picture over for a second week. John Barrymore in "When a Man Loves" was a happy choice for the State, as the Vitaphone accompaniment helped the audience to overlook the fact that the State's regular orchestra was on strike. At the Garrick "The Big Parade" held over for a second big week. Thomas Meighan did a fair business at the Lyric in "We're All Gamblers," and the Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures moved into the Grand with excellent results. Tom Mix in "Silver Valley" was a fine box office attraction at Pantages, as he always is, and Rudolph Schildkraut in "A Harp in Hock" was an attractive offering at the Hennepin-Orpheum. Neighboring houses experienced business that ranged from fair to good, with such pictures as "Resurrection," "Firemen, Save My Child," and "The Blood Ship" showing at the Loring, Lagoon, Rialto and Lyndale.

Cleveland

FOR no particular or accountable reason, very few of the first-run theatres had anything very good to say about business for the week just concluded. Those which had good business drew the crowds on the merits of something other than the screen attraction. Legitimate theatre competition was not extraordinary. Weather conditions were fair.

"Beau Geste" closed the second week of its first showing at popular prices at the Stillman with just a fair average. "Firemen, Save My Child," surrounded by presentations and novelties, just got by at the Allen. The State did very well with "Becky" and an unusually good vaudeville bill. "Swim, Girl, Swim," a very likable picture, was fortunate to be on the same bill with Beatrice Lillie, and consequently made a very good box office record at Keith's Palace. "Chang" closed a two weeks' engagement at the Cameo with satisfactory but not unusual results. The Hippodrome did very nicely with "Alias the Lone Wolf" and a good vaudeville program with Phil Spitalny and his band offering an original presentation. Keith's East 105th St. had a fair week with "The Joy Girl" as the feature attraction. "The Girl from Rio" showed satisfactory results during its week's engagement at the Monarch. The Little Theatre of the Movies had a fair week with "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari." "The Big Parade" played its fourth local engagement last week at the Park. This was the seventeenth week for the picture and business was just fair. Outskirt houses report business below average.

Milwaukee

THE weather last week and not the features must be held accountable for box office receipts. The week started poorly on Saturday last, but business picked up a little toward the middle of the week's run. "The Cat and the Canary" at the Alhambra was said to have broken house records at the beginning of its run. "Shanghai Bound" drew fairly good crowds to the Wisconsin. "Annie Laurie" at the Merrill played to fair houses. "Underworld" at the Strand shared about the same fate, drawing only fair business. "The Missing Link at the Garden did average business for the week. The Davidson offered another week of cinema, this time offering the "Red Kimono." Here too business was only fair.

Business at the outlying theatres was a little more brisk throughout the entire week. "We're All Gamblers" was featured at the Uptown and Oriental and business here was good. The Modjeska and Tower each offering two acts of vaudeville together with "Firemen, Save My Child" found business satisfactory. "After Midnight" brought in fairly good receipts at the Savoy, Tivoli and Milwaukee theatres. "Is Zat So?" had a very gratifying run at the Venetian.

Albany

With [illegible] the downtown theatres in Albany enjoyed better than normal business last week, with "Hula" the outstanding feature from the box office standpoint. At the Ritz, "Body and Soul" commanded plenty of attention, and the theatre was well filled each day throughout the week. At the Leland "Captain Salvation" opened up to bigger business on the first day than did "The Life of Riley" on the previous week, but did not stand up during the entire week, apparently failing to appeal to women, and it could not be classed, at least as far as Albany is concerned, as a big money getter. The posters used in connection with the picture did not apparently appeal to women, for many were seen to stop and look these over and then continue on their way to some other theatre. "Rose of the Bowery" opened big at the Clinton Square theatre and by Tuesday there was a pick up over the previous day at the matinee as well as the evening shows. The picture seemed to catch the popular fancy. Proctor's Grand is still placing considerable stress on the picture end of its program and played up "The Desired Woman" in a way that brought business to the house. Neighborhood theatres are reporting good business in Albany. At the Troy theatre, "The Big Parade" had all other houses guessing and it became necessary on some evenings to stop the sale of tickets over considerable periods. The picture also drew heavily from the surrounding section. There was a big turn out at the Lincoln all through the week for "The Life of Riley."

Tampa

LAST week was Manager Carroll's "Discovery Week," in which about 40 local acts were given try-outs, with the winners securing a week's engagement at a fat salary, and which helped out the draw at the Tampa. "Breakfast at Sunrise" was the screen feature for the first four days and "A Gentleman of Paris" held the spot for the last three. Both pictures brought very good receipts all week.

The Victory had a wonderful week with

"Ben Hur." The matinee Friday was one of the largest on record with 1100 teachers and scholars in addition to the regular business.

The Strand put over some weird advertising to sell the weird feature "Metropolis," and it brought home the bacon with three excellent days. "Sally in Our Alley" and "Figures Don't Lie" both did nicely, each being featured for two days.

Manager McLaughlin, of the Franklin, had the week's hard luck. He has been giving a second run to some of the features shown by the Tampa. Last week he had "Annie Laurie" for two days. "The Great Mail Robbery" and "Foreign Devils," which were featured the rest of the week, pulled about the average business.

Salt Lake City

THOUGH the past week was both State Fair and Mormon Conference Week in this city with a great deal of attention being attracted to the fair and the special conference meetings, still the motion picture houses did an exceptionally good business as a rule. A great number of visitors were in town from the surrounding territory.

The new Capitol Theatre here finished up its second week in a highly successful manner. Capacity houses were had every night during the showing of "Firemen, Save My Child," and the Fanchon and Marco stage presentation of "Pep Idea," which was also a big drawing card.

The Paramount Empress had a very good week due to the feature picture "The Magic Flame." The Paramount Empress also offered a stage presentation in the form of a chorus of twenty-five voices.

During the week's run of "Hard Boiled Haggerty" business has been a little above the average, which has been very good of late, according to reports from the management. Vaudeville is also offered at this house.

"The Road to Romance" topped the vaudeville bill at the Pantages of this city with the regular good attendance being the result.

Banister the Crystal Gazer was billed as the big attraction at the American this past week with the feature picture being "Silk Stockings," which is reported to have gone over in a favorable fashion.

The Gem Theatre management offered an unusually attractive program consisting of "Fighting Love," which proved to be a big hit, and also "A Dog's Life," which was a great drawing card.

"The Beloved Rogue" was shown as a second run at the Rialto and capacity houses were enjoyed.

The second run of "The Cat and the Canary" did exceptionally good business for the Star Theatre here.

Tieups are being arranged with the prominent drug stores and with the street car company here of late by several of the motion picture companies in addition to the regular forms of exploitation.

Ottawa

PLENTY of film variety and plenty of opposition was the situation during the week of October 10 in Ottawa, Ontario, but the exhibitors held their own, with one exception. The counter-attractions included a Rotary club comic opera, Galli-Curci, football games and a stock company.

"Annie Laurie" registered substantial business at the Regent, and all classes of patrons liked it. The first chapter of the second "Collegians" also helped here immensely.

Full houses every night saw "Shanghai Bound" at B. F. Keith's Theatre, which seats 2,600, and Richard Dix made more friends with this melodrama.

The flappers flocked to the Centre Theatre to see what it was all about in "Naughty But Nice" and they enjoyed it.

The Imperial Theatre offered "Honor First," a re-issue starring John Gilbert, but many of the regular theatre-goers passed it up, largely because they do not care for a re-hash.

The rebuilt Rex Theatre attracted big crowds with the second run of "The Prince of Tempters," to which had been added a Will Rogers reel, comedy, local vaudeville, and a special orchestra.

Second run of "Casey at the Bat" drew the neighborhood to the Columbia Theatre. These suburban houses are packing them in with heavy and varied bills.

Second run of "Mare Nostrum" was also good at the Fern Theatre after the kids got over their fright at the name.

"The Loves of Sunya" showed steady business at the enlarged Laurier Theatre, Hull.

"Orchids and Ermine," with Colleen Moore, was a money-maker at the Eden Theatre in Hull, again thanks to her name.

Baltimore

THREE events in Baltimore during the week beginning Monday, October 10, gave a set-back to business. They included the Fair of the Iron Horse, of the Ohio Railroad, at Halethorpe, the races and the football game between Notre Dame and Navy on Saturday. It is estimated than on Saturday 53,000 persons attended the game, 110,000 attended the Iron Horse, and that, coupled with a severe rainstorm Wednesday night, put a severe crimp in the movie business.

Matinees were hurt all during the week, so the following notations on business done concerns nights only.

"The Kid Sister," with five acts of vaudeville, went over very good at Keith's Hippodrome, while "Shanghaied," with five acts of vaudeville, did pretty good business at the Whitehurst's Gardens. Good business was done also at the Metropolitan with Rin-Tin-Tin in "Jaws of Steel," and Vitaphone presentations.

At the Rivoli, "The Fighting Eagle," together with songs by Betty and Jimmy Morgan, drew them in good. At Loew's Valencia, the second week for "The Way of All Flesh," proved good as did "Swim, Girl, Swim," at the Century with J. Humbird Duffey's men's chorus; a very good business was done with "Breakfast at Sunrise" at the Stanley.

"Singed" went over faily well at the New Theatre with a stage act, while at the Plaza Theatre, a small house in the business section, "The Red Kimona," was given its first run for men only with a hygiene lecture. Attendance was so good it was held for two days during the following week.

Central Pennsylvania

WAR pictures were predominating among the attractions in the Harrisburg theatres for the week, and continued to display pulling power as viewed from the box office. "Two Arabian Knights," at Loew's Regent, did well, speaking both financially and artistically.

At the Victoria, which was given over for the week to Harrisburg Post, No. 27, of the American Legion, the war atmosphere also was maintained, not only in the feature play, "Barbed Wire," but in picturesque lobby displays. As an added attraction of particular local value the program included motion pictures of the members of the Harrisburg Chamber of Commerce on their annual four-day tour of other cities. The business done was average.

Another war play was shown at the Russell, where "What Price Glory" was successfully repeated notwithstanding it had been on the screen at two other Harrisburg theatres within the last two months.

In lighter vein was "Smile, Brother, Smile," with Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill, at the Colonial. This show was especially well advertised by Manager Charley Jones, who put on several clever exploitation stunts during the week, and the financial returns were even more than satisfactory.

Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY had a quiet week in theatre bills these past seven days, the weather was perfect fall kind, and the regular movie fans were out, but there was nothing sensationally good on at any of the theatres.

The Criterion did a good business with "Swim, Girl, Swim," but this was augmented, probably, by the addition of Fred Hamm's Jazz Orchestra, which was advertised as much as was the picture.

"The Crystal Cup," at the Empress, received good press notices, and made business fair at this theatre.

"Out All Night" was voted good comedy at the Liberty, and stayed all week. An added attraction at this theatre, Moyer and his stage band, made business good.

"Tell It to Sweeney," at the Capitol Theatre the first part of the week, did an average business, more because of the stars than any merit of the picture. "Body and Soul" wasn't so good the last part of the week.

San Diego

"CAMILLE," the feature with which the Cabrillo, a West Coast house, was recently re-opened, went very fine during its two weeks' showing, drawing especially from those who like what might be called the classics in films. "The Magic Flame," which followed it, proved a splendid attraction from the box-office standpoint.

"The Big Parade," with the American Legion back of it, and providing a realistic prologue in which overseas men participated, was another recent good attraction at the Cabrillo.

At the New California Richard Dix in "Shanghai Bound" drew well, and this was followed by Constance Talmadge in "Breakfast at Sunrise," which also enjoyed good houses. Packed houses marked the showing of Reginald Denny in "Out All Night." Featuring the New California program for the week were the Sharp Sisters and their miramba band of 14 girls.

At the Plaza one of the best attractions in months was "The Country Doctor." The Vitaphone presentations at the Plaza are proving a permanent drawing card. "The Racing Romeo" found a ready welcome at the Superba.

Baltimore

(Previous Week)

THE Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company's "Fair of the Iron Horse," at Halethorpe, Md., near Baltimore, continued to cause a loss of patronage at the moving picture houses in Baltimore during the week beginning Monday, October 3, at the matinees, but, with the exception of a few houses, the buisness done at night was good, for there was a run of cold weather which brought patrons back to the movies.

Three houses which stood out with excellent business for the entire week included the Stanley with "Barbed Wire" and Beth Berri and a company of 45 in a revue; at Loew's Valencia "The Way of All Flesh," packed them in; and at Loew's Century Lon Chaney, always a big drawing card in Baltimore, did excellent business in "Mockery" with Van and Schenck on the same bill. The starring combination proved an excellent business getter. Also the week of October 3 marked the first anniversary of the Century, Valencia and Parkway under the regime of Loew's, Incorporated. This was played up in all advertisements and publicity.

"When a Man Loves" continued to prove a good business getter at night at Warners' Metropolitan, but the matinees were off. "Silk Stockings" was liked and played to good houses at night at the New Theatre with the matinees off.

Ben Lyon, former Baltimorean, in "High Hat," on the bill with five acts of family vaudeville played to good night business, with poor matinees.

18 EXCELLENT PICTURES 1927-28

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Smile, Brother, Smile"—First National, Karlton Theatre, Philadelphia

Public Ledger: "Since cracking 'The Poor Nut,' Mulhall has emerged from his shell into glaring spot-lighted popularity of stardom he so richly deserves. In 'Smile, Brother, Smile,' he's a star whether they bill him that or not. Mulhall at his best in a brand new and entirely different kind of traveling salesman story. Rattling good comedy."

Inquirer: "If you want to drive away blues, see 'Smile, Brother, Smile,' . . . Clever story . . . Laughter as well as surprise. Mulhall plays with breezy, bubbling effervescence."

Bulletin: "Breezy comedy with barrel of laughs and wisecracks. Mulhall gives bubbling interpretation of 'go-getter.'"

Record: "Something new in movies. . . Hilarious comedy. . . If you don't smile—and even laugh—while looking at it there's something wrong with you."

Evening Ledger: "Moves at brisk pace and contains generous quota of laughs. Mulhall's likable personality and ingratiating stage presence make him one of most popular of leading men."

"American Beauty"—First National, Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Amreican: "Girls will like this picture. Billie wears beautiful clothes beautifully. She has lovely face and divine figure, and looks really ravishing."

Mirror: "Light comedy-drama. . . . Miss Dove's ravishing beauty has never been photographed to more agreeable advantage. Billie 'emotes' with charming grace. Alice White excels as heroine's pal and accomplice. Margaret Livingston amuses. Hughes plays in his most reliable, heroic manner."

Herald-Tribune: "Full of displays of elaborate gowns, in a manner which is said to bring in women patrons in droves. It has exquisite and gracious presence of Miss Dove, one of indubitable beauties of screen."

World: "Miss Dove displays costumes in most decorative manner of her reputation for such scenes. Made up of fashion parade and love's young dream."

News: "Beauteous Billie Dove, exquisitely formed actress, in mixture of melodrama and slapstick. Splendid box office title."

Evening World: "Fashion parade, with Billie Dove doing most of parading in her inimitably beautiful manner. Billie something of an eyeful here. Not all fashion parade—it has its vein of comedy relief. Good entertainment, as will be attested when feature gets to outlying theatres."

Sun: "Pleasantly unpretentious comedy. Its main purpose is enhancement of beauty of Miss Dove, a beauty well worthy of such attention. Picture filled with clothes, fluffy, obviously expensive clothes, enough clothes to set home dressmaker in flutter of delight. Miss Dove in a succession of these charming garments."

Telegram: "Pictorially beautiful, gay in spirit. Billie one of most decorative ladies of screen."

Graphic: "Billie Dove grows more beautiful by reels."

"Camille"—First National, Metropolitan Theatre, Boston

Transcript: "Immortal romantic play has been brought before the camera with surprising allegiance to spirit of original. Lady of the Camelias was what Dumas made her, and as such she appears. Not a little of credit for glamorous and tragic charm of picture is due to Norma Talmadge, that very lovely veteran of many lovely parts. Her ability to absorb and make her own an individual character was never more apparent, nor persuasiveness of her own personality. Niblo's direction deft and discriminating. Good entertainment."

Traveler: "Norma Talmadge exquisitely beautiful. No one could have brought more grace and charm to sad-eyed little lady (Camille). Under Niblo's superb direction piece has retained all its wistful delicacy. Modern setting for this flowery gem adds beauty and splendor. Miss Talmadge gives most brilliant performance of her sparkling career. Roland scales heights in first big role."

Advertiser: "Best of screen 'Camilles'—most artistic and most pleasant to watch. Niblo invests it with atmosphere, with shimmering photography, and cunning camera angles. Excellently done, lighting impeccable, settings fine, direction suave, acting better than average."

American: "'Camille' an exceptional offering in each of varied requirements upon which success of picture, as a medium of entertainment, is judged. Lavishly mounted; costumes and settings are all on de luxe order. Superbly handled direction brings new laurels to Niblo."

Globe: "Norma Talmadge makes fascinating heroine, and her frocks are lovely. Roland, one of best of new heroes, gives extremely fine characterization."

Post: "Female fans will revel in Norma Talmadge's modern version of 'Camille,' exclaiming in delight at Norma's 1927 wardrobe; thrilling vicariously at torrid love scenes and sobbing softly at sad sequences. Has been given sumptuous settings, effective photography and many racy and spicy touches. Miss Talmadge a lovely picture throughout, and takes care of her emotional moments neatly and effectively. Roland can certainly put over his love scenes."

"The Road to Romance"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York City

Mirror: "From Student Prince to Caballero is character metamorphosis Novarro undergoes to small boys' delight in 'The Road to Romance," a ripsnorting tale of love enfired by Spanish temperaments, menaced by piratic intrigue. . . . Story hums with action. Capitalizes letters, box-office."

American: "Best of pictures on view this week. Story rich in plot, action and romance. Novarro gives excellent performance. Marceline Day lovely. Will insure fine hour's entertainment."

Telegraph: "Production of true merit. Robertson has scored another success. As for acting, bouquets should be equally distributed. Novarro proves diverting in swashbuckling role. Marceline Day so lovely that we don't blame Ramon for enduring so many cinema hardships to win her."

Telegram: "First rate and engaging version of Conrad novel. . . . colorful tale of bad pirates and good senoritas. D'Arcy once more achieved supreme reward of good villain by drawing vigorous hisses."

Sun: "Pirates, jolly story-book pirates with bandanna-bound heads and tendency to play guitar between jobs, swarm over screen as picturesque background for Novarro and Marceline Day."

Journal: "Striking backgrounds and thrilling sea fights. Romantic tale, well directed by Robertson. Miss Day decorative and Novarro does card tricks, makes love and fights with usual engaging ability."

World: "Made by Robertson with this competent director's propensity for pictorial beauty strong upon it. It was out of the Conrad-Hueffer narrative of love-making along pirate shores of island in West Indies that Robertson carved his film. He has done splendidly with it, and has seen to it that Novarro gives best that is in him."

"Jesse James"—Paramount, Rialto Theatre, New York City

American: "'Jesse James' rode into Rialto—and received rousing welcome. . . . Every boy from Maine to California is versed in activities of Jesse James, and so picture is assured of ready-made audience. . . . Seldom do we see such exquisite camera work. Thomson makes interesting Jesse James and excellent horseman."

Times: "Thomson a performer of no mean ability, a young man who possesses certain style of delivering his hectic exploits. . . . Nora Lane quite captivating and that reliable and competent actor, Montagu Love, does well.

Daily News: "Dashing, galloping, gory picturization of life of famous outlaw of South. Film leaps through seven reels, teeming with action. Nora Lane, Thomson's leading lady, and mighty prepossessing one."

Morning Telegraph: "Thomson makes handsome, dashing and daring Jesse, while Silver King is claimed to be an equal to Old Hickory, Jesse's famous mount."

Herald-Tribune: "Vastly entertaining, fast-moving and melodramatically exciting glorification of those exploits of epic outlaw that dime novels used to describe. Done in rapid-fire manner."

Daily Mirror: "Thmoson proves to be young man of no mean attraction. Good cinema."

Journal: "For action, thrilling riding and outdoor stuff, 'Jesse James' is great entertainment. Thomson . . . does combination Mix and Fairbanks, besides which he has pleasing personality and rides, to coin a phrase, like a streak. 'Jesse James' is the kind of Westerner that will make small boys stay for second and third performance."

Sun: "As usual in Thomson works, there are truly remarkable scenes of plains and cloud banks. And riding of Thomson is uncanny. Production, as a whole, is quite pleasing to the eye. . . ."

Evening Telegram: "Contains some exciting stuff which will provide, unless we are mistaken, wide-eyed afternoons for several million young Americans. . . . Thomson, heretofore known in New York only as favorite cowboy star of outlands, proves to be excellent screen bandit. Photography excellent. If there was a 'super-Western,' as these films are known in trade circles, 'Jesse James' is it. . . ."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Olympic Theatre, Watertown, N. Y.

"For two years we have waited for the Fox film version and it was worth waiting for. Packed theatre fairly shouted its approval. Marked by one of greatest performances ever flashed upon screen, that of McLaglen."

"What Price Glory"—Fox Films, Broadway Theatre, Butte, Montana

Miner: "One of few really great films to be exhibited in Butte. A mastery displayed in offering, an artistry so beautifully interwoven in story . . . as to impel admiration for this stellar production."

"Surrender"—Universal Pictures, Colony Theatre, New York City

Evening Journal: "Sloman has used such intelligence and restraint that 'Surrender' is best film of week. . . . Mosjukine shows delicate sense of humor and understanding. Mary really lovely and settings extremely effective."

Morning Telegraph: "Mary Philbin, in role of Lea Lyon, acts well and looks divine."

Daily News: "Highly entertaining melodrama."

American: "Director did good job. Some beautiful and inspiring scenes, and some intensely dramatic sequences. Much to recommend 'Surrender.' Has thrills and suspense."

Sun: "Serious and conscientiously directed story. Miss Philbin gives creditable performance of difficult role. . . . Mosjukine's appearance a triumph for Hollywood. His work has improved amazingly."

Herald-Tribune: "Never has Miss Philbin been so alluring. . . . Mosjukine perfect in princely roles."

Alexander Korda will direct Billie Dove in the screen version of a Saturday Evening Post story by Juliet Wilbur Timpkins entitled "Once There Was a Princess." Camera work is scheduled to start November 1st. Carey Wilson is doing the adaptation.

George Cooper and Harry Earl have been added to the cast of "Baby Mine," the new M-G-M comedy which Robert Z. Leonard is directing.

Jack Lloyd is the principal comedian in "Shootin' Wild," a new Educational comedy of the Cameo brand, which is on this month's schedule of releases.

"Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath" will be the next First National vehicle co-featuring Jack Mulhall and Dorothy Mackaill. Eddie Cline has been signed to wield the megaphone.

Elizabeth Meehan will prepare the screen adaptation of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," in which Lon Chaney will star under Herbert Brenon's direction.

Alfred Santell will produce the forthcoming Richard Barthelmess vehicle from First National, "The Little Shepperd of Kingdom Come." As soon as Barthelmess has finished "The Noose," the new production will get under way under Santell's direction.

William Fairbanks has been cast for "The Dog of War," in which Flash, M-G-M's new canine star, makes his screen debut. The film is now in work under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke. . .

Universal's "Honeymoon Flats" will have Ben Lyon, Marion Nixon, Gwen Lee, Bryant Washburn in the cast. Millard Webb is directing. Work will start within a few days from a continuity prepared by Morton Blumenstock.

Carmelita Geraghty has returned to the Sennett lot and has been cast for a role in "The Romance of a Bathing Girl," which the comedy producer is personally directing.

After working in American movies to associate himself with American methods of production, His Imperial Highness, the Arch Duke Leopold of Austria, will return to his native country. He is playing in Tiffany's "Night Life."

"The Little Snob," George Godfrey's story, will be May McAvoy's next vehicle for Warner Bros. E. T. Lowe, Jr., wrote the adaptation and Robert Lord the scenario. John Adolfi will direct.

Robert Kane has begun production on "French Dressing" for First National. Clive Brook and Lilyan Tashman have leading roles.

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy have completed "Putting the Pants on Phillip," Hal Roach's new comedy for M-G-M. H. M. Walker wrote the titles. In the two comedians' next offering there will be Eugene Pallette, Noah Young and Dorothy Coburn. Clyde Bruckman is directing. This one will be released December 10th.

Shirley O'Hara will play an important lead in M-G-M's "The Loves of Louis," the tentative title of Ramon Novarro's next M-G-M vehicle.

Florence Ryerson has been added to the Paramount staff of writers. She will write the screen play for "The Jazz Orphan." Herman C. Raymaker has also signed with Paramount. He will start production at the Tonto Basin, Arizona, on "Under the Tonto Rim."

Joseph Jackson has joined the scenario staff of Warner Bros. His first assignment will be the adaptation of "Powder My Back."

Following "Spotlight," Esther Ralston's next Paramount picture will be "The Jazz Orphan," an original by Doris Anderson. Frank Tuttle will direct her with James Hall playing opposite.

Walter Shumway has been cast for a role in "The Pinto Kid," F B O's latest Western vehicle with "Buzz" Barton. The company is now on location at Big Tujunga, with Louis King at the megaphone. Hugh Trevor and Gloria Lee are the romantic leads.

The screen rights to "La Gondole aux Chimeres" (The Ship of Dreams), the French story by Maurice Dekobra, have been acquired by M-G-M.

Barney Furey, erstwhile ranchman and deputy sheriff, has a part in F B O's "The Red Riders of Canada."

Lawrence Gray and Orville Caldwell have the principal male roles in "The Patsy," now in work at the M-G-M studio. John Patrick and Del Henderson are also cast.

"The Chaser" has been chosen by Harry Langdon as the title of his next comedy for First National. It has been in work for three weeks.

Johnny Mack Brown and Lars Hanson are opposite Greta Garbo in "The Divine Woman" which Victor Seastrom is directing for M-G-M. The director is coaching Hanson and Miss Garbo in Swedish, his and their native tongue.

"The Beauty Doctor" will be Adolphe Menjou's next picture for Paramount. Lothar Mendes will direct from a story by Ernest Vajda.

The screen version of the Irving legend, "Rip Van Winkle," has entered upon the initial stages of production at the De Mille studio under the direction of William C. De Mille. Rudolph Schildkraut has the title role.

Marc McDermott and John Miljan have joined the cast of "Glorious Betsy," a story of Napoleonic times which will serve Dolores Costello as her next starring vehicle for Warner Bros.

Alan Hale, director and actor, has the role of the Cossack heavy in "The Leopard Lady," which Rupert Julian is directing for Pathe release.

The cast of Universal's "No. 13 Washington Square," has been augmented by the addition of Jerry Gamble. Melville Brown is directing a cast which includes Jean Hersholt, Alice Joyce, Zazu Pitts, Helen Jerome Eddy, George Lewis and Helen Foster.

Leon McAuley, who hails from London, Ontario, where she won the title of "Miss Ontario," has arrived at the Christie lot to work in a two-reeler of the Paramount comedy producer, who also claims London as his home town.

Opinions on Current Productions

"For Sale a Bungalow"

(Sennett-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IT'S wise to be foolish, would be a better title for this Sennett two-reeler, in which Madeline Hurlock pays $20,000 for a $3,500 bungalow, only to find two years later that the place was completely saturated with oil, which makes Madeline and her boy friend, Eddie Quillan, and by that time, little Eddie, immensely wealthy.

But there are a lot of comedy antics before the bungalow is purchased, as the oil is discovered. Andy Clyde and Vernon Dent are the starving realtors and they are assisted in making the sale by Eddie, the office boy and Ruth Taylor, the stenographer. Eddie, however, thinks the price is to be $3,500. But it's a fair enough shake all around when the oil is discovered and there is a lot of fun contributed before and after.

"Brunettes Prefer Gentlemen"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

JERRY DREW is presented in his first starring comedy in this one, and we should say that he is off to a pretty good start. There are a lot of good comedy situations, and the new star has some mannerisms that should make the customers laugh. Some of the nausea injected in the ship sequences is a bit nauseating, but on the whole the comedy is well above the average.

Jerry is the good friend of an eloping couple, who are depending upon him to deliver the marriage license, but Jerry partakes too freely of the flowing bowl and fails to make connections at the minister's. A hurried call brings him to the steamer and he is compelled to sail with the happy couple. Some hilarious episodes follow as the ship gets under way. Anita Garvin, Estelle Bradley, Robert Graves and Eddie Featherstone in the supporting roles, do good work.

"Buster What's Next"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BUSTER and Mary Jane have their troubles with the stout daughter of Mrs. Brown's friend, following the departure of the mothers on a shopping trip. The stout girl does not just fit into the scheme of things, and Buster and Mary Jane proceed in an endeavor to make things miserable for her. They literally wreck the house in so doing, but they fail utterly to disconcert their playmate.

Eventually, Buster suggests a boxing bout, and the results are disastrous to him. He is saved only by the return of the parents, when he is further chastised by the stout girl's doting parents for his cruel treatment of their offspring. There is a lot of fair comedy in this one, and it should win the approval of all those who are partial to this type of two-reeler.

"Blind Man's Bluff"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A NORTHWEST MOUNTED condensed into two reels, with everything but action eliminated. That describes this snappy tale of Universal's Northwest Mounted Police series. It's a good story, well above the average for the type.

Jack Perrin is the hero as Bob MacKeller, of the Mounted, afflicted with snow blindness. He is brought to the McKim cabin by La Rue, the villain, who poses as a wealthy investor. The McKims care for Jack, and he, in turn, saves the McKim fortune, wins the girl and turns up La Rue, after having gradually regained his sight unknown to those around him. There is an exciting climax, a rip-snorting fight, an abundance of romance, and continuous action, all of which are bound to make the picture a winner.

"Down to the Sea"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

BAY and beach sports and frolics are shown in this altogether pleasing Grantland Rice Sportlight, which is unusually well arranged. There are depicted a group of youngsters ranging in age from two to six disporting themselves on the sandy beaches; there are shots of the overjoyed amateur fishermen and women on the fishing boats that ply the eastern waters from New York City to Montauk Point; there are scenes showing the harpooning and landing of a giant swordfish, and there are other scenes showing Stubby Kruger, an expert at surfboard riding; ice yachts and yachts of all descriptions are shown under way. It is a very pleasing selection of water sports and frolics.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Ocean Bruises"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

ANDY GUMP is a victim of circumstances. Right or wrong, he's wrong. Mother-in-law is the cause of his troubles. Andy usually has enough without ringing in mother-in-law, but he has more than his share in this two-reeler. As any good man might do under the circumstances, Andy plans a trip abroad when he finds the wife's mother is coming for a six-months' visit.

It is hardly Andy's fault if mother-in-law is catapulted into the trunk he and the misses are packing for the trip, nor if she is unseen there as the packing progresses. But what a reception the wife and her mother give Andy when they later are unpacking on the steamer and the mother's presence is revealed! It all makes for some lively comedy of the type which invariably characterizes these Gump two-reelers.

"The Ocean Hop"

(Universal-Cartoon—One Reel)

OSWALD, the Lucky Rabbit, is the latest Transatlantic flyer, and one of the few successful ones, but he wins the $25,000 prize money only after more hardships and narrow escapes than Ruth Elder encountered.

Fortunately Oswald is possessed of much ingenuity. Wrecked at the starting point he uses an accommodating dachshund to make his getaway. His rivals change the sign posts on the course and he is approaching apparent disaster, when he drops in his parachute and lands at the finishing line. There is some exceedingly humorous action in this cartoon comedy.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Lindy's Cat"

(Pathe-Fable—One Reel)

HOW Thomas Cat achieved a transatlantic flight via an airplane of a design that only a fable cartoonist could conceive, is shown in this issue. Hero Thomas takes off amid the cheers of a multitude of his animal friends, ascends to the clouds which desperately threaten at times and finally reaches his destination to a still greater acclaim from the animal kingdom. His arrival is the signal for them all—birds, fish and quadrupeds—to cheer his victory. This is a good number with many little novel twists. —E. G. JOHNSTON.

"Here and There is Travel-Land"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS is one of the Lyman H. Howe Travel-Land series. In it the audience is conducted on a tour to various parts of the world and some unique and picturesque scenes are shown both in actual shots and cartoon form. The cartoons offer some comedy relief that is unusual, and add to the attractiveness of the picture. There are scenic tid-bits from Pennsylvania, Oriental handiwork in Java and native dances in Morocco. These, with the cartoons, make for a fairly interesting subject.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"He Tried to Please"

(Educational-Cameo—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THE trials and tribulations of a young married couple preparing their first dinner for visiting friends provide the comedy situations for this two-reeler, which features Monte Collins, Lucille Hutton and Jack Lloyd. To add to their woes the cook quits as the action starts.

It is not hard to realize that a situation of this kind could lend itself perfectly to some humor, if one did not consider it from the angle of the host and hostess, neither of whom knew anything about cooking. Their antics in trying to prepare the meal are very funny, if they are a trifle exaggerated, and their consternation may readily be appreciated when, at the end of their heroic efforts, the guests fail to materialize. As two-reelers of this type go this one is exceptionally good.

The College Widow

A Football Tale With a Kick

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

WHILE the original old popular play of George Ade has been considerably revamped for screen purposes, enough of the Ade humor and color has been retained, and wound as it is around a strictly modern campus with up-to-the-minute football the resultant photoplay is one that should have a very popular appeal.

The picture is well directed and well acted, with the football sequences shot right from one of the big college games played in Los Angeles. As in all of these football photoplays the result is in doubt until the last moment of play and the suspense of an audience should be as keen as that of the most rabid undergraduate watching the varsity against its most formidable rival.

One could not but be won to the cause of Atwater with the bewitching Dolores Costello vamping her hand-picked team that her daddy may retain his place as President of the college. For the trustees have decreed that if Atwater cannot regain athletic supremacy President Witherspoon must go. There is not much sentiment for the Prexy himself, but Miss Costello makes you root for him at that.

She is certainly a winsome Miss as the College Widow and it is not difficult to believe that she could wean star football players from other colleges to represent Atwater, where the three year rule evidently does not obtain. William Collier, Jr., and the supporting players do splendid work.

The Cast: Dolores Costello, William Collier, Jr., Douglas Gerrard, Anders Randolf, Charles Hill Mailes, Robert Ryan, Sumner Getchel, Big Boy Williams, Grace Gordon.

THEME: Comedy of the campus in which college president's daughter vamps leading players of other colleges to Atwater that they may win the annual football game from Bingham. She succeeds, saves her daddy's job and wins the football hero.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The football sequences. The romance. The all around good work of the cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The football game offers ready made exploitation. The star. The college atmosphere.

DRAWING POWER: Should go well in any house.

Produced and Distributed by Warner Bros. Length 6,616 feet, Released Oct. 15, 1927.

Spring Fever

Light Comedy Is Amusing

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE pastime of visualizing the humblin' game of golf, with all its colorful tidbits of action up and down the fairway and around the greens, makes itself particularly adaptable for the screen. The new Haines feature has a plot that doesn't figure with a par score at all. It could easily be compressed in three reels but, due to a lot of good golf "business" coupled with the titles which carry the airy wise-cracks of the links, it succeeds in carrying on very well.

The open spaces of the fairways find a true outlet for expression in the movies, and anyone who is interested in golf (and who isn't?) should respond to it, for it breezes through on a neat wave of light comedy. The star plays another of his smart-Aleck heroes—a chap, in this instance, who plays golf on the side, while he holds down the job of shipping clerk. He's a nifty player despite his poverty and, when his boss takes him to a swanky country club, the youth promptly proceeds to set a dizzy pace at golf—and at hearts. He falls in love with a young society girl and wins her.

The picture is entertaining, particularly so when it sticks to the game. The interpolated golf stuff fits in neatly because it belongs.

The Cast: William Haines, Joan Crawford, George K. Arthur, George Fawcett, Eileen Percy, Edward Earle, Bert Woodruff, Lee Moran. Director, Edward Sedgwick.

THEME: Light romantic comedy of golf player who gives up office job to excel on links. Wins society girl and championship.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Atmosphere and incident. Comedy through fairways and greens. Golf "business." Clever acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Stress golf trimmings. Play up as true outdoors picture. Play up Haines. Tie up golf shops, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Should go well in all houses. Haines will attract them.

Produced and Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, six reels. Released, October, 1927.

Jesse James

A Western That Doesn't Click With History

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IN humanizing America's favorite bandit, the hero of the dime novel era, the sponsors have taken a deal of dramatic license in getting over the rough spots in Jesse's life. Those in charge may be playing the right tack at that, since the present generation, for the most part, is unfamiliar with the up-and-at-'em exploits of the outlaw. Those who know their Jesse James will accept it as a straight-shooting Western, that could just as well be given another name.

To our way of thinking, Fred Thomson is not the ideal type for the bandit-hero, being much too large and good-looking for the ornery Mr. James who said it with cartridges. Moreover, he rides too well. Jesse could ride, too, but he was no trickster in the saddle. The figure is more up Raymond Hatton's alley, but Thomson needed a big opus to make a good start.

Well he's got the opus—it's not so big, but it's good enough to function as crisp Western entertainment. It has some sure-fire situations—such as the hold-up stuff and various rescues and escapes—to say nothing of Thomson's horsemanship. It also carries its compliment of gorgeous exteriors.

As said above, it doesn't get very close to Jesse's remarkable life. He is painted here as more sinned against than usual. But it will please the folk who don't know the bandit through the dime novel and the biographies.

The Cast: Fred Thomson, Nora Lane, Montagu Love, Mary Carr, James Pierce, Harry Woods, William Courtwright. Director, Lloyd Ingraham.

THEME: Melodrama based upon the bandit era of Jesse James.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Horsemanship of star. Thrills. Hold-up. Rescues and escapes. Beautiful exteriors. Acting by cast. Atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature as screen version of life of America's famous bandit. Play up star as making debut with Paramount. Feature horse Silver King. Stress stories about Jesse James.

DRAWING POWER: Star and title will draw. O. K. for any house.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount. Length, nine reels. Released, October, 1927.

Tell It To Sweeney

Not So Hot

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SOMETHING of an old-fashioned comedy is turned out in this one—which presents Chester Conklin and George Bancroft as a pair of comedy foils. It may have its amusing moments for those who are unaccustomed to bigger and brighter fun, but, to the old standbys who go to the movies week after week, it won't be accepted as any great shakes. Three authors had a hand in it, but apparently they haven't gone in much of a huddle insofar as team play is concerned. They have placed the stars as a couple of railroad engineers—one riding the main line, while the other takes his trusty engine and goes up and down the branch road. The contrast of engines provokes a share of humor—Conklin's contraption being all dressed up like a hose cart at a firemen's convention.

The comedy goes slapstick real often, and the play of contrast is exploited in the buffoonery of Bancroft at the business of ridiculing Conklin, pictured here as old enough to retire and grab a pension. There is love interest which presents Bancroft very much in love with Conklin's daughter—who, in turn, is in love with the son of the railroad's president.

There isn't much to it, but the stars work hard to put over the laughs. Bancroft looks lost in this type of comedy, especially after his dramatic work in "Underworld," but he puts over a good characterization. So does Conklin in his own inimitable manner.

The Cast: Chester Conklin, George Bancroft, Jack Luden, Doris Hill, William H. Tooker. Director, Gregory La Cava.

THEME. Comedy of railroad engineers who are ever at odds.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Comedy play by Conklin. Slapstick aboard engine. Romance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease title. Tie up with railroad men, etc. Play up Conklin and Bancroft.

DRAWING POWER: Suitable for average houses.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount. Length, six reels. Released, October, 1927.

Nevada

Zane Grey's Name Will Help It Along

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

ONCE again a Zane Grey book has been transcribed to the screen. The latest concoction of this indefatigable author, originally published in the American Magazine, harkens back to the same old tale he told so well in "The Lone Star Ranger." It is not as good a story as that earlier opus; rather, it appears to have been written hastily, its plot structure and story values, consequently, suffering from a lack of ingenuity, of finely thought out details. That was our impression of the book; the picture, following its prose original with a certain faithfulness, can readily be classed among the ordinary Westerns. In view of the fact that Paramount has several "names" in the cast which are prominent and well known to fans, the picture should draw for that reason. But not because it is better than others of its kind. Just as Grey's stories, often mediocre, result in great sales because of the value of his name, so, perhaps, will this production bring good attendance. The gangling Gary Cooper impersonates the suave, iron-nerved Jim Lacy, gun-thrower extraordinary. William Powell has the role of the heavy, and, as usual, gives a fine performance. Thelma Todd, the Paramount school graduate, very prettily fills the role of heroine.

There are rustlers, gun fights, impeccable daring on the part of the hero, and love interest in "Nevada." The big highlight is the defeat of Powell's rustling gang by the cattle men. This scene is staged very well. But, on the whole, Cooper and his exploits are in the background; it is Powell who holds the attention.

The Cast: Gary Cooper, Thelma Todd, William Powell, Philip Strange, Ernie E. Adams, Christian J. Frank, Ivan Christy, Guy Oliver. Director, John Waters.

THEME: Gunman, in love with girl, saves her brother's stock from rustlers and shows up one of the trusted ranchmen as doing all of the rustling.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The action. Gunplay. Powell's acting. Rustler's camp and meeting of rustlers and cattlemen.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The name of Zane Grey and the players will attract business if ballyhooed. Good title.

DRAWING POWER: Good for the usual run of theatres.

Produced and Distributed by Paramount.
Length, 6,258 feet. Released, Sept., 1927.

Sailor Izzy Murphy

Tale Lacks Proper Farcical Touch

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

DEEP melodrama is served in the guise of comedy in this latest vehicle for George Jessel. Perhaps originally it was intended to be a comedy, as the press sheets so advise, but it goes completely melodramatic as the story progresses. Jessel tries hard to inject some comedy, but surrounded as he is by a crew of lunatics armed with guns and threatening each moment to blow up the pleasure yacht on which the cruise is made, his task is a difficult one.

Had the tale been handled with a farcical touch it would undoubtedly have hit nearer the mark, but there is hardly the semblance even, of any comedy relief. Jessel assumes a humorous attitude here and there, but in the seriousness of the surrounding circumstances one finds it rather difficult to laugh it off.

Here is a yacht load of escaped maniacs who have escaped solely for the purpose of doing away with a wealthy perfume manufacturer, who has presumably done their leader wrong. Izzy is unwittingly made a member of the crew after having fallen in love with the wealthy one's daughter. Daughter spends most of her time weeping because of her father's plight. Father is in the deepest despair and even Izzy is uncomfortable in his predicament. It comes to its hilarious climax when Izzy and the girl are locked in the boiler room with the leader of the maniacs and made to shovel coal and more coal as the steam gauge mounts and indicates that soon the yacht and everyone on it are to be blown to atoms.

The Cast: George Jessel, Audrey Ferris, Warner Oland, John Miljan, Otto Lederer, Theodore Lorch, Clara Horton.

THEME: Melodrama in which Jewish perfume salesman is inducted into crew of maniacs aboard yacht and succeeds in saving the life of the wealthy perfume manufacturer whom they have escaped to kill and with whose daughter Izzy is in love.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scenes aboard the yacht. The thrilling scene as the steam gauge mounts past the danger point. The suspense. The romance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The name of the star. The thrills. The fight in the boiler room.

DRAWING POWER: Fair.

Produced and Distributed by Warner Bros.
Length 6,020 feet. Released October 8, 1927.

His Dog

Fine Little Picture—Human and Tender

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

ONE can safely predict a favorable reaction to this story of a dog and a man which is as satisfactory a tale as the ordinary person could justly demand. A human quality is about it—an air of simplicity and sincerity. Directed with sure, deft touches by Karl Brown, it shapes up as a good little picture; furthermore, likable portrayals are given by the principals, and the well known Albert Payson Terhune is credited with the story.

This is a typical Terhune story, and much of the spirit that is found in the works of that friend of dogs is to be had here. The ennobling influences of a canine friend is the motif, and this is played upon with gentle modulations of humor and semi-tragedy. Quite serious it is in spots as it depicts the barren, lonely life of a farmer and quotes such worthwhile stuff as Maeterlinck's penetrating observation about the dog: that he is the only animal privileged to gaze upon the face of his deity.

The younger Schildkraut has a sympathetic role; a power for characterization is displayed in his rendering. The collie, with which he becomes so intimately attached, is a beautiful beast—a real thoroughbred, probably from Terhune's Sunnybank estate.

The homely quality about "Hig Dog" makes it a real family picture. You cannot charge it with being commonplace.

The Cast: Joseph Schildkraut, Julia Faye, Crauford Kent, Sally Rand, Robert Edeson, Annabelle Magnus, Fred Walton. Director, Karl Brown.

THEME: Heart-drama of lonely farmer who learns to forsake his cups and look upward through the influence of a dog.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Hero's lonely existence. Finding of the dog. The dog-show. The dog's heroism. Love interest. The acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Terhune's reputation as writer of dog stories. Mention the fine acting. Arrange tie-ups with dog stores.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced by De Mille Pictures. Distributed by Pathe.
Length, 6,788 feet. Released, July, 1927.

The Coward

Of Average Audience Calibre

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

THE story of a man who overcame his yellow streak to win back his girl and the self-respect of his world. Warner Baxter and Sharon Lynn are the two leads, and they give a good account of themselves. The story is constructed very simply, and resolves itself down to this: the man's weakness publicly displayed, his loss of prestige and his rejection by the girl, his "come-back" up in the Canadian wilds, and his vindication before the eyes of those who had suspected him of cowardice. Baxter makes his role real and, although it does not offer him opportunities like "The Great Gatsby," you never find him overacting. His reserved method of acting is the correct one for this role, we think, inasmuch as his attempt to get back his poise and honor is a mental conflict. Miss Lynn has a great deal of charm.

After a few sequences laid in a society atmosphere, the story switches to the open life where vigorous displays of manly qualities are brought to the fore. Baxter becomes the tutor of a strong and sturdy, who teaches him strength of character and of body. Tempered by the hardness of nature, he becomes so good a man that he even saves his greatest enemy from sure destruction. This scene, where, with his wounded foe on his shoulder, he climbs hand over hand up a rope to the top of a lofty cliff is his great personal victory; it is also one of the picture's best scenes.

The Cast: Warner Baxter, Sharon Lynn, Freeman Wood, Raoul Paoli, Byron Douglas, Charlotte Stevens, Hugh Thomas. Director, Alfred Raboch.

THEME: Disgraced because of his cowardice, man goes up to Canadian mountains and there learns willpower and endurance. He returns to his world and reestablishes himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Society incidents. Hero's downfall. His battle to come back and eventual success.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Emphasize above situations.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and Distributed by F B O.
Length, 5,093 feet. Released, Aug. 21, 1927.

Regional News from Correspondents

New England

TWO Connecticut theatres have changed ownership. The Jodoin Theatre at Baltic, Conn., has been purchased by J. Kuvulanka and the Palace Theatre at Broadbrook, Conn., has been acquired by C. Cuprak.

Joseph A. McConville, head of Independent Films, Inc., attended the New York Trade Conference sessions, representing the New England Film Board, of which he is the president.

Teddy Jacobs, assistant shipper at the Fox exchange, Boston, has gone to Film Booking Office as assistant shipper.

George Millings, at one time assistant shipper at the Fox exchange and more recently in a similar capacity at Consolidated Films, Inc., has returned to the Fox exchange as assistant shipper.

Charles Kelly has been appointed assistant poster clerk at the Fox exchange.

Robert W. Cobbe, formerly of the Boston sales staff of Tiffany, has returned to Tiffany and will cover the Boston territory.

Sam Moscow, sales manager of Independent Films, Inc., Boston, has been vacationing in Vermont where he has been duck hunting.

Jack Riff, active in the Film district as head of the Film Poster service, supplied the Havanas during the week because of the arrival of a son at his home.

Thomas Lark, cashier at the Philadelphia Exchange of Fox, was a visitor to the Fox exchange at Boston during the week, stopping for a few hours when his steamship docked at Boston. He has been at the Legion convention in Paris.

William Duffy, who operates the Old Orchard Theatre during the summer season, has closed the theatre for the winter months and returned to Boston.

Plans are under way for the opening of the State Theatre at Milford, Mass., on Oct. 27. This is a new theatre and will be operated by the Regional Chain Theatres.

Dick Sears, Pathe cameraman for New England, has sailed from France for New York and will return to Boston this week. He filmed the big events of the convention for Pathe.

The Bookers association is planning a Hallowe'en party, to be held at Canton, Mass., on Oct. 28.

Miss Emma Margress, popular secretary to District Manager Bailey at the Paramount exchange, is the envy of her girl friends at the exchange in the beautiful bouquets which adorn her desk each day. Miss Margress celebrated her birthday Tuesday and an additional monster bouquet of American Beauties arrived at the exchange in honor of the occasion.

On the occasion of the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into the field of motion picture exhibitors, which falls on Oct. 25, friends of Louis M. Boas are to tender him a complimentary dinner at the Georgian room of the Statler Hotel. The gathering will be graced by many of those who are prominent in the industry, including those from the exchanges as well as among the exhibitors.

Miss Frances Czwaietski, who has been with the Paramount exchange for 14 years, resigned Saturday. She is soon to become Mrs. George O'Donnell, her husband-to-be being a well known hotel manager in the South. A farewell party was tendered her at the exchange and she was presented with a fitted travelling case.

Paramount's new exchange building is now adorned with a monster bronze sign with the company's name upon it.

Philip Levine of the Strand Theatre, Springfield, was welcomed to Boston after a long absence during the week.

Abe Montague, treasurer of Indpendent Films, Inc., has been in New York City the past week on business.

The Victory Theatre, Lowell, held its formal opening Sunday and was entirely too small to hold the throngs which endeavored to attend. George Hammond is the managing director. The new theatre seats 1200 people and is located opposite the Lowell Municipal Auditorium.

The Hyannis Theatre is playing tabs two days a week. The Idle Hour at Hyannis is running pictures every day. These two theatres recently consolidated ownership and management and the change in policy follows.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the company bearing his name, was a visitor to Boston during the week.

New Bedford theatres are having their own troubles. Ten of the theatres, while operating as non-union houses, have granted the unions all of their demands except that of engaging additional employees. As a result some of the orchestras have walked out and while a temporary settlement has been made in some of the theatres, others are still without their orchestras.

The Unique Theatre, Boston, has been renamed the Stuart Theatre and is under the management of Charles A. Gilman, formerly of the Alhambra Theatre at Quincy, Mass. The theatre has been extensively remodelled.

William Waugh of Waugh's Theatre, Wareham, was a visitor to Film Row during the week.

Phil Markell, who has taken over the Gem Theatre at Weymouth, Mass., will spend some $15,000 or more in remodelling the theatre. He is also to install an organ. The theatre was formerly owned by Chester Rogers.

South East

D. M. EAVES, owner, Eaves' Circuit in South Carolina, has taken over the Riggin Opera House, Henderson, N. C., formerly operated by Marcus Cutting.

Cleveland

THE Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association will hld its annual meeting for the election of officers late this month. In preparation for the meeting a committee on arrangement has been appointed with J. A. Schwartz as chairman. Others on the committee are Martin P. Brown, John Sebek, M. C. Barth and B. Z. Levine. G. W. Erdmann, secretary of the association, is an unofficial member of the committee. It is planned to hold a luncheon meeting, place and date to be announced later, at which time election of president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and two members of the board of directors will take place. Other business of this meeting will be the report of J. J. Harwood and Henry Lustig on the federal trade conference which they attended as selected delegates.

The Almira theatre, Lorain avenue and West 106th street, due to open Oct. 9th, has announced October 22nd as its official opening date. George Folberth, owner and builder, was disappointed in installations, causing delay in opening. M. C. Barth of the Cozy theatre will manage the house.

Larry Jacobs, last heard fo when he resigned as manager of the Alhambra theatre, Canton, has been found. He is now associated with the U-B circuit of this city as manager of the Kinsman theatre.

Harry Ross, Paramount division manager, spent a few days in town last week, and held a local sales conference.

Mike Hudac, who recently purchased the Amphion theatre, West 25th street, from M. B. Horwitz of the Washington circuit, has sold the house to Paul Hurayt. Hudac still has the Iris.

Nat Charnas and his associates have sold the White Eagle theatre, Toledo, to Adam Flohr. Flohr formerly owned the Hart theatre. He sold it some time ago to Charnas and his associates, who now operate it under the name of the Summit theatre.

Loew's new Granada theatre, Detroit and West 117th street, opened most auspiciously last Saturday with "The Big Parade." City and state officials attended the opening as guests of the Loew organization. Speeches were made and responses given. E. H. Hunt, organist at the State theatre, offered a special organ novelty. The house will adopt a combination vaudeville and feature policy. The Granada is a Spanish type theatre, presenting an old world effect, but equipped with every convenience of the new world includnig a Carrier air cooling system.

George Chrest, of the Ohio theatre, Dover, has eliminated local competition by buying the Weber, the only other Dover house, from Sam Barck and J. V. Wolcott.

Meyer Fischer, president of the Fischer Film Exchange, with office in Cleveland and Cincinnati, was in New York last week attending the federal trade conference.

Marion, Ohio, is breaking out with a theatre building epidemic, if report be true. Following the recent announcement that Messrs. Bender, Wolf and Young of Canton will build a new house near the new Harding Hotel, comes the further announcement that the Theatrical Utilities Corporation of Buffalo have a site and plans already prepared for another new theatre. Theatrical Utilities Corporation of Buffalo have theatre affiliations all through the east.

Russell Bovim's official title is manager of Loew's theatre, Canton. But when he is not acting in his official capacity he is manager of his own private menagerie which, at the present time, consists of one bull dog, one monkey, and a pair of canaries.

It is reported that Milton Bryer is now the sole owner of the chain of theatres in Akron formerly controlled by Bryer and Friedman. The report states that Bryer has bought the interest formerly owned by I. Friedman. The theatres concerned are the Waldorf, Ideal, People's and Winter's. Messrs. Bryer and Friedman have been pioneers in the picture presentation in Akron. They were the first exhibitors to play pictures in Akron for continued runs. They were first exhibitors in the territory to present the Little Theatre idea. Through co-operation with the Civic League, they pesented foreign product with 100 per cent art valuation and doubtful box office valuations at special midnight performances. They exploited pictures extensively and advertised widely. Friedman's plans have not been announced. Byer will maintain the same progressive policies as have been enforced in the theatres under their combined ownership.

Earl Hudson now receives his mail addressed to the Alhambra theatre, Canton. Hudson was formerly manager of the Union Square theatre, Cleveland.

Bernard Polster, assistant manager of the Commodore theatre, Lake Shore Blvd. and East 152nd street, was relieving the cashier during the supper hour last Saturday when he suddenly faced a gun pointed at him through the cashier's window, together with a request for the contents of the till. Without further argument Polster turned over the money to the insistent patron who, upon receiving it, started to run away. But not before Polster had called a plain clothes man who was in the theatre. The plain clothes man gave chase and finally cornered the robber in the rear of a nearby yard. In an interchange of bullets, the robber was killed and the policeman wounded, but not fatally. The Commodore theatre belongs to Messrs. Lefkowitz, Polster, Greenberger, Horwitz and associates.

Kansas City

THE new Loew's Midland theatre of Kansas City, costing $4,000,000 and seating 4,000 persons, will open October 28, it was announced this week by M. B. Shanberg, manager. The opening will be one of the most important theatrical events in the history of Kansas City. For the first time in the history of the Kansas City Star, conceded to be one of the most conservative newspapers in the West, will devote a special section of the paper to the theatre.

The Midland will be one of the largest theatres in the Loew organization and its opening will attract the attention of the motion picture industry. Scaffolding still is up on the interior and it will take fast work to have the theatre ready for opening on scheduled time. The stage is the final word in modern stagecraft, with mammoth light controls and an inner stage built upon an elevator. There is practically no limit to the effects which may be achieved and the faculty with which they may be changed. The auditorium is of the ornate style of Louis XIV, but what is of more interest to the theatre patron is the fact that all seats, whether balcony, first floor or loge, are arranged to provide an excellent view of the stage. Elevators will carry patrons to the various elevations and the ventilating and cooling systems have been arranged so as not to strike patrons directly.

Albert Lee Strode, 64 years old, one of the oldest theatrical veterans in Kansas City, died this week in the General hospital, Kansas City, following a stroke of paralysis. Among the positions held by Mr. Strode was that of manager of the Auditorium theatre, Kansas City, assistant at Loew's Garden, Kansas City; doorman at the Shubert theatre and advertising representative at the Liberty theatre, the last position held by him.

Jack Hellman, brother of Sam Hellman, widely known author, has accepted a position as district exploitation representative in Kansas City for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. It was not so many years ago that Jack was recording runs, hits and errors from the press boxes atop baseball parks as a sport writer. Then he became exploitation representative for Paramount at Minneapolis.

The Kansas City Film Board of Trade frolic, sales meeting and banquet, which was to have been Monday, has been postponed indefinitely, it was announced this week, due to the inability of many of the members to attend and the lack of time for making necessary preparations. The event probably will be about Thanksgiving, it was said.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: W. H. Hardtman, Burr Oak, Kas.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.; F. Weary, Farris theatre, Richmond, Mo.

Charles Rossbacher has opened an exchange of his own in Kansas City, which will distribute First Division films, to be nown as the Liberty Film Exchange, Inc., located at Nineteenth and Wyandotte streets.

Fred Caldwell, director; Les Weir, Pathe-DeMille district manager, and C. D. Hill, district manager for Pathe, were Kansas City visitors this week.

James Lewis, Pathe booker, made a hurried trip to Slater, Mo., and returned with an arm-load of business.

Fred Horn, Fox representative, is receiving congratulations in abundance for his feat of obtaining the rank of first in the country among Fox salesmen.

W. P. Bernfield, film veteran, has joined the Educational branch sales force. A radio installed in the First National exchange made it a lot easier to remain inside while the worlds series was being played. C. A. Jones, Tiffany branch manager, returned from a trip into the territory with some new business.

Chicago

PLANS for the opening of its new de luxe house in Waukegan are being made by Great States Theatres. The new house will be called the State and W. O. Butts, now manager of the Academy, will be in charge when it opens on Thanksgiving Day.

Al Bachman, popular theatre manager, who has been in charge of houses for Universal here and for Kunsky in Detroit, is now associated with Ascher Brothers as manager of the Crown Theatre. An extensive advertising campaign and a number of novelties including Al Copeland and his stage band, starting October 24th, are in prospect for this house.

Two new neighborhood houses, which, by the way, are within sixty feet of each other, are being planned for Danville, and both will probably open the first of the year. They are the new Capitol, which is being erected by Mrs. Anderson of the Dreamland, and the unnamed one thousand-seat theatre which is being built by Manager Latino of the Columbia. It is understood that the latter house will be a Great States Theatre.

Eddie Grossman has earned the distinction of being Chicago's premier marathon salesman. In the last sixteen weeks he has traveled sixteen thousand miles in Illinois for United Artists, and this week is starting out on another trip which calls for a thousand miles.

O. B. Campbell, veteran film salesman, who at various times had been associated with many of the leading producing and distributing companies, died suddenly last week after a brief illness. At the time of his death he was employed by Fox Films.

Robert Gibbs has sold his Photodome Theatre at Richmond, Ill., to Mr. Grant of that city, who is a newcomer in the business.

W. D. Burford is to leave shortly on an extended trip which will take him as far West as California. It is understood that he will be gone for six weeks or two months.

Frank Schaefer of the Crystal Theatre, accompanied by Mrs. Schaefer, is enjoying a few days' vacation in Detroit, Mich.

Ralph Tippets, formerly of the Plaza, Galesburg, has been appointed manager of the Majestic, La Salle, in place of Ludwig Sussman ,who severed his connection with the latter theatre.

Lyman Massey is now in charge of the Valley Theatre, Spring Valley, having been transferred from Kankakee, where he was assistant manager for Great States.

Arthur Mayer, who, as announced last week, is now associated with Great States Theatres, Inc., has assumed his new duties as director of theatre operation for this company.

President Jack Miller, Secretary Ludwig Siegel and M. A. Choynski, of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, have returned from New York City, where they attended the Federal Trade Hearing. The trio, who went as official delegates of the local organization, expressed themselves as confident that much good will be accomplished by the conference, which they report was carried on in a most business-like manner.

Steve Farrar of Eldorado, Ill., is having finishing touches put on his new theatre and expects to open the house on November 1st.

Joe Creveling of National Screen Service, has been transferred from the Minneapolis office to Cleveland, where he will be in charge.

The Plaza Theatre at Galesburg, which has been operating for seven days a week, has changed its policy and hereafter will only operate on Saturdays and Sundays.

Chicago theatre owners are cooperating with the drives for funds to aid the Chicago Lying-In Hospital and the Salvation Army, and in many houses trailers and slides are being shown.

Ed. Haferkamp of Haferkamp & Hill, owners of the Hollywood Theatre, is enjoying the big game hunting in Saskatchewan. Mr. Haferkamp expects to be home in time to celebrate Christmas with his family.

Salt Lake City

A SALES analysis is being conducted at the local Paramount Famous-Lasky Corporation exchange by John D. Clark, Division Manager of this organization, who is in this city from New York.

Al Shepherd, formerly acting in the capacity of ad-sales manager at the local Paramount exchange, has been assigned to the Montana territory with headquarters at Billings, it is announced. Frank Hallow has been appointed as ad-sales manager in the place of Shepherd.

Another visitor at the Paramount Famous-Lasky office this week is Jack Curry, District Supervisor of the ad-sales.

Bill Danziger of the Harold Lloyd Corporation is spending some time at the local Paramount exchange enroute to Omaha and Chicago.

Chas. Epperson, representative out of the Paramount office here, is leaving right away for his territory, it is stated.

Within the next few days, Hal Elias, exploitation manager in this district for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will return from Missoula, Montana.

Manager L. C. Wingham, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office in this city, spent last week in the Idaho branch.

The new Bonita Theatre is being opened by J. W. Nixon at Provo, Utah. This, it is announced, will be a four hundred seat theatre and will use a highely selected group of pictures.

Wm. Boyd, a Cecil B. DeMille star, was a guest of Manager Al O'Keefe of the local Pathe exchange, and the Pathe organization, at the Hotel Utah on the evening of October 6th. Several of the leading exhibitors of Utah were in attendance as the Utah state exhibitors were holding their conference in Salt Lake City at that time.

A. D. Bustanoby, District Representative for Pathe, is in this city enroute to Denver. The many friends of Bustanoby in Salt Lake and the surrounding territory regrett his being transferred to the Southern Division.

After having just joined the ranks of matrimony Miss Reba Hansen, cashier of the local Pathe office, is back from a two weeks' vacation.

H. H. Milstein, local manager for Universal, has been in company with Sales Representative Tony Hartford in the Southern Utah territory.

All of the Fox sales force were in for the purpose of attending a sales conference held at the local office by Special Representative Ben F. Rosenberg and Manager Chas. Walker.

Clyde H. Messinger, Educational Branch Manager here, is spending a couple of weeks in the Southern Utah section.

Among exhibitors lining up new business here this week are J. W. Simmons of the Orpheum Theatre at Oakley, Idaho, and S. M. Duggins of the Casino at Gunnison, Utah.

Tony Duvall, owner and operator of the Gem Theatre at Murray, Utah, states that business is very good in spite of the fact that streets in front of his house are all torn up.

Harry Stern, manager of the United Artists exchange in this city, has left for a trip through the key cities of Montana and Idaho. Johnny Dickson is now covering the regular Montana routes for United Artists.

Fred Lind, local manager for F B O, is in Idaho at present and is headed for Butte, Montana. He expects to be gone about one week.

Dave Barnholtz, who was connected with Tiffany in this city for some time, has left here for Denver, it is reported.

Manager W. F. Gordon of the local Associated First National office recently returned with Salesman Vete Stewart from Montana. On their way from Missoula to Butte they were unfortunate enough to have had a broken wheel on their car and were forced to sleep in the car all night.

Manager W. F. Gordon of the Associated First National exchange in this city, returned a few days ago from a trip into Montana.

Salesman Vete Setwart is home for a few days after having just completed a fourteen weeks' trip throughout the state of Montana.

After returning from the Idaho territory a short time ago Manager E. E. Harris of the local Columbia office is returning to that section within a few days.

San Diego

ANOTHER new motion picture theatre, the Fairmount, belonging to the West Coast chain in San Diego, Cal., was opened recently in the East San Diego section of the city. The house, Spanish renaissance in design, has a seating capacity of 850. The interior walls are in Travertine finish. Tapestries depict various scenes from Spain of the old time and the present day, and include the Knights of the Dragon, Buccaneers, tango dancers, Cortez and Indians, Aztec sun dancers, Spanish galleon in a storm, the serenaders and the duel of the Spanish cavaliers.

The most modern type of seats have been installed, and the latest developments mark the ventilating system. A Robert Morton organ provides the main musical feature, with Emily T. Erb at the console.

The Fairmount will be under the general management of H. L. Hartman, who has charge of the Cabrillo and New California, the other two West Coast houses in San Diego. George Thompson, sr., has been named as house manager.

Construction work has started on the new motion picture theatre at Encinitas, Cal., which will be known as "La Paloma." The estimated cost of the structure is $45,000, which will include the several stores that will be part of the building.

William R. Quann, for twelve years connected with theatres on the Pacific coast, has been appointed manager of the Balboa, in San Diego, succeeding Norman Rieman, who has gone to New York to become identified with a booking agency.

New York & New Jersey

NOW that the Trade Practices Conference is over and most of the attending delegates have departed for their respective homes after concluding what is said to have been a most constructive meeting, the general opinion seems to be that while these conventions are most necessary, and all that sort of thing, its exceedingly fortunate that they don't happen every week. Lots of hard work was necessary.

Joseph M. Seider, one of the busiest men at the conference, accompanied by Mrs. Seider and Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Kelly of Palisades, N. J., left on Monday, Oct. 17, in Mr. Kelly's autmobolie for a ten days' tour in Canada, where the bracing Northern air will undoubtedly have a recuperative effect.

It is rumored that George Cohen, well known theatre cricuit man of Newburgh and Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has negotiations well under way toward the acquisition of the Colonial, Lyceum and Palace theatres of the Oranges, N. J., belonging to Louis Rosenthal. Neither Mr. Rosenthal nor Mr. Cohen could be reached this week in time for a confirmation.

Another deal reported under way is that Messrs. Gottesman and Stern are negotiating for the purchase of several theatres in Newark, N. J. Up to the present writing it was impossible to ascertain the names of the houses.

Now don't any of you New York boys get scared, but what is spoken of as "Stern's first venture in Manhattan," will be the opening of the theatre at Broadway and Canal street under the management of Mr. Stern's nephew and a partner. This house was recently acquired from Morris Kutinsky. It is almost needless to remark that the Mr. Stern mentioned is the Stern of Stanley-Fabian; moreover, it is quite possible, according to further report, that Mr. Stern may aid with the booking, which will of course make things more interesting.

Although there has been several wagers of velour hats, etc., made in and around the offices of the Stanley-Fabian Company that the new house under construction in Jersey City will be ready for an opening on Washington's Birthday, the contractors will have to work very fast in order to complete the house on that date. But they have a way of doing that very thing around these parts.

"Bill" McChesney, division manager for the Walter Reade circuit, is going around these days with a sprained ankle.

Charles Bryant, general manager of the Reade circuit, is said to be planning a trip to Europe.

Two such names as Canter and Joelson in the theatrical trade are bound to make a strong team. For the third time in local film trade history ,Eddie Canter has rejoined the Joelson circuit as manager of the Alhambra theatre, Halsey street and Knickerbocker avenue, Brooklyn. Canter claims that he has broken many records that were formerly established when the Alhambra was under the banner of Ward and Glynn and, later, Loew's. Canter seems to be a wizard when it comes to gaining the confidence of neighborhood trade.

Walter Hoffman, of the Roth New Jersey theatres, was one of this week's visitors to the several exchanges. Although a very busy man, it is said that Mr. Hoffman, even as many others have done, has lately succumbed to the lure of the grand lod Scotch game of golf.

Pathe Ed Carroll's home town theatre, the Verona, is still closed. Incidentally, Mr. Carroll has recently added another valuable piece of real estate to his holdings.

The Lyric theatre, Elizabeth, is now known as the New Melba.

A seven piece orchestra has lately been added to the musical program of the Hollywood theatre, Brooklyn. This is in addition to tab shows furnished by Seider and Moley. L. C. Victor has managed this house for several years.

The Forrest Park theatre, Woodhaven, has a new owner, according to report. M. Birnbaum was the former proprietor.

Manager Harris, of Loew's Gates theatre, recently suffered the loss of his father. His friends extend their sympathy.

L. M. Koskier is the new manager of Loew's Oriental theatre, Bensonhurst, Brooklyn. He was formerly with Loew's iVctory, the Bronx.

Herman Britwar and his associates are busy men these days attending to the renovation of their recently acquired theatres at Babylon and Bayshore, L. I.

In addition to managing Leon Rosenblatt's theatre, John Bemis is booking for all of Mr. Rosenblatt's houses.

The American theatre, Fort Hamilton Parkway, Brooklyn, changed this week to a policy of all-Italian shows and pictures.

While on the subject of Italian shows, it is well to mention that one of the "old-timers" in this business, Jack Rosenblatt, has under the trade name "Rumon" offices at 1560 Broadway for the distribution of Italian product. Mr. Rosenblatt, who formerly managed the Ajax exchange, will actually engage in this business in about ten days.

John Weinish, one time suburban booker at the New York Pathe exchange, is now short subject booker for he At. H. Schwartz theatre circuit of Brooklyn.

Marsse Cohen has resigned his position as booker for the Hollywood Pictures exchange. Manager Gross is temporarily taking charge.

F. H. Fretjen is the new manager of Schwartz and Mueller's Roosevelt theatre, Richmond Hill, L. I.

A permit has been granted to the S. & B. corporation for the erection of a 1,200 seat theatre at Valley Road and Freeman street, West Orange. This corporation also operates the Savoy theatre in the same section. Jack Halperin is the manager.

It is said that Boutcher Bros. are building the new theatre at Bergenline avenue and 39th street, Jersey City, instead of another firm, as previously reported.

Exhibitor Tendler, sometimes called "Lew" by his film boy friends, is reported to be the new owner of the Rialto theatre, Ridgefield Park, N. J.

The new theatre being built at Bogota, N. J., is expected to be ready about January 1.

The recent opening of two new Brooklyn theatres in the Boro Park and Bensonhurst sections has already succeeded in cutting attendance figures of other nearby houses, according to report.

The Elton, 43d and New Utrecht avenue, a new house only opened a few weeks ago, is feeling the effects of the Universal's atmospheric, just three blocks away. A report states that the Universal is doing a heavy business since its opening on October 9. The neighborhood apparently likes its pictures mixed with vaudeville.

Since Loew's Oriental theatre, Bensonhurst, opened, the Benson theatre, a Rapf and Rudin house, has cut its admission to twenty cents in the evenings and a straight ten cents for matinees in order to combat with the popularity of the new Loew house.

It was reported a few weeks ago that there might be a possibility of a deal between Loew Theatres and Rapf and Rudin but evidently this was not the case. "Mike" Rudin, of this firm, recently left for a trip to California and return and if there are any negotiations on, undoubtedly they are off for the present.

Invitations are out for the opening of another new Brooklyn theatre, the Fortway, Fort Hamilton Parkway and 68th street. They were issued by Donald Flamm. "A Night on the Riviera" is hinted in store for those who attend the premiere on Friday evening, Oct. 21.

The Amphion theatre, Bedford avenue, in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, opened this week Monday with pictures and vaudeville.

R. J. Ryan is at present managing the Albemarle theatre, one of the A. H. Schwartz circuit.

M. Blinderman has taken over the Colonial 5th Avenue theatre, Brooklyn, from M. Tanler. Mr. Blinderman is the son of Harry Blinderman, the latter well known as a New York exhibitor and connected with the Delancey Circuit Corporation.

Ed Seider and Al Moley are busy these days lining up their motion picture acts and presentations for the coming season. Their business has grown considerably over last season. Satisfied customers come back for more.

Central Penn

BIG crowds attended the formal opening of the new Embassy theatre, Lewistown, on October 17. This modern theatre, which is devoted to both vaudeville and pictures, was erected at a cost of $200,000, and is owned and operated by Harold J. Cohn, of Lewistown. The feature of the opening bill was "The American Beauty," starring Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes. The theatre is equipped with a giant Kimball pipe organ, and announcement was made that Fred Morrow will be permanently at the console.

Lambert C. Robinson, Jr., of Coatesville, has been engaged as assistant organist at the Palace theatre, that city. He has been a student of organ music under S. Edwin Styles, organist at the Auditorium.

All couples married in September in any year were invited to be the guests of the management of the Rialto theatre, Allentown, during the week of October 10, when the feature film was "The Stolen Bride," featuring Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes.

John M. Krupa has resigned as organist of the Capitol theatre, Lancaster, and has accepted a similar position in a theatre in Lewistown.

Andrew J. Feeley, owner of the Feeley theatre, Hazleton, went to Shenandoah on October 11, where he was a guest [illegible] Max Goodman, manager of the Strand theatre.

Edward Estus Brown, for the last ten years doorman and night watchman at the State Theatre, Allentown, was found dead in the theatre on October 10. Mr. Brown was formerly an actor and member of Field's Minstrel company. By odd coincidence the theatre in which he died was that in which he made his last stage appearance.

San Francisco

FRANK LACEY, popular manager of the Cameo Theatre, who came to this city but a few months ago, having been brought from Portland to manage the Cameo, has decided to stay and in the second week in October went to Oregon to bring his family to live here.

W. J. Davis, who for several years was the manager of the Vallejo Theatre and later identified with the Cooperative Exchange as traveling salesman and more recently the lessee and manager of the Upper Lake Theatre in Lake County, has disposed of his holdings there and has returned to Film Row and is once again with Floyd St. John at the Cooperative Exchange in the capacity of city salesman.

Sid Goldtree, who has long been engaged in theatricals on the coast, will establish one in the North Beach section, and it is announced that he has taken over the Italian variety house at 631 Green Street and will rename it the Green Street Little Theatre.

Harry Fields is a new addition to the Fox Office, having been transferred from Los Angeles to this branch. The Sacramento Valley and Nevada are his territory.

All notables of Film Row attended the opening of the Alhambra Theatre in Sacramento.

W. J. Heinman, formerly with Universal Pictures at Salt Lake, has been transferred to the San Francisco Office as Branch Manager.

H. J. Henrioulle has resigned from Pathe.

J. B. Johnson is the new owner of the Lux Theatre, having recently purchased this house from W. Pillig.

When Carol Nathan left the Universal office, where he has been Branch Manager for several years, the office force presented him with a radio and a beautiful scroll made of sheepskin. Nathan now is on the executive staff at Los Angeles.

Lou Harris, owner of the Rialto Theatre, Stockton, was a recent visitor on Film Row.

E. T. Wakefield, one of the "Old-Timers" in the Industry, is filling the booker's desk at F B O.

A. D. and M. O. Duchow of Sonora California will soon open a new theatre in that city and they have given the National Company a complete order for their auditorium and operating room equipment.

Lester Theuerkauf, well known motion picture man in both the film and theatre operation, has resigned from United Artists, with which concern he has been connected for some time, and has gone to Los Angles with no announcement of his immediate future plans.

Scotty Gibson is selling pictures for Columbia.

Ernst Gluckauf, formerly with Fox Films and later with Imported Pictures, Incorporated, left for Berlin September 19. He expects to enter the film industry there.

C. M. Van Horn has resigned from Pathe and is now affiliated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the capacity of salesman.

J. W. Davis is again associated with Co-operative. His love for selling out-weighed his desire to remain an exhibitor.

G. C. Parsons has returned from a week's outing in the San Joaquin Valley.

Miss Audrey Mellin of Pathe's Educational Department in the New York Office was in the local office recently.

Mrs. W. C. Wheeler of the Majestic Theatre, Willits, was in San Francisco over the week-end.

Mortimer Thomas of Gille Show Print, with his wife, left September 30th for a tour around the United States. They are going to the extreme section of Massachusetts via the northern route and will return by way of the south coast. The entire trip is being made by rail and Thomas expects to be gone a month—and perhaps longer.

Les Weir and Rita Steward were married in Chicago on September 21. They had intended the wedding to take place when Weir had his next trip to the coast, but as Miss Stewart was in the east visiting her parents and Chicago being so near, they decided to be married in that city.

Miss Lou Maury is back again at the Pathe Office, having been away from that Exchange for a year while she was working in the T. & D. Jr. Offices.

Florida

WITH a record crowd filling the long corridors of the Fagan arcade long before the appointed time, the Arcade Theatre, West Palm Beach, opened its doors to the public at 7 o'clock Friday evening, October 7th.

The building was erected by Ferdinand Kahler of New Albany, Ind., a winter resident of West Palm Beach, and leased to the E. J. Sparks Enterprises. It was designed by R. W. Benjamin, and constructed by the Arnold Construction Company of this city.

The theatre is designed to represent a tropical night garden scene, vast panels portraying tall palm trees and tropic vegetation silhouetted against a bluish night sky.

Although an outdoor effect has been sought in the decorations, a strictly interior opera-house chair comfort has been achieved in the seating arrangements. The entire 900 seats are placed on one floor, which measures 50 by 140 feet. Ventilation is furnished by Sirroco fans of the latest type.

The Arcade is one of the most attractive and completely equipped theatres operated by Mr. Sparks of the 14 now running in Jacksonville, Lakeland, St. Petersburg and Fort Lauderdale.

A. P. Talley, who has been with the Sparks organization for some time, came to West Palm Beach to take over the managerialship of the new house.

The opening of the Arcade brought many distinguished guests to West Palm Beach, among whom were Scott E. Chestnutt, manager of the Paramount Film exchange, Jacksonville; George Chester and Major John W. Quillan, of the Enterprise Film Corporation, Jacksonville and Atlanta, respectively; W. L. Whitfield, Jesse L. Clark, managers of Sparks theatres in Jacksonville; E. T. Brown, booking agent of Sparks theatres, Atlanta, and others.

The new Arcade marks the introduction to West Palm Beach of E. J. Sparks, one of the leading theatrical men of the state. Operated by the West Palm Beach Enterprises, the Arcade will form the only first-run independent theatre in the city.

Frank Rogers, who is associated with the E. J. Sparks Enterprises, left for New York last Monday.

C. B. Ellis, manager of F. B. O. exchange, is in Miami this week.

Charles Lester, manager Universal, has been out of the city several days. He is travelling in East Coast territory.

Frank Dowler, district manager Publix, recently visited the Jacksonville office.

To boost the attendance at the initial "Midnight matinee" of Harvest Month, Manager John Carroll, of the Tampa, arranged to have motion pictures made of the crowds. A battery of hundred amp arcs were arranged in front of the theatre and they brightened things up like day. John E. Campbell turned the crank of his trusty camera, and when John shoots he gets 'em. These pictures, together with those of a "Baby Show" which Mr. Carroll staged this week, will be shown at the Tampa next week, which is their first anniversary week.

The reported price of the new home to be built by Thomas Meighan at New Port Richley was $125,000. It seems now that the price was slightly exaggerated as the contract calls for a building to cost $39,000, it is stated. At present prices in Florida, this amount will build a mighty fine residence.

The Tampa Tribune, in a very interesting editorial gave a description of the "Key Cities Map" as published in the "News" of last week. It was also praised by the exhibitors of Tampa.

George Clifford, who produces the musical shows at the Italian Club theatre in Ybor City, announces his having taken over the Airdome theatre at Sarasota. He stated that he will place a company there for the winter, playing the week days in that city and going to Venice for Sunday. He will give two changes of program each week and will use a feature picture in addition to the stage performance.

Over at the Victory, George Peck, the genial manager, is wearing a broad smile. The new policy of super features a full week at popular prices is going over in great shape, with business getting better every day. It is enough to make a manager smile when he has to advertise, "Attend the matinees and avoid the night crowds."

In Ybor City recently, this writer had the pleasure of joining Anthony Juran, manager of the Casino, and N. V. Darley, manager of the Rivoli, in a long cup of the famous Cuban coffee. These managers are good friends even though they have to fight each other for business, but these two good fellows would cut their right hand off before doing anything to injure the other. That's what we call the real professional spirit.

Block Says Reducing Porthole Size Is No Good

IT was almost a year ago when Robert G. Block, of the Carman Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., started in to do a little gum-shoe work in an effort to find out what was causing a "rim of light"—as he styled it—to be projected to the proscenium arch of the Carman Theatre.

At that time Block asked our assistance and, among other things, we suggested that he place his eye in the path of this beam of stray light and so see just what bright object in his projector was causing the trouble.

We did not know, until just recently, how Block had made out regarding our suggestions, as he never bothered himself with writing to us after that, so we, naturally, formed the opinion that he was a correspondent of the "fair weather" sort.

Something happened, however, which made our Philadelphia friend emerge from his shell and make himself heard once more. A chap by the name of Charles H. Powell, Everett Theatre, Middletown, Del., recently ventured to suggest a way by which, he claimed, Block could have saved himself a lot of unnecessary trouble and wasted time. Powell said that by stopping down the size of the projector port hole to a size just sufficient to pass the principal light beam, all stray light would have been eliminated, even though the cause of the stray light would remain active.

Block Hunts Cause of Trouble

Block, naturally, looked for the cause of the stray light and sought to remove it. To the end he suspected the various optical elements, such as the separate projection lens elements, the lens barrel, improper seating of lenses, etc.

Powell's letter to us stirred up Block to the point where he has again written to the department, and in this letter he claims that is is impossible to always eliminate stray light by stopping down the port hole opening, since the beam of stray light may often be at a very slight angle to the principal beam, and so will pass through even the restricted port hole opening along with, and inside of, the main projector beam.

This seems to be likely enough, although, at the time, we did not see how any bright object, such as a piece of polished metal, could lie close enough to the main beam as it passed through the projector, to reflect a secondary beam at such a small angle to the principal one as to make it pass through the reduced port hole.

Here is what Block says:

"Gentlemen: Charles H. Powell, projectionist at the Everett Theatre, Middletown, Del., claims that if you close up the port hole opening, it will eliminate stray light from being projected to the front of the house. But Brother Powell must not forget that in doing this, the seat of the trouble is not reached and also that narrowing down the size of the port hole will not always eliminate the trouble.

"Here is how I corrected the trouble of which I wrote you some time ago. I tried to see where the stray light came from by looking back through the lenses when the optic system was filled with light from the reflector arc lamp, which I use for projection purposes. In this I did not succeed.

"I am using Peerless Reflector Arcs and, as we know, the angle of convergence of the light beam with this outfit is extremely large. In fact, it [the light beam] narrows down from a circle 8 inches in diameter to about 1½ inches in diameter within a distance of 18 inches. The angle of divergence of the beam, beyond the aperture plate, is similarly large, so that the projection lens is more than filled with light.

Reduces Beam at Projection Lens

"In order to observe the effect of reducing the width of this beam at the projection lens location I made the 'spot' on the aperture quite large by removing the mirror closer to the crater. This caused the image of the crater to be focused on the rear element of the projection lens combination. When this was done I noticed that the rim of stray light on the proscenium arch disappeared, so then I immediately knew that the thing that was causing the trouble was the brightly polished rim of metal on the projection lens barrel. By painting this rim of polished metal a flat black I completely eliminated the trouble.

Reducing Porthole Size No Help

"The thing I wish to make clear is that stopping down the port hole opening did not help in this case as the stray light travelled near the center of the principal beam until it reached a point far beyond the port hole before it left the main beam and became a separate one which struck the proscenium arch above the screen.

"In view of this, I think that any stray light that comes through the projection lens is caused b ylight reflected from some piece of polished metal."

Stopping Down the Condenser

Block's method of locating the trouble was extremely simple and required a minimum of time to carry out. He could have obtained the same results by diaphragming the openings of the condenser lens in order to reduce the diameter of the beam at the projection lens location. In fact, the manufacturer of the arc lamps which he is using employed this method for improving the faulty screen definition which resulted when half size projection lenses, which were not corrected over their entire area, were first employed with the reflector arcs. It was necessary, in this case, to reduce the effective working area of the projection lens, in order to obtain sharper definition.

Annular rings, measuring about 1 inch wide, having outside diameter of 8 inches and an inside diameter of about 6 inches, were passed out to users of these lamps with instructions to place one in front of each condenser lens. These rings served as an effective diaphragm and prevented the projection lens from working at its full aperture.

Now that half size projection lenses are available, which are fully corrected over their entire area, there is no further need for using these diaphragms.

No Fault of Lamp

Incidentally, many people attributed this poor screen definition to this type of reflector arc lamp, apparently never realizing that screen definition is solely a function of the projection lens, and that the character of the light source or type of condenser system used for illuminating the film can in no way influence the screen definition.

The problem, now, appears to have been definitely solved. Not, however, after considerable grief to American manufacturers of projection lenses.

Elaborate Lighting Equip't Installed by Capital

Kliegl Brothers, lighting experts, figured considerably in the modernizing of equipment in the Capitol Theatre, in New York City, which recently inaugurated a new presentation policy.

Equipment furnished by Kliegl includes: new music stands for the orchestra and twenty specially designed music stands for the stage; thirty short range spotlights; ten long range spotlights; ten open-box floods for lighting from the wings; four spotlight towers; special portable footlights; two motor driven color wheels and several standard color wheels; and more than three hundred color frames with complete supply of gelatines with filing cabinet for same.

New Rose Theatre Opened at Thomasville, Ga.

Wednesday evening, Oct. 12, marked the opening of the new Rose Theatre, Thomasville, Ga. The house has a seating capacity of 1,500, and was built by the Interstate Amusement Co., of which Nat Williams is president.

The Rose is of a main floor and balcony design, and is modern in every detail. Its policy will be combination pictures and vaudeville. National Supply figured largely in stage and projection equipment.

Texas Theatre's Premiere Scheduled for Nov. 7

Another de luxe motion picture theatre will be added to the Jefferson Amusement Co.'s circuit when the million dollar Jefferson opens its doors in Beaumont, Texas, on Nov. 7.

The Jefferson was constructed from plans drawn by Emil Weil, of New Orleans, is of Spanish architecture, has a seating capacity of 2,000, and is considered one of the most beautiful theatres in the South.

The equipment includes an expensive Carrier Engineering cooling system, a handsome Robert Morton organ, and stage equipment from Peter Clark. The American Seating Co. furnished the seats.

The Jefferson will inaugurate a stage band policy for four days and vaudeville for three days.

Officers of the Jefferson Amusement Co. are: Sol E. Gordon, chairman of the board; J. C. Clemens, pres. and general manager; J. H. Saenger, 1st vice-pres.; E. V. Richards, Jr., 2nd vice-pres.; T. R. Clemmons, director of theatres; L. M. Ash, treasurer, and M. L. Wertheim, secretary-auditor.

Bought Equipment While Attending Conference

While attending the recent Trade Conference in New York City, several prominent exhibitors took advantage of an opportunity to purchase new equipment for their latest theatres.

Callers at the offices of the Lobby Display Frame Corp., where they contracted for frames and booth requirements were: Fred Desburg, of Cleveland; S. S. Henderson, Henderson, N. C.; Exhibitor Rogers, of Fla., and Henry Lustig, Cleveland.

Philadelphia Suburb Has a Roxy Theatre

The Roxy Theatre, at Ridge and Leviring Avenues, Roxborough, a suburb of Philadelphia, opened October 15th, with the feature "Firemen, Save My Child." The house is said to represent an investment of about a quarter of a million, and the organ installation is reported to have cost $50,000. It will be devoted to a straight picture policy.

Pantages' Alabama Theatre to Open Oct. 31

In an announcement in the Birmingham News, Birmingham, Ala., the past week, it is stated that the new Pantages Theatres will open on October 31st. A large opening campaign is planned.

Mr. Theatre Manager

Do you realize the bad impression you instantly create in the eyes of your patrons by a poorly lettered card or a torn frayed one sheet carelessly thumb tacked in your expensive brass or gold frames?

Through years of theatre display experience we have originated a series of that will increase the sales value of your front, they are hand made, for any size frame, to take a one sheet or hand lettered program card, and are built by artists in a studio devoted to moving picture display needs.

Here is one of the snappiest comedy conceits ever concocted for the screen. Just imagine every woman in town suddenly deciding that she must be a blonde. Of course there was a reason—and it was a good one—the beautiful and brainy owner of the only beauty shop in town created the reason herself.

Here's a happy combination of "box-office" title, a perfect "wow" of a story and pretty girls galore.

"Jesse James"

¶ There's a long, long trail of cash customers winding around Broadway and a block down 43rd St. these days. Waiting to see "Jesse James" in his S.R.O. debut at the long run Rialto. Jesse's back at his old game of hold-up—only this time it's New York pedestrian traffic. ¶ Hundreds stop on Broadway daily to study the covers of the old Jesse James dime novels framed on the front of the Rialto, then step up to the box office. (A good exploitation gag, these paper-backed thrillers, when you play the picture. Offer 50 cents or a dollar apiece for them and get the town talking. Newspaper advertising bearing down on the tough outlaw angle of the show and branding it "the true story of Jesse James" getting marvelous results in N.Y. Play title "Jesse James" up big.) ¶ Roosevelt, Chicago, set for long run of "Jesse James". All the big first runs in key points eager for picture. Yep, chalk up another hit for all-hit Paramount in "Jesse James".

Released same day as "Jesse James"—Bobby Vernon in "Wedding Wows"—Paramount-Christie Comedy. "Topsy-Turvy"—Paramount-Krazy Kat Cartoon. Paramount News—2 big issues. The whole show!

"CHANG"

¶ Same big Paramount hit week with "Jesse James" comes Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in "Now We're in the Air".The screen's first comedy team (in time and quality) has re-enlisted! They've quit fighting foney fires and they're again fighting (?) for Uncle Sam. Daffy doughboys in "Behind the Front", goofy gobs in "We're in the Navy Now"—they're loony Lindberghs in "Now We're in the Air". And how! ¶ You expect us to say "best Beery-Hatton yet". Well, we don't have to. See the picture; then you'll say it for us! The human being isn't born yet who can watch without splitting his medulla oblongata with laughter these boys taking the air in bronco-busting balloons, bilious biplanes and parachutes that even aces can't open. ¶ Luscious Louise Brooks twice the eyeful she usually is because she plays twin sisters. Frank Strayer production. Get all set for another Paramount record-menacer, gentlemen. And how thick and fast these Big Ones have been coming from Paramount this fall!

In New York, Los Angeles, Detroit, Baltimore, Dallas, Atlanta, Butte, Kansas City, Rochester, Montreal, Washington Oklahoma City, Orlando, Fla., Muscatine, Ia., but the list is endless — in the biggest cities in the land—in the small towns — EVERYWHERE — "THE CAT AND THE CANARY" is a record-smashing picture!

Cat and Canary' Proves Thrilling Screen Play

By Louella O. Parsons

"THE CAT AND THE CANARY" is no entertainment for a nervous, timid soul, who fears his own shadow. Neither is it recommended for those with an uneasy conscience, for it is filled with unexpected shocks and situations that demand a strong constitution. I had no idea the spookiness of the play could ever be successfully transmitted to the screen. Yet, Paul Leni, the director, seems to have turned the trick. Judging from the smothered shrieks of the audience at the Criterion last night, he gave them their money's worth of thrills.

Louella O. Parsons

True to his German training, Mr. Leni has utilized the giddy, dizzy swirl of the camera to increase the ghostly atmosphere. Just at first, I thought he was a little too generous with his swirling evolutions. I felt seasick and as if I were high in the air in a plane, soaring over the city. But I will say for him, he accomplishes his purpose—and puts the audience in a receptive state, where they expect anything to happen.

FEAR ILLUSTRATED

HOW I SELL M-G-M PICTURES!

By a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Salesman

1. ORGANIZATION: M-G-M Studio has more practical showmen-producers than all companies combined.

2. STARS: M-G-M has the star names that count today. The public wants them. The combined resources of M-G-M plus Hearst-Cosmopolitan, Hal Roach and other units is greatest of all.

3. M-G-M RECORD: Exhibitors want security. They value M-G-M's enviable record of three consecutive years of outstanding product.

4. PROMOTION: M-G-M gets back of its product with new promotion ideas all the time. Trackless Train and Leo, the M-G-M Flying Lion are among recent big M-G-M showmanship stunts.

5. YOUNG BLOOD: Exhibitors prefer to be with the company that's young and progressive, rather than those with routine methods and ideas.

The Yearly Trade Conference; The Future of Small Towns

By William A. Johnston

THE industry, in deciding to get together each year in a trade conference, has made a wise decision. It should have been done long ago.

This decision is a natural result of the recent Trade Practice Conference—one of its most important results, we believe. In spite of the fact that this is pre-eminently an industry of personalities, the much-needed contact among men in different branches of the business has been notable by its absence.

There can be no question but that friction and hostility—even hatred—are removed, or rendered less destructive, when men get together for discussions of their problems and the airing of grievances.

At the recent Government-supervised conference, small town exhibitors and highly-paid film executives met on a common ground, and told each other in plain English what their points of disagreement were. This had never happened in open meeting before, and the effect could not be otherwise than salutary.

Of course, not all the discussions need be controversial. Many of them must necessarily be so; but there are problems upon which the whole industry can, and will unite, and these may well form the basis for an industry-wide program of policy and ethics which will be greatly helpful.

If the Trade Practice Conference had accomplished nothing else, the bringing about of the proposed yearly meeting would justify all the effort expended by both the Government representatives and the industry.

The annual conference should be a business convention. We have had plenty of other kinds of conventions, and most of them have been lamentable failures. This new kind of convention has a big opportunity for service, and we are glad to add our indorsement of the idea.

AN automobile expert predicted, the other day, that within the next four years, practically the whole population of the United States will be on wheels. He went further and added that, by then, ninety per cent of the population would be within ten miles of a Federal highway and ninety-six per cent within the same distance of a hard-surfaced road.

In six years, the number of automobiles has jumped from 10,000,000 to 22,000,000, an increase of over 100 per cent. Now, note this:

The feature of this increase has been the spread of cars to the small towns, which now own 48 per cent of the nation's motor vehicles.

This analysis is highly important to the picture business. It involves the fate of the small town theatre. Obviously, when the whole country gets on wheels, the people in rural sections, aided by good roads, will travel more than ever.

The smallest theatres, it would seem, will disappear in favor of the theatres in natural trading centers, whatever their size. There will be fewer, but better, theatres. That seems certain.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin"

Reviewed by Edwin Schallert

Editor of the Los Angeles Times Preview and Special Correspondent of Motion Picture News

LOS ANGELES, October 23.—Success may be prophesied for "Uncle Tom's Cabin." In practically all the more general aspects this Universal production of the famous Harriet Beecher Stowe novel of slave life of the South lives up to expectations and, in several episodes, exceeds them. It is a picture of great moments chiefly, but it tells its story in a sweeping way, and presents a pictorial impression of the old days that is vivid and interesting.

If "Uncle Tom's Cabin" has faults, these are the sort that are typical of nearly all pictures that are long in the making, and that acquire an excess of footage along with a lavish expense. The expense will probably be readily forgotten in the popular triumph that this film will achieve, while the overplus of celluloid is evident only in those portions where apparently ruthless cutting has been done.

I saw "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the final preview given at the Criterion Theatre in Santa Monica before a Saturday night audience, and the reaction from this typical pleasure-seeking crowd was amazing, to say the least. The sobs during little Eva's death were almost audible, and certainly the sniffling was—plentifully so. The use-of-the-handkerchief vote during and immediately after this scene was over must have been better than 50 per cent. The stage play, in its palmy days, could perhaps hardly have done better.

Harry Pollard in his very deft direction, with an appealing little Topsy as his aide in the person of Mona Ray, has made this episode stand out as a gem—and this depite that the opportunity for building up the Topsy and Eva character was very slight, owing to the limitations of the footage allowed these two. What has been done in the death scene itself is excellent. Topsy's entrance with a single pathetic flower as tribute to the little girl she loved, and her reconciliation with Aunt Ophelia, are telling in their sentiment, and will be doubly that for those who have fond recollections of the story and the stage play.

The great dramatic scene of the picture, though, is the separation of Eliza from her child. Most of the action of the picture, it should be mentioned, centers about Eliza, George Harris and their youngster, and the events that relentlessly tear them apart and eventually bring them together again. In its treatment of this phase of the slave trade "Uncle Tom's Cabin" sounds the epical note.

The scene which shows the separation of Eliza from the little boy, Harry, takes place just before the end of the first part of the picture, and is a climax of tremendous dramatic effect. It is worthy to be compared with some of D. W. Griffith's finest scenes of suspense, or again with Melisande's frantic search in "The Big Parade."

In "Uncle Tom's Cabin" two slave traders decoy the boy away from his mother with promises of candy while they are aboard a river boat and the mother is sleeping. The youngster resists their efforts for a while, but finally capitulates, and is promptly seized and bundled off with the master to whom he has been sold. The mother awakens only after the ship docks and the youngster has been taken to land.

There follow moments of frantic excitement on her part, until she finds out where the youngster has gone, and then, overcoming all resistance to her efforts, she finally manages to dash down the gangplank and tears after the wagon which is carrying the boy away.

Very skilful, indeed, is the handling of this scene, for Pollard in his direction has kept the boy and the mother constantly in action.

The episode of Eliza crossing the ice; the death of Uncle Tom; and the bitter struggle between Eliza and her mother, Cassy, on the one hand, and Simon Legree on the other, are of the more conventional sort, and not perhaps calculated to arouse that unusual reaction which obtains for little Eva's death and the stealing of Eliza's child.

The entire film has been very well played with Margarita Fischer as Eliza; Arthur Edmund Carew as Harris, and George Seigmann, as a satisfactorily cruel Simon Legree doing considerable and valiant duty. Especial mention should be made of the remarkably dramatic Cassy portrayed by Eulalie Jensen, and the little Harry of Lassie Lou Ahern, while Virginia Gray as Little Eva is as sweet a child as has been seen in months on the screen. James B. Lowe appears as Uncle Tom, but the part seems of secondary interest. There are many others in the cast, with Lucien Littlefield as Marks and Adolph Miler as Haley among the more prominent.

Court Lacked Jurisdiction to Sentence Sievers

The three months' prison term and $1,000 fine assessed against William Sievers, St. Louis exhibitor who was charged with illegally transporting Tunney-Dempsey fight films, was set aside by Judge Faris on October 19th on the technical grounds that the prison term and fine were not properly imposed. James E. Carroll, attorney for Sievers, contended that the statute under which Sievers had been sentenced indicated punishment by "hard labor" and the under a decision of the United States Supreme Court any crime punishable by "hard labor" was classified as a capital or infamous crime. The proper procedure in such a case, therefore, was to have an indictment voted by the Federal grand jury.

In sustaining Carroll's demurrer Judge Faris admitted that the court lacked jurisdiction and suggested that the district attorney follow the prescribed procedure. District Attorney Brauer has announced that he will present the case to the grand jury.

Too Many Extras, Says Hollywood Casting Bureau

The extra ranks of Hollywood are so overcrowded that there is less than three days' work per week for extra girls, Dave Allen of the Central Casting Bureau in Hollywood states in a warning to film aspirants seized with a Hollywood complex. By relaying an idea of the situation to the public exhibitors can play a part in stopping the overcrowding. The opportunities for men extras are not much better than those of the girls.

Approximately 11,000 extras are registered with the bureau, and they must split some $6,566 expended by the bureau every day. Also sharing in this amount are the unregistered extras. According to a survey taken during the past six months, eight girls had four days of work a week while 21 girls had three days of work a week; 20 men averaged four days a week and 36 three days a week.

Ben Stainback, Prominent Southern Exhibitor, Dead

Ben Stainback, identified for 35 years with theatre activities in the South, died October 19th in Memphis, Tennessee. He was 68 years old.

Mr. Stainback was a prominent figure in Memphis' theatre circle for some time. He was manager for the Jake Wells theatres in Memphis, remaining with that company while it developed into the strongest operating company in the Memphis locality. He later became affiliated with Edward A. Schiller, now vice-president of Loew, Inc. Together they operated the Lyric Theatre, devoted to stock.

Keith in Indianapolis Adopts Combination Bill

The Keith theatre in Indianapolis is one of the last of the circuit to flop over from straight vaudeville to a combination vaudeville and picture policy. The change went into effect last week.

Inside Slants on the Industry

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

The Mirrors of Filmdom

AND now comes the Mark Strand, famous picture house of Broadway, with an announcement of a radical change in its music and stage program. With the Roxy, Capitol, Paramount and Strand all competing with attractions featured above those of the screen, one begins to wonder just what is what in the well-known movie industry whose well-spring of entertainment is still at Hollywood.

JUST a word here about Carl Edouarde, and then we'll resume the Battle of Broadway.

Since the Strand opened in 1914 and inaugurated the first great decade and more of dramatic photoplays, Carl Edouarde has been diligently, ably and unobtrusively at his post. A long, fine and enviable record; and one bound to continue. It is singular, indeed, that in all these years at the Strand Carl Edouarde has never sought nor had a line of publicity. The public looked upon him only as he waved his baton. Which was as he wanted it. A very able leader, his heart and skill wholly in his work.

IT would seem that Roxy has got Broadway somewhat drunk. And there's no telling, ever, just how far a jag will go. But the point is that Broadway can stand jags. We only hope that the good sober folks elsewhere in the land don't get contaminated.

It should be borne in mind that Roxy has 6,200 seats to play with. According to the figures given out, Roxy can stand the huge "nut" of over $80,000 a week and still make a whale of a profit.

Then there's another thing. New York has a daily transient population of two hundred thousand souls. Mostly these souls are pleasure seekers. They want what they can't get at home. Just that. So it doesn't follow that they will continue wanting a Broadway diet when they get back to the good old home life. Also, when in New York the purse strings are open.

WE try not to be conservative. This business the show business—abhors conservatism as Nature abhors a vacuum. Just the same we can't quite reconcile ourselves to this business of pushing the stage out in front of the screen.

Maybe the pictures don't hold the public fancy today. We hear that from some good and true friends of ours. Straight picture bills are getting a good licking here and there in some inland cities.

Which is something to ponder about.

Maybe we need the sound movie to put a new flavor into the screen fare, as we have pointed out before. Maybe that will be the story of next year.

Maybe it will be some other great technical advance.

But, if pictures are not hitting the mark, how can we continue to support that child of Gargantuan financial appetite called Hollywood? The money for Hollywood's coffers has got to come from the screen, not from the stage. If the public, for instance, pays Roxy $105,000 a week for entertainment, what percentage of the receipts go to Hollywood?

But then, of course, Roxy is not a criterion. Is the Roxy really a picture house, anyway?

TIFFANY is stepping right along. Having done the large and ambitious job of national distribution, M. H. Hoffman now announces John M. Stahl as vice-president supervising production, with a cohort of such directors as Marcel de Sano, King Baggot, Louis Gasnier, George Archainaud, Phil Rosen and Al Raboch.

Further announcement, too, of Tiffany's Third Dimension process will, we believe, be shortly made. Exhibitors will follow with interest the future of this enterprising producer-distributor.

John Stahl has an enviable record. His pictures, one by one, bear the unfailing stamp of quality production. He is an important acquisition to any producing organization. Our best wishes to Tiffany-Stahl Productions.

THE other day we bumped into Earl Rossman, one of the genuinely adventurous and interesting men of this generation. He had just come from a conference with Commander Byrd, with whom he plans to go next year on Byrd's flight to the South Pole.

A short time ago, Mr. Rossman returned from Abyssinia, where he filmed some unusual views for Pathe and made such a personal hit with the natives that they appointed him a General in the Abyssinian army. When he goes with Byrd, Mr. Rossman will be known as Lieut. Rossman, having been commissioned a Lieutenant, Senior grade, in the U. S. Naval Reserve.

And between now and the time of the South Pole trip, he is going back to Alaska, where he filmed "Kivalina of the Icelands." His new Alaskan picture will be on an ambitious scale. Its theme is highly interesting—man in combat with the primitive, with the tremendous Alaskan scenery and natural forces as background. Rossman is a real pioneer. Like Robert Flaherty and Martin Johnson and Merian Cooper and Ernest Schoedsack, he goes to the ends of the earth for novel and original screen material.

HERE is a true story from which we will let you draw your own moral:

A prominent film man, with excellent production experience coupled with rare business ability, was engaged as a studio executive by one of the big companies. When he arrived in Hollywood, he was amazed to find that the film head who had engaged him, had forgotten all about it. So he waited around six weeks while the film head made up his mind what he wanted him to do.

After this extraordinary delay, he was given the supervision of one of the company's most important productions, and, for the first time on record, this particular unit came under the wire on time with the picture, and below the estimated budget cost.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST, [illegible] newspapers, came out editorially the other day in favor of Federal Censorship of pictures.

The chief point of Mr. Hearst's argument [illegible] Federal Censorship would do away with State censorship and place the whole matter of film regulation in the hands of a central board. He says:

The two illustrious Griffiths of the film world—Corinne and D. W.—have traced their family trees and found that they are seventeenth cousins or something. The two are also fellow artists on the United Artists lot

Louis B. Mayer, M-G-M vice-president, congratulates Nicholas M. Schenck upon his ascension to the presidency of M-G-M. J. Robert Rubin and Mrs. Nicholas M. Schenck are the spectators

This ferocious little tough "egg" is Frankie Darro, who shows many other threatening expressions in F B O's "Little Mickey Grogan"

What could be a more appropriate reminder of the arrival of Hallowe'en than a glimpse of Dorothy Devore, Educational comedy star, in readiness for any sort of frolic

The spirituelle Mary Philbin will interpret a Victor Hugo heroine in Universal's production of "The Man Who Laughs"

During the filming of "A Texas Steer," his comedy of politics for First National, Will Rogers was host to Art Goebel, winner of the recent Hawaiian Dole flight

"The board of one State eliminates certain parts of a picture and the board of another State eliminates different parts, and so on through the whole list of censorship boards; wherefore a producer cannot know what kind of picture to make to meet the requirements of the censors or what kind to appeal to the preferences of the public, or what kind of incidents properly to include in his production or what kind to omit.

"The whole system of State censorship is a complete and expensive failure—expensive to the public in maintaining something that is useless to them—expensive to the industry in compelling all kinds of eliminations and alterations in the picture, which accomplish nothing of practical value.

"The only kind of censorship which could operate successfully is Federal censorship, one important national board, composed of representatives from every State. These representatives should be intelligent, educated, experienced men and women with moral but liberal minds."

MR. HEARST introduces nothing new in the argument that Federal censorship would do away with film inquisition by the States. That argument is at least fifteen years old, and is just as invalid now as it was then. In the first place, the States do not so easily resign their powers, particularly in the matter of the regulation of industries.

Mr. Hearst must know, for example, that the Federal Anti-Trust laws have not superseded, nor will they, anti-trust laws in the states. It is all very well to claim that the State censorships would be abolished. Frankly, we do not believe, in the light of past history, that they would be. Furthermore, it is not at all improbable that the passage of a Federal law would bring about new State censorships, for the very good reason that this sort of thing is contagious; and, if it weren't of its own accord, the professional reformers, with whom Mr. Hearst is now lined up, would see to it that it was.

NOTHING that Mr. Hearst says in his long editorial can change the fact that censorship is wrong in principle, un-American and bigoted. It would be no less so if administered by one board.

As to the statement that producers don't know what kind of pictures the public prefers: do we understand that Mr. Hearst is suggesting that Federal censorship will teach them what the public wants? How is a censor board to know anything more about it than the producers do? Or as much?

Some pretty bright people in this industry work long hours trying to make pictures the public wants. They don't always succeed, of course; but they work at the job, and they find out from the public at the theatre box-office what is wanted and what is not.

All you would actually get, from a censorship board composed of representatives from all the States, would be the opinions of forty-eight people, and nothing more. These might be valuable if they were not the opinions of censors. But a censor is a censor. He is not, and cannot be, endowed with any supernatural insight into picture quality. Would Mr. Hearst like to have a censor board of forty-eight tell him how to run his newspapers?

WE are surprised that Mr. Hearst, as the publisher of two screen news weeklies, should lend his great influence to advocating censorship. A news weekly is a screen newspaper, printed on celluloid, instead of being printed on paper, as Mr. Hearst's other newspapers are. Of course, Mr. Hearst would not want his weeklies censored. On that point, his argument would no doubt be that the weekly is in a different situation. It would be unfair to censor news. And so it would be.

But the photoplay—which is what Mr. Hearst wants censored—is also a form of publication, no less than the news weekly. One is news; the other fiction. The photoplay corresponds to the fiction magazine, and is most certainly published when it is thrown on the screen. And Mr. Hearst himself is, or has been, a producer of photoplays.

Curiously enough, Mr. Hearst also publishes fiction magazines. Do we understand that he wants them censored? Oh, no; that is different. But how is it different? In order for a story to be published it does not have to be printed on paper; it can be, and is, also printed on celluloid. Both are publications, one no less than the other.

The screen photoplay, as the publication of a fiction story, is subject to the same libel laws that govern newspaper or magazine publication. So are the news weeklies.

Mr. Hearst gets himself into the inconsistent and absurd situation of advocating censorship for one form of publication in which he is engaged and opposing it for the other. Coming from a great publisher, this is rather ridiculous.

"THE BATTLE OF HOLLYWOOD," by which is generally meant the studio folk vs. the producers on the question of salaries, goes on merrily. James Kirkwood, well-known player and director, declares the producers won't win the fight.

"Producers would have you believe stars fix their own salaries. Nothing could be more preposterous," said Mr. Kirkwood in an interview in Kansas City.

"It's purely a question of supply and demand. The star can ask a high salary if he means money at the box office. The producer may bury a player. He may give him a thankless role and put his name in small type on the title, but if that player is the biggest drawing factor in the film the theatre owners who buy that product will emphasize his appearance, and their emphasis will be but a reflection of the popular preference.

"The movie industry never will get away from the fact it is selling personalities. It is selling stories, of course, but it is selling those stories expressed through actors."

Orpheum Battles Loew's and Publix in West

Changed Policies and Lower Prices Increase Already Lively Competition

A BITTER battle is being waged out in some of the western cities between the Orpheum and Loew's and the Orpheum and Publix. It is bringing about a radical change in policies and reduced admissions on the part of the Orpheum, better shows generally, and it is consequently all reacting to the benefit of the patrons of the houses.

Out in Kansas City Loew's is scheduled to open the new Midland on October 28th and to take over management of the Royal and Newman from Publix. Almost simultaneously the Orpheum is slashing its top from $1.50 to $1 and at the same time is adding first run pictures to the program. Situated one block from the Midland, the keenest competition will be offered.

De Luxe picture presentations will be the policy of Loew's Midland, while the Orpheum will continue its combination policy. The Newman will become the long-run house, while the Royal will play Paramount, M-G-M, United Artists and other product.

The Orpheum Theatre management in Des Moines, in line with the policy of the Orpheum Theatre Circuit, where their competition has a stage orchestra, is now making a special stage attraction of their orchestra and billing them as a stage orchestra. The competition between the Orpheum and Publix shows in Des Moines is becoming more marked all the time and the battle between these two strong entertainment policies is resulting in stronger bills and a decided money's worth of entertainment for the patrons of both houses. The Capitol in Des Moines, with the popular Jimmy Ellard as the personality man for the Publix Shows, has been lining them up outside the box office en masse and the crowds which stand in front of the Orpheum on Saturday and Sunday have been the marvel of the theatre men.

The Orpheum with the beginning of the winter season is booking in much heavier bills and the official statement is made by E. F. Lampman, manager of the Orpheum, to the effect that the vaudeville bill will carry a real headliner every week, supported by the best vaudeville acts it is possible to book in this country, with better photoplays, including some of the superfeatures.

Publix this week carries twenty people in their stage show attraction, "A Syncopated Menu," which celebrates the 500th performance of Jimmy Ellard and his band in Des Moines.

Publix announces that they will rely upon bigger shows and more pretentious units to bring in the patrons. The "Paul Ash policy" of having a permanent master of ceremonies and a stage band co-operating with the travelling units has brought about a big increase in the patronage at the Capitol.

New Philly Theatre Will Be Leased to Stanley

The sale of The Empire Theatre and adjoining premises, from 4648 to 4658 Frankford Ave., Philadelphia, occupying a lot 96 x 247 ft. to the Mercantile & Theatre Properties, Inc., which will improve the lot with a moving picture theatre having a seating capacity of 3,500, featured Philadelphia realty news. Hoffman & Henon, architects, are preparing plans for the new theatre, which will be in the Byzantine style of architecture. The theatre will be leased to the Stanley Company of America, which already holds under lease three other theatres built and owned by the Mercantile & Theatre Properties, Inc. Work on the new theatre will be begun at once and it is expected that it will be ready to open in the fall of next year.

William Farnum to Return to Screen in Fox Picture

William Farnum, for five years on the legitimate stage, has returned to pictures. He will play the role of the adventurous citizen in Donn Byrne's "Hangman's House," which has been adapted by Fox Films, for the screen. Production will be started immediately with John Ford occupying the director's chair.

In the cast with Farnum will be June Collyer, Earle Foxe and Charles Morton.

740,000 Weekly Attendance at Eleven Broadway Picture Houses

COMPILATIONS made by Keith-Albee and Pathe show that approximately 740,000 people should see the eight Pathe feature pictures which will be seen in Broadway, New York, houses and the Pathe short subjects in three other houses the week starting October 29th. These are the estimated weekly attendances at these eleven Broadway picture and combination houses.

The attendance figures in the compilation are given as follows: Broadway, 45,000; Cameo, 28,000; Paramount, 92,000; Loew's State, 85,000; Gaiety, 21,000; Strand, 78,000; Hippodrome, 90,000; Roxy, 110,000; Capitol, 105,000; Palace, 35,000; Colony, 51,000.

In and Out of Town

B. P. FINEMAN, associate producer in executive control of the West Coast studio of Paramount, arrived in New York this week. He will spend several days at the home office in conference. Within the next ten days he will return to California.

JAMES R. GRAINGER, general sales manager of Fox Films, left last Friday for Washington on the first lap of a six weeks' tour of exchange centers to personally start a sales drive that will run until December 19th.

R. S. DAWES, sales manager for Fox Films Ltd. of England, is in New York to confer with home office officials on the product for the new season in England. He sails for home in November.

LUDWIG BERGER, German director under contract with Fox Films, arrived in New York last Friday on the SS Resolute. After a few days in New York he goes to Hollywood to start work on "Don't Marry," his first production for Fox.

CARL LAEMMLE, JR., and Edward Montagn, Universal scenario editor, left New York last Sunday for Universal City where young Laemmle will spend five days on three stories.

DERMAN STERN left New York the past week for an extensive sales trip of Eastern exchanges. Among the offices he will visit are Buffalo, Albany, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit.

E. E. SHAUER, general manager of the foreign department of Paramount, and Mrs. Shauer, sail on the SS Aquitania Wednesday for a lengthy European visit. Accompanying them are Eugene Zukor, brother of the Paramount president, Mrs. Zukor, and Melville A. Shauer, general manager of the Ad Sales department of Paramount.

AL LICHTMAN, United Artists' vice-president and general manager of distribution for United States and Canada, returned to New York Monday, October, 24th, from Minneapolis, where he closed a deal with Pantages on seven of his company's pictures.

HARRY DARMOUR, who was in New York last week conferring with executives of F B O, returned to the Pacific Coast this week. Six of the Mickey McGuire comedy series which he is producing for F B O have been completed.

CAROLINE GENTRY, director of films for the Roosevelt Memorial Association, Inc., sails with her assistant, Mae Manning, on the Leviathan on Saturday. Miss Gentry is taking with her several films produced by the Association which will be shown in England and throughout the Continent.

GEORGE BANCROFT, Paramount player, and his wife arrived last week from Hollywood to spend a short vacation in New York. They are staying at the Hotel Roosevelt.

MONTE BLUE has terminated his vacation in New York and started back for the Pacific Coast to be in time for his next picture for Warner Bros.

A. GRIFFITH GREY, head of the Paramount roadshow department, will leave for Chicago on Tuesday to launch "Wings" on its eight weeks' engagement at the Erlanger there.

Stanley and Freihofer in Building Race

A BUILDING race is seen between the Stanley and Friehofer interests in Philadelphia. Stanley has leased the Northwood, now nearing completion, while Friehofer is constructing a theatre at 69th and Ashby Road. Friehofer is said to have plans for the erection of five houses, one to be in West Philadelphia, one in South Philadelphia, one at 6700 Broad St., one at Germantown and Lehigh Avenues, and the site of the fifth to be determined upon later.

The rivalry between the two competitors has been enhanced by the breakdown of negotiations for the taking over of the rival chain by Stanley and a retaliatory building campaign which is now in progress. If the five new Friehofer houses are built, Stanley is expected to build theatres nearby in retaliation. Friehofer's building campaign amounts to a practical declaration of war against Stanley, following the recent truce.

While an appraisal of the Freihofer interests was being made, the truce was effected and negotiations for their purchase were made by Stanley. In addition to the price thought too high by Stanley, all cash was insisted upon in the transaction by Friehofer, to which objections were raised by Stanley. One of the barriers to the final consummation of the Stanley-Friehofer deal is said to have been the all-cash ultimatum.

47 Films Censored in Germany During August

There were 47 feature films censored in Germany during the month of August, 1927, of which 26 were German made and 21 foreign (13 from America) as compared with 25 domestic and 10 foreign in July, and 25 domestic and 12 foreign in June, 1927, according to reports received at the Department of Commerce, Motion Picture Section, Washington, D. C.

The total length of all films censored during August (features, educationals and news-reels) was 169,570 meters, as against 136,064 meters in July, and 113,378 meters in June, 1927. Of the total length of 169,570 meters 56 per cent were feature films and 44 per cent educational and news-reels. The German share of the total number of feature films censored during August, 1927, was 55 per cent, as against 70 per cent, during July, 1927. Of the 253 films of all classes censored in August, 1927, 55 were prohibited for showing to youth. Of these 33 were German, 13 American and 9 productions of other countries.

"Confetti," English Film, Coming to United States

The first British-made First National, film "Confetti," presenting Jack Buchanan and Anette Benson in the leads, will soon arrive in the United States in the custody of Bruce Johnston, foreign manager of First National Pictures, who returns from England within the next few weeks. The picture is an adaptation of the story by Douglas Furber and was made under the direction of Graham Cutts and the production management of Harry Ham. Several of its carnival scenes were taken at Nice, France.

Trade Commission Has Broad Powers

A Clear Statement of the Functions of This Important Agency of the Government

By Joseph Quittner

(Editor's Note.—Some confusion seems to exist in the industry as to the exact duties, powers and procedure of the Federal Trade Commission. They are clearly set forth in the accompanying article by Mr. Quittner, who is an attorney-at-law, and an exhibitor, being the owner of the State and Stratton theatres, Middletown, N. Y.)

THE Federal Trade Commission was created September, 1914, by the enactment by Congress of a law known as the "Federal Trade Commission Act" and was part of the so-called Federal Anti-Trust Laws of which the Sherman Act, The Clayton Act and the Webb Export Act were a part. The powers of the Federal Trade Commission are broader than that of any agency of the Government and are not hemmed in by the usual technicalities surrounding Government Departments. There are five commissioners. The Commission may by one or more of its members or by such examiner as it may designate prosecute any inquiry necessary to its duties in any part of the United States.

Section 5 of the Act states: "That unfair methods of competition in commerce are hereby declared unlawful."

The Commission has power and is directed to prevent persons, partnerships or corporations, except banks and common-carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce, from using unfair methods of competition in commerce; concretely, the Commission is the weapon which the Government has in enforcing the provisions of the anti-trust laws.

If at any time the Commission shall have reason to believe any person, partnership or corporation has been or is using any unfair method of competition in commerce and if it shall appear to the commission that a proceeding by it in respect thereof would be in the interest of the public, a complaint stating the charges is served upon the person, partnership or corporation and a hearing is had. Not only may the Commission institute proceedings on its own initiative but any person may communicate with the commission by letter or otherwise and cause proceedings to be instituted. If after a hearing the Commission is of the opinion that the method of competition is unfair it makes a report in writing setting forth its findings of fact and issues an order requiring such person, partnership or corporation to cease and desist from using such method of competition. The transcript of the record is then filed in the Circuit Court of Appeals of the United States but until such transcript of the record is so filed the Commission may at any time modify or set aside in whole or in part any report or order issued by it.

If a person, partnership or corporation fails to obey the order, the Commission may apply to a Circuit Court of Appeals for enforcement of the order and the Court may affirm, modify or set aside the order of the Commission. The findings of the Commission as to the facts, if supported by the testimony, are conclusive.

The Court, however, may under certain circumstances, order additional evidence to be received by the Commission and thereupon the commission may modify its finding of fact or make new findings by reason of additional evidence taken and shall file such modified or new findings with the Court, which shall have the same force and effect as if the findings were original.

Upon the application of the Attorney General and at the request of the Commission, the District Court of the United States has jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus commanding any person or corporation to comply with the provisions of the Federal Trade Commission Act or any order of the Commission made in pursuance thereof.

The finding of the Commission are subject to appeal to a Circuit Court of Appeals and thereafter to the Supreme Court of the United States.

All cases of the Federal Trade Commission are given a preference over all other cases pending in the Circuit Court of Appeals and must be expedited in every way.

Paramount Earnings for Three Quarters of '27 Equal Entire Year of '26

PARAMOUNT'S financial statement for the third quarter of 1927 estimates its profits at $2,100,000 for the period and brings its estimated profits for the first nine months of the year to approximately $5,587,000 or practically the same as the net profits for the entire year of 1926, which amounted to $5,601,000.

The $2,100,000 figure for the third quarter of 1927 includes the undistributed share of earnings of the Balaban & Katz Corporation, a 65 per cent owned subsidiary, and also shows all charges and taxes deducted. After providing for preferred stock dividends this amounts to $3.31 per share on 588,431 shares of common stock outstanding, making a total profit per share for the first nine months of 1927 equal to $8.83.

After deducting preferred stock dividends, the net profit for the third quarter of 1927 is 118 per cent greater than that of the third quarter of 1926, with an increase of stock outstanding of about 2 per cent over the corresponding period of 1926.

Keith-Albee To Invade Poli Strongholds

Sale of Chain Ends Obligations and Sends Agents Scurrying for Sites

THE Keith-Albee circuit is at last to invade the towns controlled by the Poli chain, as the result of the recent sale of the Poli chain to a syndicate headed by Max Shoolman of Boston, whom it is believed is acting probably for the Stanley Company of America. This is according to a statement issued by E. F. Albee, president of the Keith-Albee circuit.

For the past twenty years the Poli chain has booked Keith-Albee vaudeville acts into its houses and it has been against the policy of Keith-Albee to enter into competition with its customers. According to the statement of Mr. Albee this obligation is now ended and agents of his company are already seeking sites for theatres in New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Bridgeport, Worcester, Waterbury, Meriden and other strongholds in which the Poli circuit operates.

The Poli circuit has been on the theatrical market for the past several years, and among others Keith-Albee has been approached with a view to its purchase, but felt that the price was too high. For several months the Stanley company was said to have been dickering for the purchase of the circuit, but it was declared the deal was called off when Poli refused to submit his books.

In announcing the invasion of the Poli territory by Keith-Albee, Mr. Albee made the following statement:

"The Poli Circuit has been on the market for the past two years and every theatrical man in the country has been approached to purchase the same, but account of the price being so high it has been hard for them to realize that there could be any profit after the carrying charges were deducted from tthe earnings.

"Mr. Poli has booked his vaudeville attractions in the Keith-Albee office for the past twenty years or more. It has been the custom of this office to respect and protect their clients' interests, therefore we have remained out of this territory during all this time. Great opportunities have from time to time been placed before the Keith officials by bankers and other interests to erect for them a Keith-Albee house in Mr. Poli's territory.

"Now that this announcement of a sale has been made, the Keith-Albee office has no further obligations, and agents are at work securing sites for the erection of Keith-Albee major theatres, which are considered to be the finest in the world.

"Other interests will be connected with the Keith-Albee in this venture, and New England will have the benefit of the class of shows that appear at the Palace Theatre in New York and all other high-class theatres of the Keith-Albee Circuit, also pictures from the various important producers including those affiliated with the Keith-Albee institution. The public will be allowed to contribute and participate in the earnings."

Ten Features From Pathe During November

Four De Mille productions, three Westerns, two dramas and a feature comedy are listed as November releases by Pathe. The four De Mille pictures which head the array are "The Forbidden Woman," "Turkish Delight," "The Main Event" and "My Friend From India."

On November 6th, "The Forbidden Woman," starring Jetta Goudal, will be released. Paul Stein directed with Joseph Schildkraut and Victor Varconi in the male leads. This feature opens at the Paramount in New York on October 29th. November 13th will be the release date of "Turkish Delight," directed by Paul Sloane and starring Rudolph Schildkraut, "Hoof Marks" and "Flying Luck."

"Hoof Marks" stars Jack Donovan with Peggy Montgomery in the chief feminine role; Tenny Wright directed. Monty Banks, supported by Jean Arthur, is featured in "Flying Luck" which Herman Raymaker directed.

"The Main Event," "Gold From Weepah" and "Discord" will be released on November 20th. The first stars Vera Reynolds with Charles Delaney the male lead; they were directed by William K. Howard. The attraction will play the Roxy Theatre in New York the week of October 29th. Bill Cody is starred in "Gold From Weepah" and was directed by William Bertram. "Discord" co-features Lil Dagover and Gosta Ekman and was made in Sweden by Gustav Molander.

On November 27th, "My Friend From India," "His Foreign Wife" and "Roarin' Broncs" will be issued. Elinor Fair and Franklin Pangborn are in the first production which E. Mason Hopper directed. The second offering has Edna Murphy and Wallace McDonald, directed by H. P. McCarthy. "Roarin' Broncs" is a Buffalo Bill, Jr., vehicle directed by Richard Thorpe with Ann McKay in the principal feminine role.

Laurier Proprietor Found Guilty of Manslaughter

Ameen Lawand, proprietor, Michal Arie and Camil Bazy, employees of the Laurier Palace Theatre, Montreal, Quebec, were last Tuesday found guilty of manslaughter as a result of the death of 78 children in a fire and panic at the Palace on January 9th last. Because of the number of challenges much time was lost in empaneling the jury, which deliberated 25 minutes before arriving at a decision. The convicted men will be sentenced in November by Justice Wilson, before whom the trial opened in the Court of King's Bench in Montreal on October 20th.

Relatives of the victims, civic officials and spectators crowded the courtroom. Evidence was offered by juvenile survivors of the tragedy, firemen, policemen and other witnesses. Testimony was given regarding the jamming of the stairway from the balcony, which had been crowded with children on the afternoon of the disaster. The question of the theatre's license was also investigated, it being shown that the civic license was under suspension at the time of the fire, due to difficulties with regard to the collection of the amusement tax.

Ernest Bertrand, K. C., conducted the prosecution, and counsel representing the defense were Peter Bercovitch, K. C., Lucien Gendron and Oscar Gagnon.

Editing Finished on Two First National Pictures

Cutting and titling has been completed on "The Gorilla" and "Man Crazy," two First National productions. The first picture, a mystery-farce, left the Burbank cutting rooms last week and was followed a few days later by "Man Crazy." Both of these films are scheduled for release in November.

Cutting and assembling is in progress on "A Texas Steer" and on "The Private Life of Helen of Troy." Will Rogers is assisting in the editing of his vehicle, writing most of the titles himself.

Last week "French Dressing," Robert Kane's production, was placed into work. On November 17th, "The Noose" also got under way.

Dolores Costello to Star in "Tenderloin"

As soon as work has been completed on "Glorious Betsy," Warner Bros. will begin production on "Tenderloin," Dolores Costello's next starring vehicle which will be an extended run production. The story was written by Darryl Francis Zanuck and is about the underworld. Michael Curtiz has been chosen to direct.

Universal's "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Premiere Nov. 4th at Central in N. Y.

UNIVERSAL'S big production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will have its world premiere at the Central Theatre in New York, Friday evening, November 4th. The picture was in production for two years, and is said to have cost almost $2,000,000. It was directed by Harry Pollard.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld is arranging the musical setting and, he declares, it will be the best any motion picture has ever had. Details of the presentation have not yet been announced, but they are promised to be of an elaborate nature. Carl Laemmle had planned to leave for California this week, but has decided to remain over for the premiere.

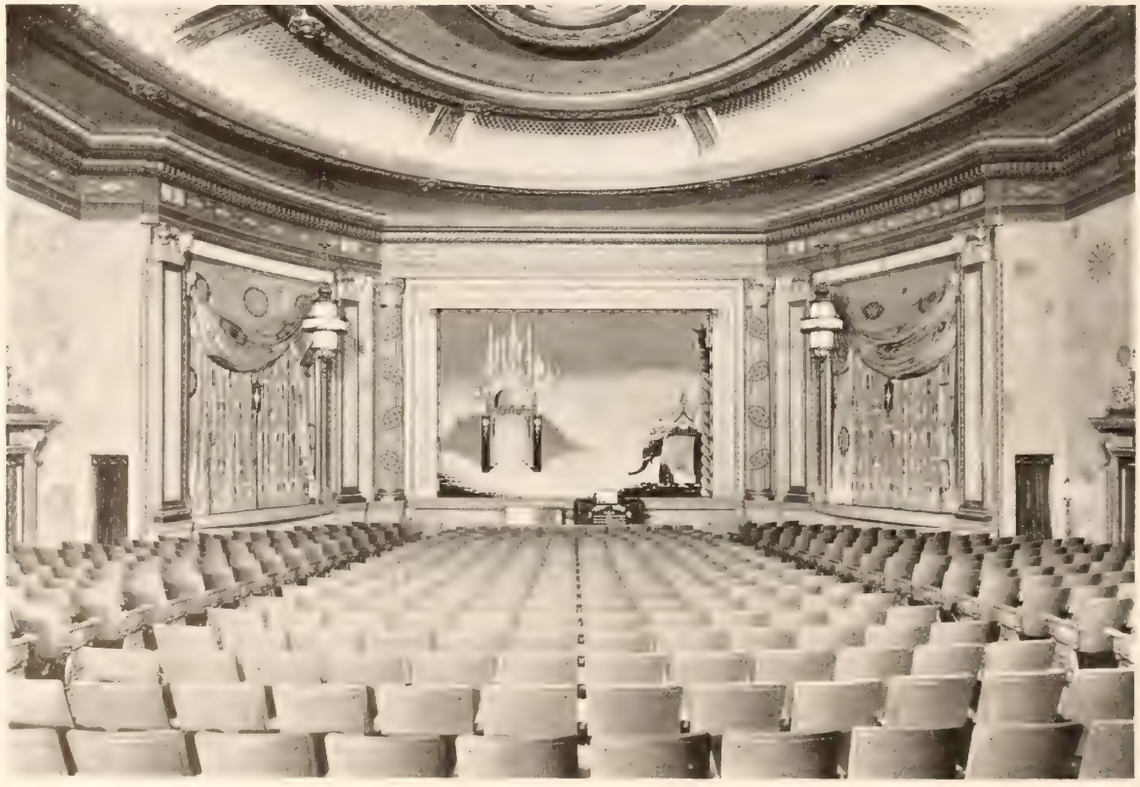
The Bagdad of Seattle

Deservedly ranking as one of the most beautiful suburban theatres of the Northwest, the new Bagdad recently opened in Seattle by Jensen-Von Herberg, achieves a distinctive note in theatre design and decoration. Above is shown a view of the main lobby [illegible]

GENERALLY conceded to be one of the most magnificent of the smaller suburban neighborhood theatres in the entire Pacific Northwest, the Bagdad Theatre, in Seattle, is operated by Jensen-VonHerberg.

The new theatre represents an investment of $500,000 in the building and more than $150,000 in equipment and furnishings. It has a seating capacity in excess of 1,000 persons.



The Bagdad is unique in that it has no balcony, and the mezzanine floor has loge accommodations only, thus giving an idea of the size of the lower floor. The seats are approached from four unusually wide aisles, and are duplicates of the seats recently installed in the new Oriental Theatre at Chicago, by the Heywood-Wakefield company.

The decorative beauty of the new theatre is decidedly impressive. The motif is Persian throughout, and this note has been maintained in the interior and ceiling decorations, the rich draperies, carpets and chair upholstery. The color scheme is a delicate blending of orange, blue and green. A contrasting note in drapes is struck in the two handsome green and white tapestries which cover the organ grills on each side of the proscenium arch.

The stage is fifty feet wide and twenty-six feet deep, unusually large for a neighborhood playhouse.

Directly responsible for the beauty and completeness of the theatre is B. F. Shearer, head of the Interior Decorating Department of the National Theatre Supply Company, who furnished practically all of the equipment.

BRINGING BROADWAY LUXURY TO UPPER MANHATTAN

Loew's Inwood Theatre Provides Sumptuous Setting for Neighborhood Presentations

THOUGH not on Broadway, the Inwood theatre, located at Dykeman Street, New York City, is one of the newer type of luxurious picture palaces, which, while executed on a smaller scale, are in point of beauty, equipment and comfort the equal of the palatial institutions of the famous Rialto of Manhattan. This well designed and finely appointed playhouse is operated by the Loew circuit and is done from plans by Eugene De Rosa.

A large marquee covers the entire sidewalk, providing protection during inclement wheather to the patrons of this theatre. Surrounding the entrance are numerous frames for the display of photographs of stars and artists appearing in present and coming introductions.

Passing the entrance one goes through a series of lobbies, each surpassing the one before in size and the magnificence of its appointments. The walls are lined with imported marble of a most expensive and beautiful kind. Crystal chandeliers flood the lobbies with a soft golden light. The ornaments are magnificently encrusted with gold and large mirrors reflect the splendor and the glory of the lobbies.

From the lobby we enter the auditorium, having a great length and width. A paneled wainscot is carried around the side and rear walls and the wall space above is divided into panels of which there are four large ones on either side that are covered with brocade in a beautiful shade of old rose. The smaller panels are filled with ornamentation in polychrome relief. Above the panels is the deep handsomely enriched cornice in tones of warm grays with all ornamentation in gold leaf. The outstanding feature of the ceiling is the great dome. In a cove running around inside the dome are arranged concealed lights for the illumination of the dome. There are also panels of art glass in the ceiling which are illuminated with unseen colored lights in the same manner as the dome and they can be made to work in unison with the dome lights or operated independently. For the further illumination of the auditorium a magnificent chandelier is suspended from the center of the dome, with the lights arranged in three tiers upon arms projecting out from the central stem. Besides the dome with its decorated cornice and applied ornament, the ceiling is otherwise decorated with running ornament and ornamental panels in plaster relief. Tones of ivory and warm grays predominate in the ceiling with rich dull colors appearing in some of the panels to give sparkle to the work and to set off the ornament which is in gold leaf.

Handsome, comfortable chairs have been provided and by a study of sight lines and the way the auditorium has been planned, a clear and unobstructed view of the stage can be had from every seat.

The curtain, of silk damask with gold fringe, is of the same shade as that in the panels on the side walls. The stage setting is of rich specially selected and unusually fine imported materials in colors to form an appropriate and pleasing background for the soloists who will appear.

The ladies' retiring rooms are tastefully decorated and supplied with rugs furniture similar to appointment of all high class houses. A recessed marble drinking fountain is located on the promenade, which has also been embellished with a handsome stone fireplace having a mirror set in the panel over it.

The greatest attention has been given to the subject of heating and ventilating the auditorium. Four immense Typhoon Breeze-Makers, every one over eight feet in diameter, are located at the front end of the theatre, directly over the screen.

The New Cinema Palace at the National Capitol

Fox Theatre in the National Press Building an Achievement in Theatre Planning; Designed by C. W. and Geo. L. Rapp, Architects

Auditorium sidewall treatment and lighting fixtures are a striking feature of the new Fox theatre, as indicated in the photo above

HOUSING 3,000 seats in an edifice of the finest modern construction and providing every modern feature of the palatial motion picture theatre, the Fox Theatre in the National Press Building at Washington, D. C., had its formal opening under the auspicious circumstances that event would seem to warrant.

The launching of the house on its career as an important public institution was an occasion of no little significance in the motion picture industry, for it marked the entry into the lists of super theatres another great playhouse devoted to the screen form of entertainment.

It has been duly chronicled in an earlier issue that the President of the United States, high government officials and members of the diplomatic corps were present at the opening performance.

Here we publish some of the first pictures of the completed work of architects, engineers, builders and artisans.

The theatre is unique of its kind in many respects. The construction is orchestra, mezzanine and balcony, with the main entrance leading directly to the mezzanine level—an unusual feature, which the architects, C. W. and Geo. L. Rapp, have turned to account from the utilitarian standpoint, and the benefits of which will accrue to the house attendants in distributing crowds in the three main sections—orchestra, mezzanine and balcony.

The newest type of equipment for presentations of screen and stage have been installed—elevating orchestra pit, disappearing cyclorama foot lights, etc.

The general decorative scheme is carried out in antique ivory and gold, with red extensively used in carpeting, draperies and upholsteries.

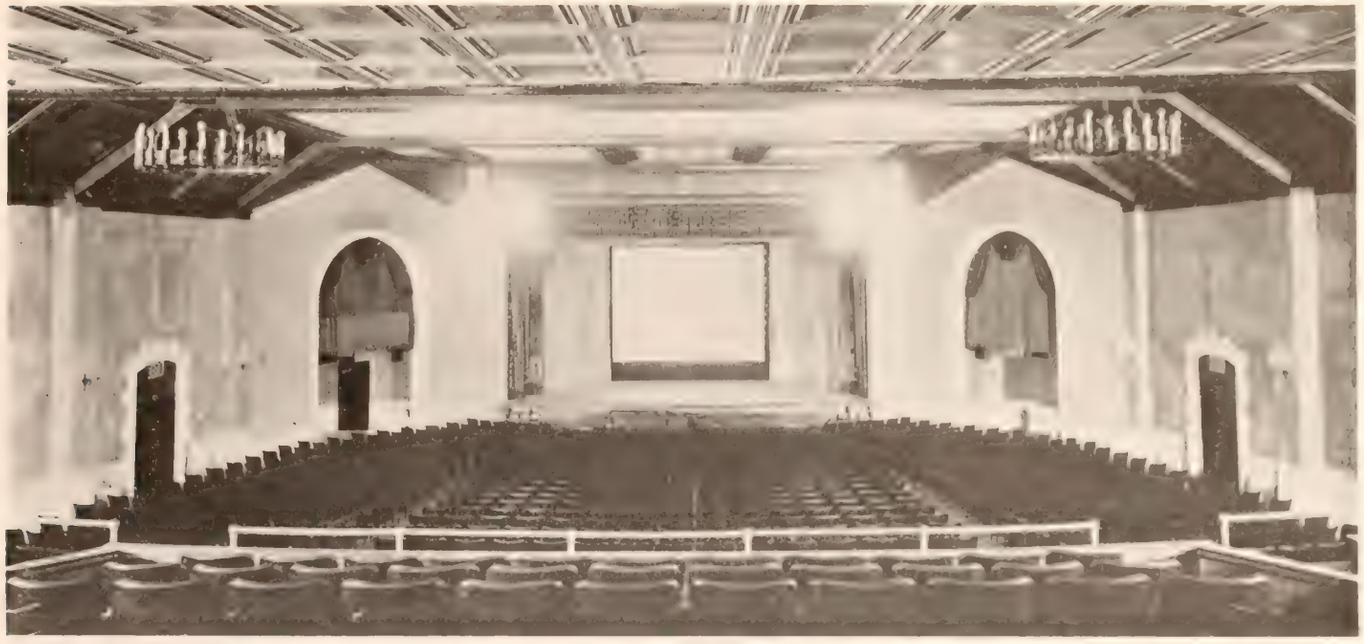
Picture Record of Building Progress of Fox Theatre in Detroit



Highlights in the building progress of the magnificent theatre which the Fox company is erecting in Detroit are illustrated in photos on this page. The picture above shows the early stages of excavation work on the site at Woodward Ave., between Columbia and Montcalm Sts., taken last December. Below is a view of the building taken September 14, with the auditorium, which will be devoted to motion picture entertainment outlined in the steel skeleton of the lower portion of this huge theatre and office building.

The exterior will be richly colored, the ornamental spandles being worked out in polychrome and terra cotta is to be moulded for the base course, in the ornamental windows and for the corners and fineals in the brick field. The theatre is to be completed early in 1928.

THEATRE DESIGN IN HARMONY WITH SURROUNDINGS

Edwards Theatre at Easthampton in English Colonial Style

THE New Edwards Theatre in the village of East Hampton, located on the tip of Long Island, has many points of interest regarding both construction and design. This Stadium type theatre, in the English Colonial style, has a seating capacity of slightly over a thousand, with seven hundred-odd chairs in the orchestra floor and three hundred in the stadium. In style it is admirably suited to its locality, fitting into the general architectural scheme of East Hampton.

The entire theatre, store and office building has been constructed of concrete. The walls were built of concrete — not poured. Under this method, known as the "Van Guilder System," the walls are carried up in two thicknesses simultaneously, leaving an air space of two and one-half inches between the two thickness of walls, which are bonded together with a special wire reinforcement. This gives a protection against cold and dampness in winter weather, and provides a cool building in summer months. Outside walls are waterproofed after completion and the interior finished with stucco in place of plaster.

The New Edwards was designed by Douglas P. Hall, architect and engineer of New York City. The building has three stores and a main entrance lobby on Main Street, with five offices on the second floor.

The stage, 60 x 25 feet, with a proscenium opening of 34 feet, is built to a height of 24 feet. The foundation and present walls are constructed so that the stage house can be carried to the full height, with gridiron, at some future time. The walls are carried through the roof so that this change can be made without interfering with the use of the prsent stage. The special rigging which was required to handle the vaudeville was designed and carried out by the New York Studios, and, despite the fact that there is a stage height of only 24 feet, vaudeville has been presented successfully, three days a week, all summer. Eight dressing rooms with toilet accommodations are provided in the basement.

The entire theatre, store and office building is constructed of concrete. An exterior view of the Edwards theatre is shown below.

Under the stadium a large, attractive foyer has been provided with a series of well appointed rest rooms, manager's office, etc.

The house has a complete ventilating and cooling system, air being provided by Typhoon fans in pent houses above the roof. The boiler room is equipped with two boilers and oil burners. The finest equipment is used throughout.

The auditorium of the Edwards is unusually attractive for a theatre of this type. The low ceiling, executed in wood paneling, and colorful draperies in proscenium niches and stage enclosure add a note of warmth that gains added effect through contrast with the stucco [illegible]

Two of America's Most Unique Theatres

San Jacinto House a Monument to the Indian; Log Cabin Theatre Nestles Among Yosemite's Peakes

Exterior view of the Soboba Theatre, in San Jacinto, Calif., which faithfully carries out features of Indian architecture in its general design.

IN the Soboba theatre at San Jacinto, and Pillsbury's theatre in the village of Yosemite, California claims two of the most unique playhouses in America, if, indeed, they do not deserve the whole superlative of ranking place as the most unique theatres in America.

The first mentioned is a faithful rendition, in modern theatre construction, of the architecture of the Indians—in its external and interior design—while the Yosemite theatre is of the log cabin type, splendidly equipped and dedicated to the presentation of the finest motion picture entertainment available.

It was the purpose of the builders of the "Soboba" to erect a monument to the Indian. The name "Soboba" is of Indian origin and means "hot water," having relation to the hot springs which bubble forth from the mountainside at San Jacinto. The band of Indians who first located at the springs, though a part of the Cahuilla tribe, took the name Soboba, and the remnants of the band are still known by that name.

The house is owned by the Soboba Theatre, Inc., with O. S. Hofman as president and L. A. Reynolds as vice president and manager. Elsie D. Reynolds is secretary, Helen I. Hofmann treasurer and Harry Hofmann director of publicity. The house was designed by O. S. Hofmann and Mr. Reynolds, with the aid of G. Stanley Wilson of Riverside.

Practically everything in the Soboba is hand-made and was done by the local artisans of San Jacinto, a town of about 1500 inhabitants. The house has a seating capacity of 750, and is equipped with overstuffed seats, bearing Indian designs. Two simplex projecting machines are used, with Ed Raymond as projectionist. The main curtain is of terry cloth dyed blue, brushed in opposite directions with gold, blue and green to obtain lighting effects. Drops and scenery were all made in the theatre.

The auditorium of the Soboba, in which the comforts of modern playhouses have been incorporated with aboriginal architectural and descorative motifs.

The Soboba, costing about $100,000, has been called by some "a Hollywood boulevard playhouse in a Main Street town." Its builders have shown their faith in their community by contributing this expensive entertainment plant to the pleasure of the inhabitants.

The scale of admission prices at the Soboba, on all nights except Tuesdays, is 35c for adults, except in loges, which is 50c with a children's rate of 10c.

A mountain playhouse built on the log cabin style furnishes motion picture entertainment the year round to residents and visitors at Yosemite village. Above is a general exterior view of the theatre. Right above, the foyer, where souvenirs are sold. At the right is a close-up view of the front and maint entrance to this unique community house.

ARTHUR C. PILLSBURY'S Log Cabin Theatre, in Yosemite National Park, is suited ideally to its mountain location, 4,000 feet above sea level, surrounded on all sides by peaks rising from three to five thousand feet higher.

It is log cabin construction of the finest order, and in the most authentic design, but it furnishes the finest of screen entertainment under the most comfortable conditions

Mr. Pillsbury, president and manager of the company which operates the Log Cabin, operates his theatre according to the highest standards of showmanship. He selects his pictures with the utmost care, and observes the rules of good-will building in making his institution a community center for weekly religious services Sundays and donating it to the uses of local oganization affairs.

The theatre gives two shows weekly during the winter season, and is open every night during the tourist season. The population of Yosemite village is 360, with a floating population of from eight to ten thousand during the summer months.

The seating capacity of the auditorium is 366, but, with the aid of some extra chairs when overflow crowds are attracted to the Cabin, Pillsbury can take care of 400 at his playhouse. Since its opening the theatre has played to an average attendance of 315, which, out of a possible 360 people located within a radius of one-half mile of the theatre, gives this enterprising showman a record average.

The Log Cabin was built at a cost of $25,000.

Capitol's New Stage Enlarges Scenic Artist's Bag o' Tricks

Ingenious Combinations of Elevating Platforms and Traveling Cars Add Rich Store to Resources and Flexibility of Stage Spectacle Art

THERE could be no more pertinent commentary upon the speed and ingenuity with which the modern technician and his crew of artisans work than the fact that the New York public, now flocking to the Capitol theatre to be entertained by the new style programs offered by Major Bowes, has no conception of the gigantic undertaking this new policy involved in the way of construction and installation of equipment for the stage.

For, though the Capitol stage has been completely remodeled and important structural changes made, all this was accomplished while business went on as usual. There was no sign "closed during alterations" on its front to inform the public that the Capitol was undergoing changes of major proportions.

So far as the public is concerned this is as it should be. It is the showman's job to give theatregoers what they want and not bother them with details concerning the tremendous amount of work and the large expense required to get the effects that make an appeal to the popular taste.

But when a theatre the size of the Capital is overhauled behind scenes to the extent that a stage of just ordinary pretensions is transformed into one of the finest equipped and most resourceful boasted by any playhouse, it is something to talk about in the trade circles of show business.

The new stage was built and installed by Peter Clark, originator of the devices, including the elevating orchestra pit, serving as the foundation upon which are built many of the modern of stage effects, particularly in the picture theatres. The Capitol stage has been pronounced by directors and specialists in scenic production to be the most flexible and versatile in any picture theatre.

The stage proper is equipped with two elevating platforms, or lifts, a movable steel bridge, two electric platforms, or automats, a complete counterweight system, the latest system of draw curtain tracks, an overhead bridge for spot lights spot light towers and intricate lighting equipment. Steel tracks are set in the floor for the electric platforms, which can be moved backward, forward or to the right or left.

In addition to this there is an elevating orchestra pit, with separate sections, individually motored and operated, for the organ console and a concert grand piano

In order to put the Capitol stage in its present shape it was necessary to lower the old stage five feet. The old arrangement had the orchestra pit serving as a bridge between the auditorium and the stage—its lowest level was in the auditorium and it was graduated from that up to the stage level Now stage and orchestra pit are separated or brought into conjunction for special stage effects

All this was accomplished in the record time of 31 days. In this brief space the new equipment was designed, built and installed. The work was carried on during the combined five weeks' engagement of "Ben Hur" and "The Big Parade," which followed one another as attractions at the Capitol, and which, owing to their length, were presented without complementary stage numbers.

More or less detail is required to give even a sketchy description of the various and varied equipment and resources of the stage which Clark has installed at the Capitol.

TO begin with the most spectacular features, the stage lifts are more intricate than those which have been installed in any other picture theatre. Lift No. 1, which is downstage near the footlights, is in three sections. This means that it may be elevated as a single platform—to a height of 8 feet 6 inches above stage level—or each of its three sections lifted individually. Thus it may be used to gain a step effect, "tableau," or an elevated platform running from wing to wing across the stage.

The No. 2 lift, which is nearer the back wall, is a double decker, with 8 feet 6 inches clearance between the upper and lower levels.

Each of the two platforms is tracked to accommodate the electric cars—thus permitting an almost unlimited number of formations by means of various combinations employing two or more of these devices.

The bridge is mounted on rollers and set on steel tracks running up and down stage The span between these uprights is great enough to allow this bridge to be moved forward or backward over the electric cars.

The automats are important features of this remarkable stage. Below stage there is a "parking space" for the cars, so that a scene may be set below stage on the automat, and the car then rolled onto the lower level of No 2 lift, and then elevated to stage level One of the cars is in two sections, so that it may be rolled forward or backward and at certain points on the stage split in two equal sections, which may be moved in opposite directions up or down stage or toward the wings.

All of these devices, stage lifts, orchestra pit, and automats are electrically operated from a switch in the wings. The operation is very simple. There are separate buttons for the various elevations required, so that the operator merely presses the button say for lift No. 2 to elevate to a distance four feet above stage level and the lift moves at the designated speed, also optionally set on the switchboard, to that point and automatically stops there.

From this brief description it may be readily seen that a wide range of stage effects are possible of easy accomplishment with the material at the command of the stage director. It may be added that the three-section lift is the first of its kind to be installed in any theatre.

Though the stage is tracked with permanent steel runners for the automats this feature does not hurt the floor as a dancing surface. The specially designed tracks have a very small groove cut in the center of flat steel strips, the flanges of which are set perfectly flush with the floor surface.

The shows at the Capitol are being produced under the direction of Mort Harris, who draws upon an extensive experience in picture theatre presentation. Harris recently came to New York from San Francisco. For the past ten years he has been closely associated with Jack Partington, producer of the shows for Famous Players theatres and later for Publix on the Pacific coast. Harris, who was formerly in the music business and in this connection worked with Partington on stage shows, became an active member of the Publix producing staff two years ago

WHEN West Coast took over the management of the Publix theatres in California, and Partington was brought to New York by Publix, Harris followed his former chief to Broadway. The Capitol post is his first connection in New York.

After the expenditure of an amount said to be in the neighborhood of $50,000 to advertise the new policy, and emphatic statements promising a public regaled by the finest in theatrical offerings a type of show that would surpass anything presented under similar conditions, it was sound showmanship for the Capitol executives to inaugurate the new policy with a spectacular and impressive bill

This was done in good style with an elaborate revue in which the most spectacular effects were achieved by means of the devices installed especially for the new type of shows—which demonstrated

Theatre Building Business Map

Including Analysis of Key City Attendance Averages

Above Average Business	AA	Very light new construction
		Light new construction
Average Business	A	Moderately heavy construction
Under Average Business	UA	Heavy new construction

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with colored shading indicating the division of new proposed theatre building as represented for the period from September 15th to October 15th. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities: solid, which represents the greatest value of proposed theatres; heavy stipple, which is second in valuation of new construction; medium, which areas represent conservative building; and the very light areas, where the investment in new theatre projects is very light. The information used in compiling the statistics visualized by the map was obtained through several reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

The circles shown on the map are located in key cities and illustrate averages of theatre attendance during the three months period form September 15 to October 15. The diagrams indicate the relative attendance at the better theatres in these cities during the summer season. These are given by "averages, with symbols to indicate "Above Average" and "Under Average" box office returns. The term "average" as applied in this survey indicates satisfactory box office returns, based upon theatre expectancies, which, in turn, are governed by past earnings under similar or nearly similar conditions

These attendance statistics were compiled from an analysis of the Key City Reports, published weekly in Motion Picture News, and other sources of information gathered by this publication.

LAST month our map showed the results produced by an analysis of theatre building prospects for three months, June 15th to September 15th. In this issue the map is confined to new prospective building announced during the period from September 15 to October 15th, also the key city reports, as indicated on the map, and for the same period.

The total value of building proposed during the past thirty days is $20,747,000, which calls for 90,850 seats to be divided among 62 projects. Four of these projects represent investments of over $1,000,000, while 11 fall between the figures of $500,000 and $1,000,000. The average cost per seat for this new building is $228.00, per theatre, while the average seating capacity for the country will be 1,465, and the average cost per theatre is $332,000. The division of this construction by territories is graphically illustrated through the colored map. It is shown there that the middle states call for the heaviest construction, with the North Atlantic and West Coast states running a close second. Next, in order, are the Southwestern states, while in the Northeastern, Southeastern and West Coast states the program is very light.

The figures for these various territories are:

Northeastern states: $400,000; 3,500 seats; 2 projects.
North Atlantic states: $5,030,000; 28,400 seats; 17 projects.
Southeastern states: $305,000; 3,700 seats; 5 projects.
Southwestern states: $1,900,000; 8,900 seats; 6 projects.
Middle states: $7,560,000; 23,350 seats; 14 projects.
Western states: $140,000; 1,600 seats; 2 projects.
Western Coast states: $5,410,000; 21,400 seats; 16 projects.

Based on ratio of the value of new proposed construction as against the area of the territories for the various divisions of the country, it is found that the North Atlantic states show a density of construction approximately three times that of the West Coast states, which are second. The other territories, following in order, are the Middle states, Northeastern states,

Southwestern states, Southeastern states and Western states.

THE average cost per seat in the different divisions of the country are Northeastern, $114; North Atlantic, $177; Southeastern, $83.00; Southwestern, $213; Middle States, $325; Western $89.00 and West Coast $252

The individual state calling for the largest investment is California, with $5,110,000, 13 projects with a seating capacity of $19,200. Ohio is second with proposed building valued at $4,260,000, 6 projects calling for 12,050 seats. Pennsylvania follows with $3,325,000, 8 projects and 17,000 seats. Illinois, $2,150,000 and 4,000 seats. Tennessee is 5th with $1,600,000; 5,500 seats.

This month's report compares favorably with the report of our last issue covering a period of ninety days, particularly inasmuch as the early fall is the season when the announcement of new projects is lightest. The total number of theatres are proportionately somewhat less, while the average investment per theatre is correspondingly larger. The average seating capacity is also somewhat larger. This report again upholds our prediction made at the first of the year that 1927 would break all theatre construction records, and again refutes the report circularized that new theatre construction is on the wane.

In analyzing the material used in the compiling of this report, it was found that there were several small theatres announced. This is indicative of the trend of the times that the small town house will again be built on a heavy scale. However, the large neighborhood and down-town theatres are still being announced in large numbers.

Of considerable importance to American theatre equipment manufacturers is the report recently published by the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce on theatre building in Europe. This report states that in Great Britain and Germany building is going forward rapidly. In Germany it is estimated that 80 new motion picture theatres are in prospect for building this year, and that Great Britain is also planning to add several theatres in the heavier centers of population.

It is noted in this report that the tendency in European countries is to elaborate upon the type of theatre that has been prevalent in the past, following to some degree the tendency in America.

THE Bureau's report credits Sweden with 16 theatres to be built within the next year, and Roumania with 11. In Roumania three are scheduled for Bucharest, and each of these theatres will have a seating capacity of more than 1,000. In Austria, the report continues, 8 theatres have been authorized.

This report is in line with advices which have been sent out by MOTION PICTURE NEWS regarding the prospects for the sale of equipment in Europe. Also, it might be noted that Australia, in particular, is now enjoying a prosperous theatre building program, and that some of the countries in Asia are buying considerable equipment.

Reports received indicate that the sale of equipment throughout the United States has been good for the past thirty days, and that the same territories which showed heaviest sales for the period from June 15th to September 15th, as reported in our last issue, viz.: Middle and North Atlantic states, again lead in volume of sales for this month's report. However, the West Coast states have showed a gain in business.

Attendance figures covering so short a period as one month naturally show some wide fluctuations, and, in consequence, there are several startling reversals between the last map—covering a three-months' period—and the current one. So comparison between the two reveals some decided changes, notably in Seattle, where the last month's business went above average, through on the Octobre map, Seattle was the only key city with an "under average" rating. On the down scale there is Des Moines, Cleveland and Atlanta, on the present map as "under average," while on the previous one all three were in th "above average" column.

Such reversals, of course, are the result of a combination of general and strictly local conditions, none of which are necessarily permanent in nature. Seattle, for example, enjoyed the benefits of a combination of excellent theatre business stimulants. Weather conditions were ideal, from the box office standpoint, a strong array of pictures were presented there during the past four weeks, and during one excellent week of theatre business the rise was in great part due to the visit of Colonel Lindbergh to Seattle—an event which brought many suburbanites to the city. One such bang-up week, naturally, is bound to exercise a strong influence on the rating for so short a period as one month. Nevertheless, Seattle's business has been consistently good during the time covered in this report.

MOST of the cities hard hit over this period encountered nothing more serious—though devastating as it was to immediate business—than a heat wave, of such intensity that several records—weather, not box office you may be sure—were smashed. It was heat of a kind that cannot be combated with cooling systems or, perhaps, anything else in the showman's bag of business builders. It was the kind of weather that made people think of nothing else but the weather, particularly as it came at the end of a summer which was so averagely cool and comfortable that the usual big hot-weather attractions such as beach resorts and mountain retreats were passed up.

The cities that dipped from the "average" on the October to "under average" on the current map are St. Louis, Milwaukee and New York. Milwaukee and New York suffered mostly because of the already mentioned—and not to be mentioned in this report again after this—heat speel. St. Louis, of course, suffered because of the tornado. Other key cities where business was on the down scale are Salt Lake City, Minneapolis—the strike hurt some—and Boston.

On the up swing are Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Kansas City and Central Pennsylvania. Static at "above average" are Tampa, New Orleans and Detroit; and at "average" the following: Portland, Topeka, Oklahoma City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Chicago, Indianapolis, Buffalo and Albany.

Thus a recapitulation shows that attendance records are holding up to a "good business" mark in the aggregate, for the map indicates a down movement of varying degrees in nine key cities, an upward swing in eight, and nine cities went along at an even keel with "above average" and "average" business—which, as explained in the key to the map, denote good theatre business conditions.

There is an almost equal balance between the extreme movement downward and upward in the comparative results between this map and the one in our October issue, which showed that excellent business prevailed at the bulk of the picture theatres throughout the country. Seattle climbed from "under" to "above" during the month passed. Three cities dipped from "above" to "under," while on the movement from "average" to "above average" there were four districts moving upward as only three were slipping downward at that degree of change.

THE conditions which figured importantly in bringing the New York attendance records down below those shown over the summer averages to a large degree were identical with those which cut into the receipts in other zones similarly affected during the period this map covers.

These included a counter attraction which held the interest of the entire country, and which, due to the radio broadcasting of a description of the event, became the principle feature of one whole evening's entertainment for uncounted millions. Reference here, of course, is given to the Tunney-Dempsey fight in Chicago. Theatres throughout the country which installed equipment to carry the radio account of the fight to their patrons, in perhaps a majority of instances, realized better that normal receipts, while others at least held to their average by means of the feature.

New York theatres during the period enjoyed a spotty business. Where attractions were outstanding in their appeal to the public the returns were better than average, a condition hardly indicative of a business "slump" in the larger significance of that word, but which nevertheless brings down general averages over so short a period as one month.

When It Comes to Originality of Stage Decorations and Sets---

You know that to employ Landish Studios is definite assurance that your theatre will have no duplicates. Furthermore, that the atmosphere and intimacy and attractiveness imparted through the works of Landish Studios give your theatre a distinctive individuality.

The modern theatre requires more than simply orthodox drapes, hangings and stock stage sets. Definitely, the design and production of theatre decorations and stage settings is an art that experience alone can execute effectively.

It is the good fortune of the Landish Studios to have a staff comprised of artists specialized through years of experience in theatre work.

To select Landish Studios to design and execute the decorations and stage settings for your next theatre is but sound judgment.

Children Are Just As Discriminating In Their Choice of Pictures As Adults

Policies For Saturday Morning Movies Based on Experience At The Eastman

CHILDREN are just as discriminating in their choice of motion pictures as adults, but make the best audiences because they seem to get more out of a film, Eric Clarke, General Manager of the Eastman Theatre in Rochester, has decided, after catering to children at special Saturday morning programs for three seasons.

It is difficult for adults to determine what will "go over" with the youngsters, he says, but hearty laughter or wild excitement and applause are the rewards of presenting a film that meets approval. He finds that it will never do to select just the movies adults believe the juvenile fans "ought to see," for the ten year old has decided views as to what he wants, and there is very little response to anything else.

During last season, Mr. Clarke found that the film most popular with the young theatregoers was Mary Pickford's "Little Lord Fauntleroy," while Jack Holt in "The Thundering Herd" drew the smallest audience. Douglas Fairbanks' "Thief of Bagdad" was the second in approval, with Petty Bronson in "Peter Pan," Harold Lloyd in "The Freshman" and "Rin Tin-Tin in "The Lighthouse by the Sea" runnersup. The youngsters approved also of Jackie Coogan, Reginald Denny and Tom Mix.

"The ten-year-old patrons of the movies," Mr. Clarke explains, "has just as decided views on what he wants to see as the grown-up members of the family. Our experience has shown that we cannot arbitrarily select those pictures which we think he ought to see and present them with any expectancy of a strong response.

"We have found a real field of service to the community in offering special programs on Saturday mornings for youthful audiences. During the season just closed, the attendance averaged about 1,400 children. The manner in which the youngsters exercise their choice is demonstrated by the fact that the audience has fluctuated from about 700 to 2,400, indicating that the picture is the thing for the juvenile fan as well as for the adult.

"Children make the best audiences. They seem to get more out of a picture. They never miss a comedy point and their laughter during the showing of a humorous picture or their wild excitement and applause during a thrilling dramatic scene extends its contagious influence to all the adults who may be in the house.

"It is difficult for adults to determine just what will go over best with the youngsters. Frequently pictures over which we have grave doubts have registered the most pronounced success."

At the Eastman Theatre Saturday Morning movies are run under the auspices of the Parents and Teachers Association, which ties them up closely to the schools and gives an official endorsement that is one of the most potent assets in commending the presentations to the parents of the youngsters. A committee from the Parents and Teachers Association not only works with House Manager John J. O'Neill, who is in charge of the Saturday morning performances, but previews every subject before it goes on the screen, making such eliminations as it deems necessary. On occasions pictures which were originally selected are changed after screening to obtain a subject considered more suitable.

SATURDAY Morning Movies are not an enterprise to be undertaken for profit, says Mr. Clark. They should be the theatre's contribution to the community. They can be made to pay their own way, however, with the single price of 10 cents for the whole house. In Rochester adults are encouraged to attend with the youngsters and many of them seize the opportunity to see some big success of other years which they missed on the initial presentation.

The Association delegates a number of its members to act as sponsors for the children in order to comply with the state law which says that a child under 16 years must be accompanied by a guardian. Each sponsor takes care of a certain group and Boy Scouts serve as ushers.

The Eastman has been conspicuously successful in handling these special shows probably because the whole scheme was carefully thoughout from the beginning.

"Children make the best audiences. They seem to get more out of a picture than adults. They never miss a comedy point, and their laughter during the showing of a humorous picture or their wild excitement and applause during a thrilling dramatic scene extends its contagious influence to all the adults who may be in the house"

A Miracle In Stage Construction

A STAGE that moves forward, backward, upward, downward—and all in sections. A stage that is a miracle of design and construction. THIS IS THE STAGE AROUND WHICH THE NEW PRESENTATION POLICY OF THE NEW YORK CAPITOL IS BUILT.

This stage is comprised of nine movable parts—four elevating sections operated individually; three movable truck platforms for pre-setting acts underneath the stage level, which are raised to the stage level through a double decked elevator; a high movable bridge spanning the entire stage; and a system of tracks for moving the platforms into any positions on the stage —all electrically operated and automatically controlled by push buttons.

In addition, the Capitol installation has a lift each for the entire orchestra, organ and piano. The piano lift is an innovation in itself as it has a platform on which acts are presented in front of the curtain. A new and complete counterweight system is also included among the new equipment.

NO GREATER TESTIMONIAL CAN BE GIVEN THE GENIUS AND SERVICE OF PETER CLARK, INC., THAN THE DESIGN, MANUFACTURE AND INSTALLATION —ALL IN THIRTY-ONE DAYS AND WITHOUT INTERFERENCE WITH A SINGLE PERFORMANCE—OF THIS SUPERSTRUCTURE.

As it has been for the past twenty-five years, it is again a Peter Clark installation that marks a milestone in the advancement of design and flexibility of operation of the modern stage.

Discovered! A Way to Eliminate Dead Black Screen Backgrounds

Keith-Albee Projection Specialist Hangs Screen in Space Away from Fabrics

AN article in the October issue of THE SHOWMAN dealt with the adverse visual conditions caused by the jet black borders frequently used to frame the motion picture screen, and pointed out that improved projection—higher screen intensities—make the entirely black field not only unnecessary but undesirable under present conditions.

The Keith-Albee projection department has approached this problem from several angles, and has developed a new arrangement which is now in operation at the Albee theatre in Brooklyn, where the results obtained no doubt will lead to similar installations at other theatres in that circuit.

This method, worked out under the supervision of Mr. H. Stoll, in charge of special projects for the K-A organization, eliminates the entirely dark field by removing the screen from the usual position as a pure white spot in the center of a stage mask or curtain. The screen is set forward, and hangs out in free space, away from all fabric. About ten feet back of the screen hangs a full stage black velour cyc curtain, and a black ground-cloth is used to cover the stage floor. Back of the screen, between the sheet and the black cyc, is a "curtain" of blue light, thrown from the third border light, which gives a midnight blue effect as a background for the screen.

The sheet is stretched around a frame the exact size of the projected picture, and the border is reduced to a minimum. Owing to the presence of keystone, it is not feasible to eliminate the black border entirely. But Stoll has reduced this to a small band, of black velvet, which is stripped around the screen on the back side of the frame. The border is so small that there is no effect of contrast between this frame and the illumination on the screen.

The arrangement improves the visual conditions under which the spectator views the pictures. The deep blue background supplies all the contrast needed for effective projection, and at the same time reduces the strain caused by steady focussing of the eyes on the brilliantly lighted screen surface.

Since the small black border is not on tha same plane as the projecting surface, its contrast to the highlights on the screen is considerably reduced.

This method of mounting the screen has decided advantages over any other that the writer has observed under actual theatre projection conditions Reducing the contrast between the screen and its background naturally lessens the strain on the eyes, but the luminous deep blue backing is in itself inconspicuous and does not fight for the attention. As a matter of fact the background appears as space, with the screen as the only object to command the attention of the eye.

There is another advantage in that the screen is "staged," as it were. The picture is set off by itself, occupying the center of a setting in which everything is subordinated to the central object.

Thus with a remarkably simple arrangement the most objectionable features of "masking" are almost entirely overcome.

Stoll has been experimenting with various phases of this development for several months. He first tried it out at Keith's 86th Street theatre in New York. Various colors were tried for the backlighting and several different types of curtains were used.

The results obtained at the Albee would seem to recommend a wider application of this system, which is fraught with no difficulties greater than the building of a screen frame to the exact size of the picture.

Light wood stripping is nailed around the back edge of the frame, and this is covered with a black fabric—preferably velour. This small border should extend beyond the screen a sufficient distance to absorb any "spill" over the edge of the screen.

THE screen at the Albee is suspended on two ropes, which are covered with black velour to obscure them, and there are two feet, also blacked, upon which the screen rests when it is in position on the stage.

This development is but one of many upon which the Keith-Albee specialists have been working for several months to improve projection, stage, and theatre lighting, and presentation effects.

The work is being done in a very sound and efficient manner. Any new development is subjected to a thorough trial at some one of the theatres in the Metropolitan district and undergoes its tests under actual operating conditions before any move is made to install it at the other houses. However, when anything new is found to improve conditions, it is installed throughout the circuit.

At present there are some quite revolutionary ideas being developed for use in connection with lighting and staging effects and with the enterprise and extensive resources of the organization, now seriously devoting itself to progress and improvement of its combination pictures and vaudeville programs, it will not be surprising if the K-A outfit proves the source of some highly original refinements and advancements of picture presentations in the near future

All of the newer theatres of this company are being built in accordance with the newest ideas of showmanship. In the Albee in Brooklyn and the new Keith theatre in Boston, K-A has two of the most sumptuous playhouses in the country.

The continuous pictures and vaudeville policy is proving highly successful. The change from straight vaudeville to combination bills in a majority of the company's houses has been made without any radical realignment in the managerial ranks. Under skilful executive direction and administration the organization has been adapted to the new conditions.

THIS is a quite remarkable feat, when it is considered that there is a distinct difference between the old order and the new. Catering to a straight vaudeville patronage is one thing and successfully running a picture house is another. The dyed in the wool vaudeville patron is—or was—interested first, last and always in the bill. Give him a bill and comfortable seat in the auditorium and you had his business. The picture fans are different; they expect luxurious theatres, service features and a lot of extra inducements.

New features to meet the new conditions are being sought and there appears to be a very earnest and intelligently directed plan to develop refinements and improvements in service, projection and stage presentations.

The theatres converted within comparatively recent times are now running smoothly under the new policy. The Albee, in addition to being one of the most luxurious and beautiful theatres to be found in the country, is also one of the best managed.

W. B. Kerrigan, manager of the Albee since it was opened, and formerly manager of the Orpheum in Brooklyn, could think of no greater difference between the patronage to which he now caters and that of the old straight vaudeville days. when pressed by this reporter on the question, than that the picture fans seem to like to crowd a bit when entering and leaving the theatre. That condition, he said, seemed strange to him at first, but he has learned to view it without alarm

The publicity department, under Mark A. Leuscher, has added a special exploitation service to supply the K-A managers with advertising and publicity material on motion pictures booked for the circuit. This department of Mr. Leuscher's office is headed by Irwin Zeltner, a well known motion picture exploiteer.

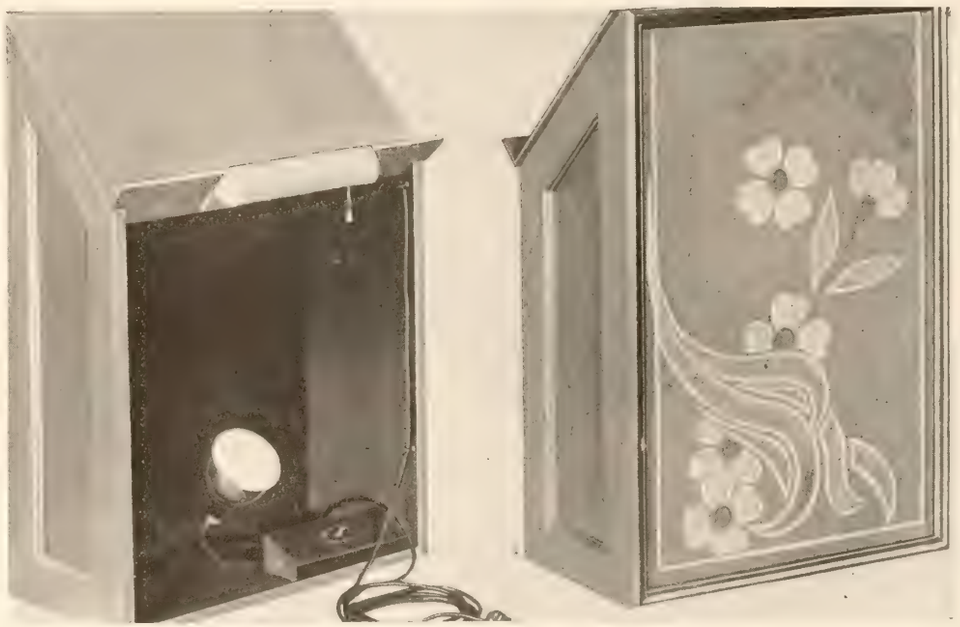
New and Improved Equipment

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering



Novel Stage Music Stands for Acts Featuring Orchestras

THE accompanying pictures illustrate a new type of music stand recently introduced by the Gallagher Orchestra Equipment Company, and designed for use by orchestras appearing on the stage in the presently popular band act style of presentations.

The Gallagher stage stand is made to fit into the scenic scheme of stage settings for acts in which the musicians' costumes and the music stand become part of the scenic feature of the presentation. To this end the front of the stand, which is in view of the audience, is so designed that a colored sketch on a card can be inserted in a slotted frame provided for this purpose. Another novel feature is the concealed spot light reflector which may be operated by the musician by means of a foot trigger switch. This illuminates the musician's face, and may be used to produce novel stage effects.

The lower part of the stand is 30 inches high and 20 inches wide, and covers the lower part of the musician. The sides are 12 inches wide. There is a well-lighted music desk.

The reflector spot lights may be any color desired by using tinted globes. They can also be wired so that the entire orchestra can be illuminated simultaneously by the conductor or from off stage.

New Style Dimmer Flasher Is Offered by Reynolds Co.

THE Reynolds Electric Company have just developed a moderately-priced Dimmer Flisher suitable for decorative lighting, sign lighting, electric fountains, of wherever a dimmer effect is desired.

The Dimmer plates are of special design and of the Ward-Leonard manufacture. The Dimmer plates are made in three sizes, with maximum capacities of 1700, 1400 and 1225 watts, and standard arrangement in dimming from full bright to cherry red and then back to full bright, with an average of fifty steps.

The Dimmers are mounted on a frame work and geared to the Reynolds motor.

Hertner Company Announces Type C. P. Transverter

THE Hertner Electric Company has added a new Type C. P. Transverter to its products, which include the regular Multiple Arc and Series Arc Transverters. One of the outstanding features of the new Type C. P. Transverter is that within three per cent of the rated voltage is delivered under all conditions of temperatures and loads.

This permits the operator to have his entire attention directed on his projection work, free from the necessity of manipulating the field regulator as heretofore required.

The Type C. P. Transverter is designed and built so that it is particularly well ventilated, and is in keeping with the high standard which this company has always maintained.

Test Laboratory for Supplies and Equipment in New York

A LABORATORY suitable for testing and demonstrating all types of projection equipment and supplies now exists in the very heart of New York City. It has been established by Chas. W. Phellis, Inc., at 151 West 33rd Street. R. C. Martin, vice-president, is in charge.

This announcement is of particular importance to many of our readers, inasmuch as there has been a decided need for some such an establishment as this, to permit buyers as well as manufacturers to secure an unbiased test of various types of equipment.

The equipment of the laboratory is as follows: a three-wire system is available on both AC and DC electrical power, capable of handling 100 Amperes on each leg of the AC and 150 Amperes on each side of the DC.

Also included is a stationary optical system with available parts for the mounting of all types of lighting equipment, to facilitate running tests. Included also are high intensity and reflector arc lamps, as well as standard carbon arcs. A full control equipment is also installed.

A unique instrument is a special Westinghouse ammeter made up of three separate units. It has a special gear which operates the recording ammeter faster than is ordinarily the case so that every variation of amperage of the arc may be recorded on graph paper.

A MacBeth illuminometer and other facilities for accurately measuring light are available

Combination Ventilation and Heating System

SIMPLICITY and low operating and installation costs are outstanding features of the "Supreme Temperator," combination heating, cooling and ventilating system developed by the Supreme Heater and Ventilating Corporation, and now in wide use by motion picture theatres. Over a period of several years the company engineers have submitted this system to extensive experimentation and refinements of various features of the units themselves and installation methods have been made from time to time.

The "Supreme Temperator" consists of a heavy-duty, air-blast, direct-fired heater, a blower and motor, and a diffuser

Select Dimmers this way—

DIMMER plates should never burn out. C-H plates are of solid insulating material, with high heat dispersion qualities and great continuous load capacity. They don't burn out.

Fading should be flickerless from full brilliancy to black out. C-H Dimmers have 110 distinct steps with no overlapping of contacts. Low ratio rack and pinion drive eliminates play and back lash—a further guarantee of smooth fading and crescendo.

Dimmers should be compact, economical of space, and adaptable to all theaters and remodeling schemes. C-H Dimmers have contacts on both sides of plates—twice as many circuits in the same space. Plates are taken out by removing one screw. Plates of any capacity are interchangeable.

When you help them "live" the picture—

JUST a picture isn't enough to crowd your theater consistently. Your patrons want a chance to live the story—its romance and adventure.

Lighting effects, harmonizing with the spirit of the presentation, improving it, give your patrons a better chance to escape from their everyday selves. They leave your theater resolved to come again.

With C-H Simplicity Dimmers, crescendo and fading of light is smooth as nightfall. Likewise, any color effect is easily arranged.

And the cost of operating C-H Dimmers, the ease of installing them in any theater regardless of size or scheme of decoration make them a logical improvement to your theater.

Consult your architect or electrical engineer about it. And write for the booklet "Illumination Control for the Modern Theater".

What Price Names for Presentation Features?

Stage band acts are popular order of the day in presentation. On the left is an elaborate set for Rube Wolf's band at Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles

A SERIES of recent events culminating in the plunge which the Capitol theatre in New York has made into the very thick of "names" for its presentations has brought the subject of "presentation" back into the center of the stage where discussion, opinions, speculation and prophecy perform a bewildering and noisy dance of the hours which showmen and near-showmen devote to shop talk.

"Which way presentation?" and "how far?" are the two leading questions when these discussers get together. And in the welter of conversation there are many ponderable questions asked and no really convincing answers forthcoming—largely because the answer lies with the public, and the public bides its time and gives its verdict at the ticket booth, and not with conversation either.

The Capitol theatre, after expending about $175 000 on new equipment to stage the new type of shows and about $50 000 to advertise them, inaugurated a new stage policy with a revue called "Oddities" in which there were featured such names at Pat Rooney Marion Bent Pat Rooney 3rd, Rome and Dunn, and the Keller Sisters and Lynch. Elaborate scenic effects were used and the music was supplied by a jazz orchestra led by Paul Specht.

While some of the newspaper reviewers who cover the picture shows for New York dailies were shedding tearful lines of type about the passing of the dignified policy and the coming of vaudeville at the Capitol, the public crowded past the ticket takers in such droves that by the end of the week the Capitol had run up a new box office record.

This was followed up last week by a show in which Nora Bayes and Ben Bernie and Lester Allen, were featured. Currently the Capitol has Van and Schenck. Winnie Lightner, Burt Darrell and Jane Overton, in addition to a jazz orchestra, ballet and vocal soloists, in an elaborate revue called "Starland."

The "names," it will be noted, are all of vaudeville fame. Another "name" that knocked into a cocked hat all previous box office records of a picture house was Al Jolson, when he headlined at the Metropolitan theatre in Los Angeles. But these demonstrations were not necessary to show what "names" could do for the box office of the picture theatre—not when you recall what Gilda Grey, for example, did to records when she played a tour of the cinemas in conjunction with "Aloma of the South Seas.' And then, of course, there's Paul Whiteman's record, or records at the Publix theatres he has played under his contract with that company.

THE demonstrations have been so spectacular and the box office records so alluring that naturally there has been a large increase in the number of theatres going in for these attractions. With the result that "presentation" which originally was developed as a complimentary feature to the pictures, introduced for rounding out the program and giving the showmen an anchor to windward when their picture attraction was too weak to provide comfortable sailing, has jumped forward, and still is on the go, toward the top of the bill.

The fantastic salaries demanded by the "names" from the picture theatres—salaries way above those they could get in vaudeville—meant and mean little when a record gross for the week is taken into consideration Thus the Capitol is said to have paid the Rooneys $4,000 for the week, and they say Al Jolson got $17,500 for the week he played the Metropolitan in Los Angeles Since these are spot bookings and there are a greater number of performances daily than in vaudeville, the "names" justify their demands on that score. The Rooneys, with a company of 25 and a complete show of their own, got $4,000 a week in vaudeville, while the Capitol paid that same amount for their services without the extras. Paul Whiteman and his orchestra is paid $12,500 per week by Publix under a contract which gives the circuit call on his services for a certain number of weeks during the year.

But with box office records kiting as the "names" are billed, for the immediate present, at any rate, there is no great concern when the theatre pays up at the end of the week.

Regardless of what the future holds it is certain that the policy which is now known as the "highbrow policy" is dead so far as the big downtown picture theatres are concerned. The Chicago theatre in Chicago dropped its long established policy of musical presentations of the standard type and is realizing better business with a band act policy. The Capitol is not likely to go back to the former policy, though it was famous over the country for its orchestra, soloists and ballets.

The question that many are asking is "how far will the picture men go in their onslaught on the box office records?" To this there is added the question, "how far can they go?"

The limits, of course, are the number of "names" of such attraction value as to warrant big salaries and billing that puts the feature picture among the "other attractions" of the program. If you listen to what several veteran vaudeville men have to say, you will begin to wonder if the picture theatre man is not doubling his booking problems by going in for these names. Because if there were enough big pictures to go around, a sufficient supply of film attractions to keep the weekly change houses running at top speed throughout the year, there, of course, would be no need for stage names. It is because there are not enough big pictures that the names first were brought into presentation. But if there is to be a demand for three and sometimes as many as five of these names each week at the big picture theatres, where are all the names coming from?, your vaudeville man will ask.

AND it is a pertinent question. There is a straight vaudeville house on Broadway booked by one of the greatest talent-gathering organizations in the world that has its troubles getting two headliners to top a strong supporting bill each week. With that condition existing what will be done, as a matter of fact what can be done, to develop enough big name talent to keep up the pace which many of the picture theatres are setting.

Only last week one of the managers of a Broadway picture house found himself up against a big job trying to book a name for his stage portion of the bill. Up to Tuesday night he had not succeeded in booking anything for his current show, which opened last Saturday afternoon.

The problem is not as great for the Capitol as it is for theatres not having the affiliations that house has through the Loew organization. The Loew circuit can offer some real time as an inducement to the bigger attractions. But the theatre offering only a spot booking is differently situated, because even with an adequate supply for vaudeville it is the vaudeville man who will claim the act and that leaves the independent booker without much talent to draw upon.

THERE are many of the skeptics who declare that the picture theatres are letting themselves in for a lot of headaches by educating their patrons up to such elaborate bills and so many "names." When they have used up all the names on the market what will be the public's reaction to a more modest bill, even if it has sound entertainment value? And moreover, they say, the picture theatres are likely to keep on making the mistake of cheating on the vaudeville end of the bill when a big picture comes along—which, of course, they regard a sin of showmanship and "sure fire" method of killing off the theatre's following.

If it is true that the names will be so scarce, so difficult to get, and the public once having had a taste of them will demand them as a steady diet or seek their entertainment elsewhere, then the enterprise is indeed a parallel to the problem of getting a sufficient number of big pictures to see a theatre through fifty-two weeks of continuous operation.

Furthermore, if this is the condition it matters little whether the move is being made because of competition or in response to a popular demand for vaudeville with pictures.

The stage bands with "guest performers" have been growing in popularity and are proving a profitable proposition for the bigger picture houses all around the country. But in the effort to outdo the other fellow there has been a tendency to go the limit in signing up prominent stage personalities and many signs that after a certain few had played their engagements and departed there is difficulty in getting others of equal prominence and drawing power.

A fading feature of former glamor and glory is the atmospheric prologue—usually a blending of vocal music and the dance set in an elaborate background related in "atmosphere" to some outstanding scene of the feature picture. On the right is shown number offered at the Strand theatre, New York, last season

This has led to the declaration by many that a safer course would be to put in vaudeville acts and thus keep the shows from week to week on an even keel, irrespective of the strength or weakness of the feature picture, and thus striking a balance, a standard of entertainment that would keep the patrons coming back, instead of making them shoppers, measuring the various bills with a sharp and educated eye out for the biggest value for the price of admission.

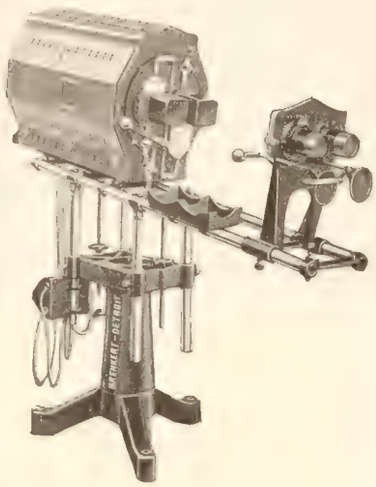
IN support of this view they will cite the New York Hippodrome as an example. The Hippodrome, which is off Broadway and in a location that makes it necessary to draw people to it, has been going along at the clip of about $12,000 per week net profit, despite the fact that it has not had very strong screen attractions, and has not deviated from the standard of its bills instituted when it was converted into a continuous run vaudeville and picture theatre. The big card at the Hipp, of course is the fifty-cent top admission.

One of the biggest single factors for the changing complexion of the Broadway picture theatre situation is the Roxy, which opened last March to a weekly take of over a hundred thousand gross and keeping up above the hundred thousand mark consistently with one exception since.

Roxy has not gone in for "names" yet, his name attractions consisting mostly of those who developed popularity in his shows or his radio programs. One of the rare instances in which he did feature an act with a vaudeville name was three weeks ago, when he presented Irving Aaronson's Commanders, a jazz band. The Aaronson orchestra was held for three weeks, but before the second week was out, Roxy made the announcement that he was organizing his own jazz orchestra and that Charles Previn, one of the resident conductors, would be the leader. Thus, after a few experiments with other jazz bands, Roxy is going back to his original stand—he had his own jazz orchestra last spring. In the course of this announcement, in which Rothafel reiterated the policies he laid down when the theatre was opened, Roxy repeated "We do not believe that vaudeville has a place in the motion picture theatre."

SIMILAR views are held by several other prominent picture theatre managers, among them Eric Clarke of the Eastman theatre in Rochester.

The straight prologue type of presentation is offered only occasionally at some of the large theatres, and is not nearly as popular as it was at smaller institutions. Even "presentation" along the original lines of atmospheric setting, though unrelated to the picture, is passing out as a general thing. The Publix unit shows, most of which were along this line, have given way to band acts, which are more vaudeville than "presentation" in the original sense of that term.



Whether all this will lead, eventually, to a circuit arrangement under which the

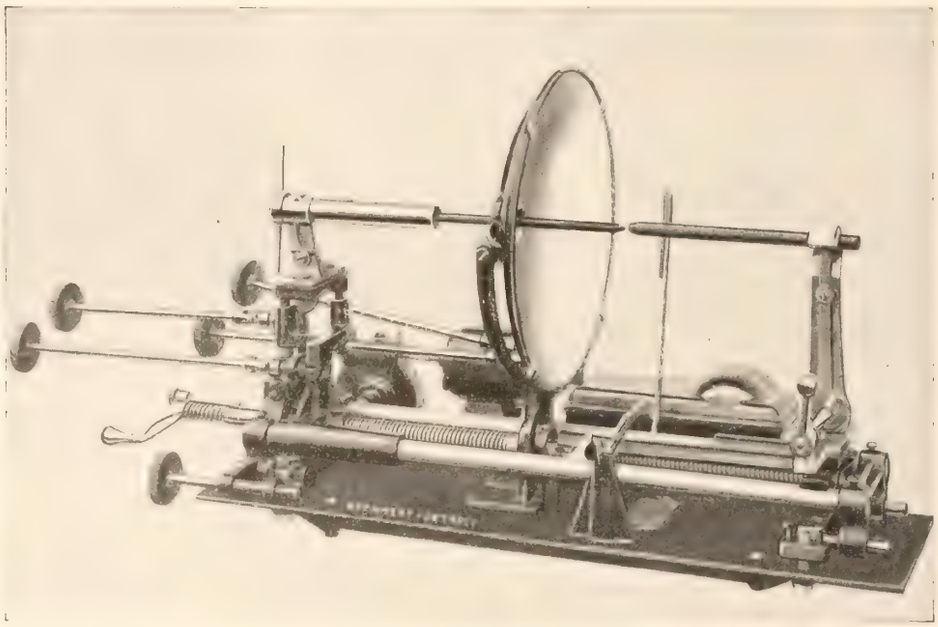
The BRENKERT "F-6"

Saves 50% in Operating Cost.

Plan to see the new Brenkert "F-6" Reflector Arc for Dissolving Slide Projection. You will find it has been designed and built to accomplish two things:

Reduce operating costs fifty per cent; Produce better effects.



By using one arc instead of two, with half the current, operating costs are cut to the minimum In addition, the Brenkert "F-6" saves time for the projectionist. The simplicity of design, the convenience of controls, the compactness—all were planned in advance and all save time.

The use of a large mirror possessing exceptional optical qualities and specially built for the "F-6" insures brilliant, perfectly matched, and sharply defined slides.

Those who placed their orders early for the Brenkert "F-6" are now appreciating its economy and their patrons are enjoying the results of perfect screen projections.

You will find it to your advantage to inspect the "F-6" at once, and place your order promptly.

Distributed in the United States by the National Theater Supply Company, in Canada by Theater Supply Dealers.

Projectionists Appreciate These Advantages

The man in the projection room is the first to appreciate the many advantages of the Brenkert arc burner illustrated above.

It has a full 16" trim of carbon, which enables the projectionist to set the carbons once, with no re-trim necessary, for carbons are fed by a reliable, automatic arc control of proven design.

The carbon holders have a 5" bearing surface, insuring perfect alignment over their full travel.

There is an automatic tension on the positive carbon, that permits instant carbon replacements.

A positive locking pin type clutch on the arc control instead of the less dependable friction clutch.

A focusing indicator insures accurate positioning of the crater.

The large diameter mirror of exceptional optical qualities is especially constructed for the Brenkert "F-6" Dissolving Slide Projector.

PROJECTORS & EFFECTIVE LIGHTING ~ DEVICES

Methods for Spotlighting the Theatre Orchestra

STAGE lighting proper and the equipment used for providing this specialized kind of illumination has reached a fairly high degree of development. While improvements of various kinds naturally are to be expected from time to time, these changes are likely to be more on the order of refinements to present methods and equipments rather than radical departures from methods which have been used for the past ten or fifteen years

This is now the age of the motion picture, as this form of entertainment overshadows all other theatrical enterprises. Motion picture programs, while still retaining many features of the legitimate stage, nevertheless present many new problems in illumination for which a satisfactory solution must be found.

In the legitimate theatre, the asbestos curtain, more often than not, marks the dividing line between the patrons and that part of the theatre containing the mysterious paraphernalia peculiar to the "back-stage" area. The stage lighting equipment, naturally, formed an important part of this equipment so that it can be said that stage lighting, in this sense, was purely a localized matter.

It was seldom necessary to extend the illumination limits farther forward than the edge of the stage, although it was—and still is—commonly the practice to place one or two low amperage arc "spots" at the rail of the first balcony for the purpose of "spotting" performers.

High intensities of illumination from the "front-of-the-house," such as are now found in every fair-sized motion picture theatre, was practically unknown so that here, at least, is found one form of illumination which is characteristic of the newer entertainment.

The line of demarcation between the patrons and the theatrical side of the theatre proper now extends some 30 or 40 feet in front of the stage to embrace the pit used for holding the large orchestras whose music forms a logical part of the "movie" program.

It is necessary upon occasions to illuminate the entire orchestra to an intensity almost comparable to those found on the stage. This is not so easy to accomplish for the reason that the number of locations where lighting equipment can be placed for providing this illumination is strictly limited and none of the available locations are within easy reach of the orchestra pit.

It is essential that this equipment be concealed from the view of the spectators and there are only three places in the "front-of-the-house" section of the theatre where this condition can be met in a satisfactory manner. There are:

1. In the ceiling directly above the orchestra pit.

2 In recessed compartments at the front of the balcony.

3. In the Projection Room.

The ceiling, directly over the orchestra pit provides the nearest and most direct position for equipment intended to illuminate the musicians The extreme inaccessibility of this location, however, makes it necessary that lighting apparatus which can be easily controlled from more easily reached points be used. For this reason, spotlights employing incandescent lamps are used whenever this location seems to be the most desirable one. It is not uncommon to employ mirror types of projectors for the same purpose for the reason that they have greater light collecting power than the lens types of spotlights and so offer the advantage of greater efficiency.

These two forms of lighting devices are most desirable, since the remote location makes it necessary that projector types of equipment be used in order to insure the required carrying power of the light.

When the ceiling location is used, it is commonly the practice to conceal the units by placing them in recesses cut in

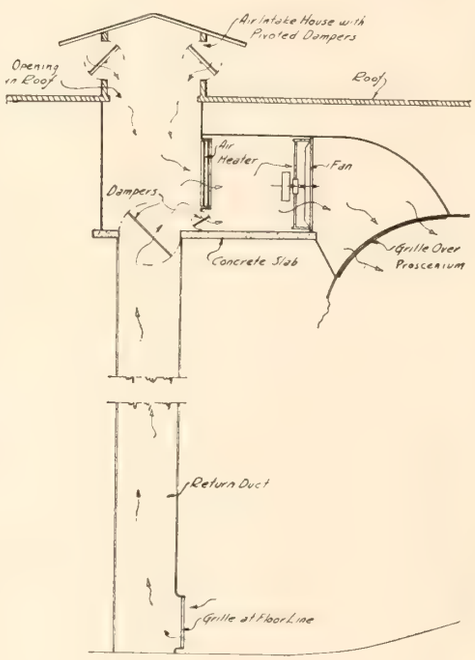
Theatre Ventilation is a Year Round Necessity



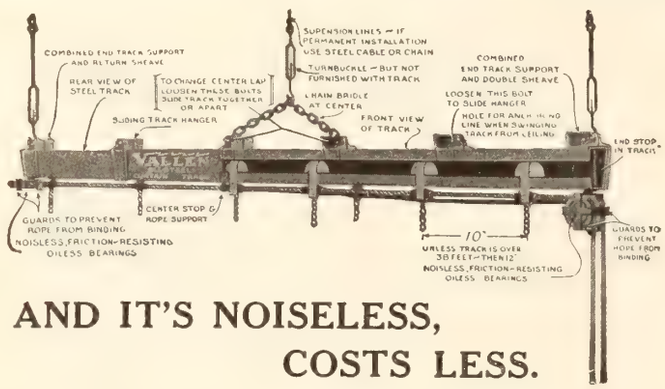
By J. F. DAILEY
Vice-President Typhoon Fan Company

ALTHOUGH it is only in comparatively recent years that theatre owners have realized the box office value of cooling systems, heating the theatre has always been considered indispensable. One would no more think of omitting the heating system in a theattre than one would the seats.

But, while heating has been taken for granted as absolutely necessary for the winter comfort of theatre-goers, the degree of comfort has been given only slight consideration until lately. The usual heating system of a theatre comprises a steam boiler and several clusters of radiator sections located in convenient points around the house. These radiators give off heat which dissipates itself directly into the audience. This system of warming is designated as direct radiation.

Direct radiation is the simplest type of heating system, but is not a great advance, in principle, over the wood-fire stove in the general merchandise store of Hickville. In both cases, how comfortable you feel depends on your proximity to the source of heat. You can feel too hot if you are too near the radiator. You can feel comfortable if you happen to be at the right distance. And you can even feel chilly if you are too far from the heat source. In other words, direct radiation does not afford uniform distribution of warmth. This fault is not only quite irritating to patrons at times, but also makes them more susceptible to catching cold. One manufacturer of indirect heating equipment aptly characterizes this fault by asking in his advertising, "Why roast one to warm the other?"

Another question which very few exhibitors can answer to their patrons' satisfaction is, "How is your theatre ventilated in winter?" Strange as it may seem, it is practically impossible to ventilate a theatre properly with the direct radiation system of heating. Ventilation means the passage of fresh air in any enclosure where fresh air is not readily accessible. To effect good ventilation in a theatre it would be necessary to constantly supply the house with outside air to replace the foul odors and stuffy humidity accumulating from the audience. But how can this be accomplished in winter if your patrons do not happen to be Eskimos?



The accompanying diagrammatic illustration is a simplified arrangement of a fan heating and recirculating system, an efficient and practical method for proper ventilation of the theatre in winter.

Cold, fresh air is drawn in from the roof through the heater and blown into the theatre via the grille over the proscenium arch. After circulating through the house, the now partly "spent" air is "Always 70 degrees" . . . . Can YOU compete with houses which GUARANTEE COMFORT WITH ENTERTAINMENT?

In the small theatre as well as the large there is a public demand for air tempering and conditioning. Everywhere, wise owners are meeting this demand with YORK AIR CONDITIONING systems. Some of the largest and foremost theatres in the country are YORK equipped.

A comfortable and properly conditioned theatre certainly has an edge on the other fellow—box office receipts prove this.

Write for list of YORK equipped houses, and let us give you fuller information. No obligation on your part.

Methods for Spotlighting the Theatre Orchestra

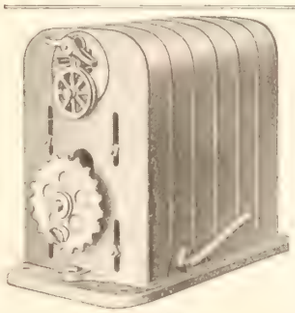
the ceiling a port hole of a size sufficient to freely pass the beam of each projector being cut in the ceiling.

There are a number of objections to placing the orchestra lighting units at this position in the theatre. In the first place, the units, when so mounted, must be fixed in position, since they cannot be easily reached for adjustment purposes. Lamp replacements are difficult to make and gelatines, for coloring the light, cannot be readily changed.

The types of lighting units so employed are such that the only control possible over the illumination obtained from each is in the size of the projected beam of light. No sharp cut-off in the illumination can be readily obtained so that some spilled light over the seating area adjacent to the orchestra pit is unavoidable.

With the mirror type of projectors, it is absolutely necessary to use a circular nest of spill shields at the mouth of each in order to prevent the stray light from the lamp scattering over an angle larger than that covered by the beam proper.

Probably the most serious objection to the ceiling location lies in the fact that the illumination comes from a point directly overhead and so tends to cast strong downward shadows, leaving the musicians faces but poorly lighted.



In theatres having a balcony, lighting units—either lens type spotlights or mirror type projectors—concealed in recessed compartments at the front of the balcony provide a better means for illuminating the members of the orchestra

From the standpoint of maintenance, too, this location is more to be desired, since the units are easily accessible and also can be adjusted—when required—to provide additional light to the stage.

There is more likelihood of the balcony's being farther removed from the orchestra than the ceiling location but any sacrifice in illumination advantage on this score is offset by the fact that the illumination from the first location is fairly broadside onto the musicians and so better serves the purpose.

Simplification!

That is the new note in theatre building. No complex problems of construction, furnishing, equipment, or service need now arise. National Theatre Supply Service takes all details off your shoulders, under a single Complete Contract.

One centralized management takes your plans and from the four bare walls, handles all details, and turns over to you the finished theatre, ready to open for business. All fixtures, furnishings, and mechanical equipment specified, inspected and O. K'd. by experts.

Only such a vast organization of men, money, and material, serving the nation from Thirty-one Points of Vantage, could render so complete, so efficient, and so simplified a service!

At the same time, we are glad to have orders for any equipment or any service, from a thumb tack to an organ, from selecting the right lobby display signs to the complete contract mentioned above.

What Price Names for Stage Presentation Acts

picture houses independently operated or operated by local chains will play vaudeville acts, is a question.

When the picture houses first dipped into presentation on an extensive scale the writer asked one of the most prominent producers of vaudeville acts if he expected some day to produce especially for the picture theatres. He was enthusiastic over the prospect at that time, as indeed were many other vaudeville producers. But last week when we asked him the same question he said he had lost all interest in the idea, declaring that there had been time enough for something to have developed along this line, and that since it had not, there was little likelihood that the future would bring forth any different result. It might be added that anything less than 20 weeks' playing time would not interest the bigger producers in that field.

While all these changes have been taking place, the pictures themselves have been working toward a goal which many showmen believe will be the ultimate in motion picture entertainments. This, of course, is the "sound picture." Vitaphone and Movietone have been making strides, and there are many other sound processes in the offing.

The first feature picture with interpolated sound effects is causing a great stir on Broadway, where "The Jazz Singer," with Al Jolson starred is playing to big houses as a two-a-day attraction at Warner's theatre It seems to be agreed by commentators that Vitaphone is putting "The Jazz Singer" across with the smash it is scoring on Broadway On all the signs Jolson should be as big a card in this picture as he is on the stage in the other cities of the country—the same Jolson who refused to go through with a picture he had agreed to make under Griffith's direction "because he was rotten on the screen," some years ago when there were no well established sound devices.

The offering furnishes a spectacular demonstration of the powers of the sound picture.

in a striking manner the wisdom of the management in beginning its operations toward popularizing the stage numbers by obtaining equipment of the most modern design.

One of the most striking features of the "Oddities" revue was furnished by the sight of the various sections moving into position to form a huge stairway, running from the stage floor to the height of the proscenium arch.

Similarly, it was the motion and uninterrupted "flow" of the stage portion of the bill, which gave such pace to "Oddities." The curtains were parted to disclose the "Capitolians," the new jazz orchestra seated on an elevated platform. Pat Rooney directed the musicians through their introductory piece, while the platform moved slowly, and silently, downstage. At the completion of the number, Rooney introduced Paul Specht, and as he took the band, the platform, bearing the orchestra and the leader, moved back a short distance, was picked up by No. 1 lift, and elevated about six feet above the floor level. Meanwhile, Pat Rooney continued with his act. The Rooneys were followed by Rome and Dunn, a singing team. As Rooney, the master of ceremonies, introduced this team the platform was lowered to stage level and moved up forward, bringing it well up stage into more intimate association with the singers. The curtains closed on this number. But the show continued without interruption. Spotlights were put on the center, or piano section of the orchestra pit, as this lift was elevated to stage level and the Keller Sisters and Lynch immediately started their group of popular songs. When this came to a close, the stage curtains were slowly drawn, as the singing act on the orchestra lift was dropped below stage level.

While this scheme used many combinations, the entire show did not begin to exhaust the resources of the new stage. Indeed, it is doubtful if any two shows of the length permitted on the two-hour program of pictures and presentations would run through more than half the range of combinations that may be devised with the equipment.

Two automats were used in the opening show, while the Capitol stage is equipped with three of these The No. 1 lift was elevated as a unit, whereas it may be operated in three separate sections at any elevation from the floor proper to a height of eight feet six inches.

All three elevations were used in the stairway scene. The principles were grouped upstage on the stage level. There was a stair running from this level up to the second lift, on which the jazz orches-

Here Is a Way to Save 25% in the Current Cost of Your Projection

Due to the fact that a direct current arc is the only type of lights that gives the proper luminosity desirable for perfect motion picture projection, a source of direct current is a necessity in all motion picture theatres. In practically all localities, outside of the very center of some of our largest cities, only alternating current is available, hence it is essential that some method of conversion into direct current be provided.

The Liberty Syncrovertor is a truly synchronous commutating rectifier, and a revolutionary improvement in this field, and as a unit for the conversion of A. C. to D. C. proves its superiority beyond all question of doubt. It will save fully 25% in your current cost of projection.

This highly efficient device consists of a transformer, a motor, a commutator, a switchboard control panel, all assembled in one unit, or with separate control panel. The actual rectification is done at the commutator—not within the motor.

The transformer of the Syncrovertor is the machine's own emergency unit. If the motor ceased to function, the transformer would furnish A. C. current of the proper voltage to the arc. Where the Syncrovertor is used, the "changeover" is effected without any flicker whatsoever on the screen.

Write us and let us tell you how you can save 25% in the cost of your projection.

tra was grouped either side of the second section of the stairs. The third section led from this level up to No. 2 lift, which was midway between the first platform and the bridge at the rear wall, from which the chorus girls made their way down the stairs.

The scene was a blaze of color and interesting lighting combinations, and this combined with the spectacular sight of the scene building up behind the principles was one that drew rounds of applause from the capacity crowds which turned out to see the new Capitol policy in actual operation.

The widespread interest this new stage has caused among theatre men and stage directors especially makes it evident that a picture theatre again will be something of the pioneer in developing greater production resources for scenic effects.

Several devices now commonly used in new theatre installations were designed originally for picture presentations, which necessitate a more flexible arrangement in order to run through a series of scenes and settings without stops. Moreover the smaller stage crews with which the picture theatre operates, required a greater amount of automatic devices.

Among these are the elevating orchestra pit, which makes an act of the orchestral presentations, and has the added advantages of eliminating the scene of general confusion caused by the musicians filing to their places in the pit in view of the audience, while it brings the orchestra well up into sight during the overture and lowers it under the screen sight lines during picture showings with orchestral accompaniment. The first elevating orchestra pit was installed by Peter Clark at the Eastman theatre in Rochester. A further development was the separate lift for the organ console, for which a still later refinement was a traversing device which permits the organist to revolve his platform so he can face the audience at an angle of 9 degrees

Other refinements of stage equipment which were first designed for picture presentation houses are the curtain that will draw, tableau and lift, operated with a single control; light bridges; light towers; noose cyclorama, and several others.

Thus owing to demands peculiar to its style of presentations, the picture theatre has given new impetus to the designing of stage machinery, a fact which is strikingly illustrated again in the new installations at the Capitol.

for spreading the air through the building. For heating, an adjustable deflector vane is arranged to direct the current of air generated by the blower running at reduced speed over the body and radiator of the heater, where its temperature is raised, then through the diffuser into the auditorium.

When used for cooling, the only change necessary is in the position of the deflector vane, which is easily closed back out of the way.

The blower unit has extra wide No. 12 gauge blades, cupped forward and supported by two 10 arm semi-steel spiders. It is equipped with a Variable Speed Pulley, which allows the operator to adjust the blower's speed to slow speed for ventilation, high speed for cooling, and intermediate speeds as required.

The heater is constructed of boiler plate ste el with joints cold riveted.

SILVERSHEET
"It Just CAN'T Be Torn"

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is the only screen made which offers these four recognized points of superiority all combined in one screen, and selling at a price no higher than that of ordinary screens:

1. CANVAS BASE

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is built on a non-tearable, abuse-resisting, puncture-proof canvas base. This fabric is so tough it resists the damage that would ruin a screen built on a lighter base.

2. SPECIFICATION SURFACE

The Tear-Proof Silversheet is the only screen made with a specification-built surface on a canvas base. This is the same Knobel-built pebble surface that has brought Silversheet world-wide fame for its projection qualities.

3. GENUINE REDWOOD FRAME

The genuine Redwood Silversheet tension frame is fitted with our well known steel jacket tension device, which always keeps the screen taut and gives the frame unlimited life.

drawn through a series of grilles at the floor line and up the return duct back to the fan room. It is at this point that the cold fresh air drawn in through the air intake house on the roof is mixed with the recirculated air coming up through the return duct. The by-pass damper, shown in the diagram under the air heater, may be regulated to proportion the amount of air going through the heater and the opening. In this way the air brought to the proper temperature. Correct manipulation of the dampers means plentiful supply of comfortably warm, fresh air for the audience.

The fan system of heating, therefore, insures uniform distribution of warmth and abundance of fresh air. Of particular interest to the theatre owner is the rapidity with which the house can be heated at the start of the day. The fresh air dampers are closed and the air is kept circulating through the house and back through the heater. When the theatre attains the required warmth and the patrons are seated, more or less fresh air is admitted. With direct radiation, the time necessary to heat the house is usually excessive. A certain amount of direct radiation, however, is advisable to maintain the temperature after the theatre has been sufficiently warmed. Thus, considerably less steam is consumed by the air heater in the fan room. That the fan system affords rapid warming has been a factor which has strongly appealed to the theatre owner.

The average increase in cost over direct radiation is about 25 per cent for installation and 50 to 60 per cent for operation.

As concerns stray light, it is important that here also, spill shields be used to prevent light from reaching the seating area. Such shields, however, do not permit the orchestral area to be sharply outlined

Space limitations for both the balcony and overhead ceiling positions are approximately the same and this, coupled with requirements for incandescent lamp type projectors, serve to limit the illuminating power of individual units.

Question Whether Fight Took Place

THE question as to whether there was a prize-fight at all between Tunney and Dempsey at Soldiers Field, Chicago, on September 22 entered into the court action at Vancouver, B. C., on October 20, in which Canadian Educational Films, Limited, claimed an injunction restraining J. J. Horan and the Nicholls Theatres, Limited, Vancouver, from showing pictures of the "alleged fight."

Counsel for Canadian Educational Films, Limited, applied for an adjournment of trial because the defense had denied that the fight ever took place. The adjournment was sought because it was necessary of get sworn evidence from Tex Rickard of New York that there had been the Tunney-Dempsey battle, and that moving pictures had been taken of it.

Chief Justice Hunter, of the Supreme Court at Vancouver, before whom the case was being argued, expressed the belief that the defense could admit the points, but adjourned the hearing to give both sides a chance to settle the case.

New Serial on Pathe's List of Shorts for Nov. 6th

The initial chapter of "The Masked Menace," the Pathe serial adaptation of "Still Face," a story by Clarence Buddington Kelland," is the principal offering on the Pathe program for the week of November 6th. Six other short subjects are also on the program.

"Against Odds" is the title of the first chapter of the new serial which co-features Larry Kent and Jean Arthur. Arch Heath directed a cast which included Thomas Holding, Laura Alberta, William Norton Bailey and John F. Hamilton.

"Chicken Feed" is the title of an "Our Gang" comedy which is also scheduled for the week. It was directed by Anthony Mack and Charles Oelze under the supervision of Robert McGowan. "Signs of Spring" is another of the Aesop Film Fables. Topics of the Day, No. 45, Pathe Review, No. 45, and issues, Nos. 92 and 93 of the Pathe News are the remaining releases for November 6th.

In the Review are: "Giants of the Swamps," "Fisherfolk" and "On the Road to Mandalay."

Children of Screen Stars Make Their Own Picture

The children of a number of prominent stars have been featured in a film at the Metropolitan studio by Madeline Brandeis. The picture shows the children making a film; it was directed by Robert Thornby and is to be released by Pathe very shortly. Each child in the cast carried an insurance of $10,000 during the picture's filming.

The director of the picture that the children make is Eric Von Stroheim, Jr., Billy Reid, son of the late Wallace Reid, is leading man. Others in the cast are Tim Holt, son of Jack Holt; Mary Desmond, daughter of William Desmond; Barbara Denny, daughter of Reginald Denny; Eileen O'Malley, daughter of Pat O'Malley; George Bosworth, son of Hobart Bosworth, and D'Arcy McCoy, son of Tim McCoy.

Weeklies Aligned With News Agencies

Pathe News Joins United Press; Paramount's Affiliation With American Press

THE close affiliation of the film and newspaper industries was emphasized this week by the announcement that Pathe News had become a member of the United Press. Paramount News has had an arrangement with the Associated Press for some time, and International News and M-G-M News are, of course, the Hearst screen publications.

By its arrangement with the U. P., Pathe News will have that press association's facilities in handling and gathering motion picture news and events all over the world.

The largest Pathe bureaus will receive United Press reports directly in their offices, insuring speedy dispatch of their cameramen to scenes of news events.

The Pathe-U.P. agreement was made some months ago, it is stated, and announcement was withheld pending completion of arrangements throughout this country and Europe for delivery of U.P. reports to local Pathe representatives.

Interviewed concerning the important arrangement between Paramount News and the Associated Press, Emanuel Cohen, Editor of Paramount News, stated:

"The deal between Paramount News and the Associated Press is far-reaching in scope. One of the details of the arrangement is that Paramount News supplies Associated Press with still pictures of news events in return for the Associated Press service on news events, the same as is supplied to its membership of over 1,100 newspapers throughout the world.

"In addition, the agreement between Paramount News and Associated Press provides for close contact between the Paramount News staff and the correspondents of Associated Press in all parts of the world. We often work together on stories."

Confer on Trade Parley

Conventions of Theatre Owner Organizations to Be Held in Many States

REGIONAL conferences of motion picture exhibitors are looked forward to with more interest than ever before this year, as a result of the Federal Trade Practice conference held in New York. Delegates to the New York sessions are reporting back to their respective groups.

Michigan held its convention at Jackson last week and it was agreed that exhibitors benefited by the New York gathering. The distributor concessions on block booking were taken to mean that other concessions would be made in other directions. Satisfaction was expressed with the committee of six which was elected to redraft the uniform contract.

Among other exhibitor meetings scheduled for the immediate future are those at Omaha, November 1st; Little Rock, November 3rd and 4th; Oklahoma City, November 7th and 8th; Seattle, November 8th; Dallas, November 9th and 10th; Kansas City, November 11th and 12th, and Columbus, November 15th and 16th.

With regard to the New York conference, B. N. Berinstein, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Southern California, said:

"The meeting of all minds on two subjects alone was worth many, many times the time and expense involved. I refer (a) to the agreement and endorsement of the principle of fair arbitration and the formula agreed upon in connection with it to keep it immaculate, (b) to the use of a uniform exhibition contract and the provision and vehicle not only to provide the machinery to write and put into general use a fair exhibition contract, but the machinery to keep it fair and square and change it from time to time as conditions may warrant."

Harlan T. Hall, of Detroit, was elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., during the closing session of the eighth annual convention last week at the Hotel Hayes.

Other officers elected were: Vice-president, C. W. Porter, Detroit; secretary, A. Eiseman, Flint; treasurer, John E. Niebes, Detroit; directors: W. S. McLaren, Jackson; Samuel Ackerman, Detroit; Harry Angell, Adrian; W. S. Butterfield, Detroit; Glenn A. Cross, Battle Creek; Joseph R. Denniston, Monroe; Allen Johnson, Grand Rapids; E. E. Kirchner, Detroit; Vernon Locey, Howell; C. A. Miller, Alma; James C. Ritter, Detroit; P. C. Schram, Kalamazoo; George W. Trendle, Detroit; Bert Williams, Detroit, and Fred De Lodder, Detroit.

NcNamee Attraction at Loew's Cleveland House

Graham McNamee was the headline attraction at Loew's State Theatre, Cleveland, last week. It was the first time that the popular radio announcer had ever appeared as a vaudeville act. He was a tremendous hit, however, and was so enthusiastically encouraged that all his nervousness wore off after the opening Sunday. He had to leave Cleveland Friday night so as to be in New Haven on Saturday to broadcast the Yale-Army game. He went by airplane.

Lollier Issues a Warning

Says Various Means of Slashing Admission Prices Reflect on Houses

W. H. LOLLIER, a company executive of Wesco, has sounded a warning against the various policies of many houses in failing to collect the entire amount of admission charges called for on the face of tickets. He cites many ways of cutting prices and doubts if any of them stimulate excess receipts at the box-office.

Among the methods used in cutting admission prices, Lollier points out the following:

Issuing coupons which, together with a specified amount, entitle the bearer to one general admission ticket.

Contests where coupons are issued which entitle the bearer to bring one additional person to the theatre, with only one paid admission, or, in other words, two people are admitted for the price of one admission.

Contests where coupons are distributed which entitle the bearer to a specified rate of discount at the box office.

Newspaper ads stating that "this clipping, together with a specified amount, will admit bearer."

Merchandise contests which run over a long period of time at special discounts for tickets.

Regarding these, Lollier says:

"There is considerable doubt if any of these methods actually mean increased revenue to your box office when they are on a cut-rate basis. Don't forget, too, that anything of this nature cheapens your theatre, and really decreases your standard of admission prices, instead of maintaining the high standards, for which each theatre manager should strive.

"Past experience has proved that where coupons and cut rate tickets have been distributed, it actually makes enemies for your theatre instead of new patrons. Something always creeps in that causes dissatisfaction. To quote Mr. Franklin at one of our cabinet meetings:

"'Any time you give anything away free, you lose a good customer!'"

Jesse J. Goldberg Returns from Europe

JESSE J. GOLDBERG, president of First Division Distributors, Inc., and producers of the James Ormont productions, returned this week to New York from a trip to England and the Continent which he began on September 28th. He will remain at the home office for a week conferring with Jack Lustberg, the First Division New York manager.

While abroad, Mr. Goldberg established agencies at Wardour Street, London, Cite Frevise, Paris, and Rue Zerezo, Brussels. A. Fried will represent First Division in London, and J. Vanderheyden on the Continent.

The First Division executive also arranged for the production of three subjects, one in Vienna, one in Berlin and the other in London. An American star and an American director will be sent abroad to appear in these productions.

Mr. Goldberg reports that American pictures receive strong competition from the German and French markets, and it is no longer possible to sell any kind of American pictures in Europe.

New Saenger Bond Issue

Flotation of $800,000 Accompanies Statement Showing Six Month's Profits

SAENGER THEATRES and subsidiaries, with their 200 theatres in 83 cities show consolidated net earnings for the six months ending July 2, 1927 of $555,843.49 before depreciation, and $398,729.26 after depreciation, according to a statement issued in connection with flotation of $800,000 of first mortgage and collateral trust bonds.

The Saenger houses controlled by the company and subsidiaries, are located in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Florida, Arkansas, Alabama, North Carolina, New Mexico, Cuba, Panama and Jamaica. The company is one of the original twenty-six franchise holders of First National.

The new bond issue is a part of series B of the sinking fund of 6½ per cent bonds, of which $2,500,000 are authorized and dates as of August 1st, 1927, which become due October 1st, 1940. The coupons are in denominations of 5$00 and $1,000 with interest payable February and August 1st.

The consolidated net earnings of the company and its subsidiaries for the four years and six months ending July 2nd, 1927 averaged $512,435.55 per annum, or equivalent to over 3.59 times annual interest charges on the amount of the bonds to be presently outstanding. For the last six months the earnings were equivalent to over 5.59 times interest charges of that period.

Net assets of the company on July 2nd, 1927 are shown as $5,843,646.76, which is equivalent to $2,665 per $1,000 bond to be presently outstanding. The bond issue is secured by a direct first mortgage upon all the real estate and buildings of the company owned at the time of the execution of the mortgage dated October 1st, 1925.

Goetz Assistant Paramount Treasurer

HARRY M. GOETZ, former vice-president and production manager of the Consolidated Film Industries, has been appointed assistant treasurer of Paramount-Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The appointment of Mr. Goetz was said by Ralph A. Kohn, treasurer, to be in line with the company's plan of bringing its treasury department into closer relationship with other phases of the corporation's activities. Mr. Goetz will first be temporarily assigned to the production department.

Mr. Goetz comes to Paramount after an experience in the film business dating back to September, 1910.

Legit. Theatre in Paris Acquired by Fadman

The Theatre des Champs Elyses, the largest legitimate theatre in Paris, has been taken over by a syndicate headed by Edwin Miles Fadman. The house is now being converted into a high class pre-release theatre and it will be run according to strictly American methods. Included in the purchase were the Comedie des Champs Elysees and the Studio des Champs Elysees, two smaller theatres.

Associated with Mr. Fadman in the enterprise are: William Celestin, son-in-law of S. W. Strauss, Jefferson Davis Cohn, a director in the Compagnie Internationale des Wagons-Lits, the Honorable Jack Stern, son of Lord Michelham, and D. Frankel.

Charlie Chaplin Completes "The Circus" for U. A.

"The Circus," the new Charlie Chaplin production for United Artists which has been in the making for two years, is now being cut and titled by Chaplin, who wrote, directed and produced it, besides acting the chief role. There are 588,000 feet of film which have to be cut down by Mr. Chaplin to eight reels, a slightly longer footage than any of the other Chaplin films.

Merna Kennedy, who makes her screen debut as the comedian's leading lady in "The Circus," has been placed under contract to play opposite him in his next production. In Chaplin's support are Harry Crocker, Betty Morrissey, Allan Garcia, Henry Bergman, Stanley J. Sanford, John Rand, George Davis, Steve Murphy and Doc Stone.

Roland H. Totheroh was chief cameraman on the new Chaplin production; his assistants were Jack Wilson and Mark Marlatt.

Title of Maynard Film Changed to "Wagon Show"

Ken Maynard's new Western picture which Charles R. Rogers has been producing under the temporary title of "The Caravan Trail," has had a change of title and will in future be known as "The Wagon Show." Harry J. Brown is directing the picture, a story of the circus by Forde Beebe which Marion Jackson adapted.

Ruth Taylor Wins Long-Term Paramount Contract

Ruth Taylor, who was selected by Jesse L. Lasky, Anita Loos and Hector Hurnbull for the part of Lorelei Lee in Paramount's "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," has been signed to a long term contract by Paramount. Executives at the studio predict a great future for her. Miss Taylor is a former bathing beauty of the Mack Sennett unit which produces Pathe comedies.

"Our Gang" Heads M-G-M Shorts for November

"Heebee Jeebees," the third Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release to feature "Our Gang," tops the collection of short subjects which the company has selected for November. The release for the "Gang" number, produced under the supervision of Robert McGowan, will be issued on November 19th.

"Assorted Babies," a Ufa Oddities, will be released on the 5th. "Hats Off," co-featuring Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, is also set for the 5th. "Love 'Em and Feed 'Em," the third of Max Davidson's comedies to be released by M-G-M, will be sent forth from exchanges on November 12th. "The Fight For Life," another of the Ufa shorts, is scheduled for the 19th. "Buffalo Bill's Last Fight" is the second of the series of Great Events, done in Technicolor and set for the 26th. "Us," featuring Charlie Chase, supported by Margaret Quimby, is the last release for the month.

William Morgan, recently appointed general European manager for First National

West Pointers to Attend "Dress Parade" at Strand

When the Pathe special release, "Dress Parade," is shown at the Mark Strand Theatre in New York City the evening of Saturday, October 29th, 300 cadets from West Point will be present among the audience.

The cadets will make the trip from the Academy in busses with a motorcycle police escort. They will leave their quarters about 3:00 in the afternoon, arriving at the Hotel Astor at 6:00 o'clock. After supper they will march from the Astor to the Strand Theatre preceded by a band. They are due at the theatre at 7:25 o'clock.

Manager Joseph Plunkett has reserved a large block of seats for his guests.

Murnau Ready to Begin Filming "Four Devils"

After touring with the Ringling Circus and making tests of acrobats in the Fox New York studios, Fred W. Murnau left this week for Hollywood to prepare "The 4 Devils" for the screen. Actual production probably will not begin until early in December.

Murnau spent two days in New York looking over acrobats and other performers eager to obtain parts in "The 4 Devils." The remainder of his time was taken up with inspecting theatres, visiting American industrial plants and attending plays.

W. B. Have No Definite Plans for Klein Play

The announcement of last week from Warner Bros.' Hollywood studio that a picturization of "The Lion and the Mouse," Charles Klein's old stage play, is planned, proves to be premature. Nothing has been definitely decided upon concerning the play. When a decision regarding the play has been made the movie public will be duly appraised, the Warner Bros. home office in New York says.

Paramount to Release Five Features in November

Five feature productions will come from Paramount during November; four two-reel comedies and four one-reel cartoons will also be released with the features.

The five pictures of longer length are "Open Range," set for November 5th; "She's a Sheik," scheduled for November 12th; "The City Gone Wild," to be issued on November 12th; "The Spotlight," set for November 19th, and "The Last Waltz," a Ufa production and November 26th release.

Tiffany Completes" Night Life" and "Haunted Ship"

Tiffany has completed two features scheduled the 1927-1928 season, "Night Life" and "The Haunted Ship." This boosts the Tiffany schedule to five productions finished, with nineteen more to come.

Washington Firm Plans New Theatre in Seattle

ANNOUNCEMENT of plans for the building of the first de luxe first-run neighborhood theatre in the city of Seattle, Washington, was made in the Pacific Northwest city last week by Ivan W. Hyland, vice-president of the Washington Theatrical Enterprises. Plans for the new structure call for a $1,000,000 picture theatre and eight-story office building in the University District, to be built within the next few months for opening in less than a year from the present time.

The new University District theatre will have a seating capacity of 3,200, according to present plans, and will accommodate the largest stage attractions. It will be designed to correspond with the architecture of the buildings on the campus of the University of Washington just a few blocks away.

Ray L. Brown, recently connected with Hamrick's circuit of Blue Mouse Theatres, is managing director of the Washington Theatrical Enterprises organization.

Richmount Pict. Concludes Foreign Sales

D. J. Mountan, president of Richmount Pictures, Inc., has just returned from Europe, where he visited England and the Continent, concluding several sales with European distributing companies. The following sales were made by Mr. Mountan:

Six features and 12 shorts to Pathe Freres Cinema, Ltd., for United Kingdom; 8 features and 12 comedies to Argosy Films, Ltd., for United Kingdom; 50 features and a serial to Serafin, Brussels, for Belgium; 38 features and a serial for Spain and Portugal; 30 features for Germany; 6 comedies for Scandinavia; a serial for Egypt; 12 comedies for Poland.

Prior to his European trip Mr. Mountan also sold 52 pictures for Australia, New Zealand, Dutch East Indies and the Straits Settlements to Australian Films, Ltd.; 38 features and 48 comedies to Sociedad General Cinematografica for Argentine, Uruguay and other South American countries; 18 features and 12 comedies for Brazil.

King Leaves for Hollywood to Start New Film

Henry King left the United Artists home office in New York on Thursday, October 20th, on the Lake Shore Limited for Hollywood where he will decide between "The Darling of the Gods" and "My Woman" as to which will be his next production. The director definitely stated that the two plays will be his next productions, but that he will confer with John W. Considine, Jr., general manager of production for the Art Cinema Corporation, before attempting either.

The director spent three hours with David Belasco talking over "The Darling of the Gods," the play of which Belasco was co-author with John Long. Mr. King invited the theatrical impresario to Hollywood during the production of the play. No announcement was made as to who will play Yo-San, the featured feminine role in "The Darling of the Gods," though several screen actresses were mentioned by Belasco for the role.

Pathe Westerns Will Be Made at Metropolitan

Phil Ryan, Pacific Coast Pathe executive, and Lester J. Scott, general manager of Action Pictures, producers of Westerns for Pathe, have completed arrangements whereby the Buffalo Bill, Jr., production personnel will be transferred to the Metropolitan studio. Leo Maloney, producer and director of the Western series featuring Dan Coleman, will also transfer his activities to the Metropolitan.

Jack Holt Signed for Two More Columbia Films

A contract with Columbia Pictures has been signed by Jack Holt to appear in two more of the company's releases for the present season. He has just finished the starring role in Columbia's "The Tiger" and will start immediately working in "The Warning," based on an adaptation of the original story, "The Silent Service," and scheduled for early release.

First Nat'l Sets Four Specials for December

Four of First National's special productions appear on the company's list of pictures scheduled for release during December. "Her Wild Oats," Colleen Moore's new vehicle; "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," "A Texas Steer" and "Valley of the Giants," are the quartet of films that will make their appearance the Christmas month. "Helen" and "A Texas Steer" are deemed by First Natianal two of its most ambitious productions to date.

The change in releases removes "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" from the previously announced November list, and substitutes "Home Made" as the November 20th release. "Her Wild Oats" is nearing the completion of camera work under Marshall Neilan's direction. "Valley of the Giants, will also enter the cutting room soon. "A Texas Steer" was advanced from January to December. Editing is now being finished.

Sterling Product Sold for Cuban, Hungarian Fields

A deal has just been concluded between Sterling Pictures, a Cuban company and an Hungarian firm for the distribution of the Sterling productions in the countries represented by the two foreign distributing organizations. The transaction with Cia. Cinematografica Cuban, is one of Sterling's most outstanding negotiations as it calls for Sterling's entire schedule for the open market—38 films—the company's entire program since its inception three years ago. The deal was consummated by Irving Briskin and Felipe Meir.

The other sale calls for the selling in the Hungarian field of 18 Sterling films and was completed by A. Fried, Sterling's representative, with offices in London.

Hornblow Arrives for "Devil Dancer" Premiere

Arthur Hornblow, Jr., chief production executive for Samuel Goldwyn, arrived in New York this week to make final preparations for the presentation in New York of "The Devil Dancer," Gilda Gray's first United Artists production.

Mr. Hornblow will shortly be represented by a new stage comedy, "Saint Obin," which he wrote and adapted.

Tiffany Changes Title of "Woman of the World"

Tiffany's title, "A Woman of the World," has been changed to "A Woman Against the World." It is now being filmed, with Harrison Ford playing the male lead, and Georgia Hale, Harvey Clarke also assigned parts. Director Phil Rosen will handle the megaphone.

Renee Adoree to Play With Gilbert in "The Cossacks"

Renee Adoree will play a Russian role in "The Cossacks," John Gilbert's new starring vehicle, which is soon to go into production under George Hill's direction.

Ernest Torrence is the only player selected to date.

Fred Desberg of Cleveland, general manager of Loew's Ohio theatres, who was chairman of the Affiliated Exhibitors Group at the recent Trade Practice Conference

Stahl Joins Tiffany As Production Chief

Is Made Vice-President and Firm Becomes Tiffany-Stahl Productions

TIFFANY PRODUCTIONS, INC., announces that John M. Stahl, upon concluding his contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has aligned himself with L. A. Young and M. H. Hoffman, becoming vice-president supervising production. This deal was consummated after Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Fox Film Corporation are said to have made repeated overtures for the services of Mr. Stahl. Tiffany has added Mr. Stahl's name to its own, and the firm name becomes "Tiffany-Stahl Productions, Inc."

With the advent of Mr. Stahl into the production activities of Tiffany, the announcement goes on to state, a change of comprehensive proportions in the cost and quality of Tiffany-Stahl pictures is now in the course of compilation, with an amount running into millions of dollars to be expended for the budget for next year's schedule of picture production. The statement continues that Tiffany-Stahl productions will commit themselves to a policy of highest box office quality, regardless of cost.

Mr. Stahl has been supervising productions for many years, being responsible for many of the outstanding box office successes during his affiliation with Louis B. Mayer, First National, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He has just completed for Metro "In Old Kentucky," a special, and has supervised such pictures as "The Child Thou Gavest Me," "The Song of Life," "The Wanters," "The Dangerous Age," "Why Men Leave Home," "Memory Lane," Husband and Lovers," "Fine Clothes" and "The Gay Deceiver."

In closing the announcement of the formation of the Tiffany-Stahl Corporation, the company states that this new departure is just a necessary, natural expansion.

Walter Futter Married to Patricia Murphy

Friends in the industry are just learning of the marriage of Walter A. Futter to Patricia Murphy, daughter of Mrs. Patrick Murphy of Boston and Pasadena, at the Little Church Around the Corner on Thursday, New York, October 13. Announcements of the wedding came as a real surprise to Mr. Futter's friends. Mr. and Mrs. Futter are at home to their friends at 111 East 75th Street, New York. Mr. Futter is producer of the Curiosities series of one-reel novelties released by Educational.

Metzger, "U" Executive, Undergoes Operation

Lou B. Metzger, general sales manager for Universal, was operated upon last Monday at St. Luke's Hospital, New York City, as the result of a severe attack of gall stones. The operation was very successful, and although the Universal executive put in several bad days early this week, he is now reported to be well along towards recovery. It will be several weeks before he returns to his desk.

Samuelson Suit Against Hays Up for Hearing

THE suit of Sydney E. Samuelson, exhibitor of Newton, N. J., brought three years ago against Will H. Hays and members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was last week marked for immediate trial in the Federal Court of New York. Judge Julian W. Mack denied motions on the part of the several defendants asking for separate trials; a single defense must be made.

The plaintiff charges conspiracy and asks $450,000 worth of damages.

"Get-Together" Dinner for Film Men Planned

Plans for a "get-together" dinner to be participated in by exhibitors and film men, have been launched by President Jack Miller and Secretary Ludwig Siegel, of the Exhibitors' Association of Chicago, and it is understood that President Jack Simpson and the directors of the Chicago Film Board of Trade look favorably on the project and will give it their heartiest co-operation. Exhibitors throughout Illinois and Northern Indiana will be invited to participate in the festivities. Details will be worked out at a meeting of the exhibitors and film men, which is scheduled for this week.

New Fox Baltimore House For Roxy Shows

Will Give Company Big First-Run Circuit; Western Program Also Likely

REPORTS from different sections of the country indicate an extensive building plan for Fox Theatres with houses contemplated in Baltimore, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee and other cities. While there seems to be doubt here and there that these plans will be carried out, it seems probable that in the near future a circuit will be completed over which the Roxy shows will be booked.

Two theatre sites are said to have been lined up for Fox Theatres in Baltimore and as soon as one of them is definitely decided upon construction plans will be launched for a 5,000 seat house. With Stanley and Loew's practically in control in Baltimore Fox feels that this is the proper time for invasion with a new theatre modern in every detail and with a large seating capacity.

The Fox house at Nevins Street and Flatbush Avenue in Brooklyn will be completed next year and a 5,000 seat house is contemplated for Newark. When both of these houses are a reality shows will be routed from the Roxy in New York City to Brooklyn, Newark, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. The chain will be augmented as rapidly as possible so as to provide more time and fill in the gaps for the Roxy shows.

Minneapolis, St. Paul and Milwaukee are showing keen interest in the reiteration of the Fox statement that large houses will be built in the Twin Cities and Milwaukee. Commenting on the situation, Greater Amusements says:

"First announcement of the plans was frowned on by the more prominent members of the film colonies in this territory and Saxe and F. & R. didn't give much credence to the report and, for that matter, they undoubtedly still think that Fox is using the theatre building report in the Middle West as a means to set the Fox programs in these districts.

"Erection of a 5,000-seat house at Milwaukee by Fox would make a pretty three-cornered fight in that city, as Saxe and Universal are both well entrenched. This latter city seems to offer Fox a much better battle ground than the Twin Cities, although it is undoubtedly the belief of Fox that he would only have the Publix-F. & R. house in Minneapolis and the Capitol in St. Paul to worry about in these two towns as the coming of new, modern 5,000-seat houses would spell the doom of the lesser modern theatres and relegate them to the 10 and 15 cent class."

Lives of 861 Employees Insured by Fox Films

AS one of the prominent exponents of insurance, and carrying on his own life one of the largest policies in existence, William Fox has insured the lives of 861 Fox Films executive and departmental employees, they to name the beneficiaries. The new policy covers every department, including the foreign sales organization as well as the domestic field. Each employee is covered as long as he remains with the Fox organization.

Three weeks ago, before the insurance plan went into effect, Mr. Fox sent his personal check of $5,000 to the widow of George Allison, manager of the Fox branch exchange in Atlanta, Ga., who had just died. The insurance for the Fox employees will not cost them anything.

The departments covered by the insurance and for which the policy is already in effect include those of the home office, salesmen, bookers and branch attaches, traveling auditors, Fox News, Fox Varieties, and other branches of the Fox Films organization.

Exhibitors Urged to Aid Red Cross Roll Call

The object of the annual Roll Call Campaign of the American Red Cross can be publicized from the screen of the nation if exhibitors will take advantage of the 17,000 slides of which the Radio-Mat Company, Inc., of New York, has mailed to theatres all over the country. These slides are accompanied by an appeal from R. F. Woodhull, president of the M. P. T. O. A., who remarks that he is sure exhibitors everywhere will be glad to assist their local Red Cross Chapter "in such ways as are possible."

Mr. Woodhull recalls to mind the cooperation received from the Red Cross in the Mississippi Flood Relief work in conjunction with State and regional exhibitor bodies. Two of the slides are illustrated, one with a picture of the earth sick in bed with the Red Cross coming to render assistance, and the other with a figure of a Red Cross nurse comforting a little tot. The third slide bears the story: "The Nation Needs the Red Cross—The Red Cross Needs Your Support—Join Now."

Famous Canadian Suit Reaches Council

The suit of the Canadian Performing Right Society, Toronto, against Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Toronto, asking for an injunction to restrain the defendant corporation from performing two musical works which, it is alleged, were played in a theatre of the company at Toronto, has reached the Privy Council at London, England.

Notice has been received at Ottawa, the Canadian Capital, that the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council had granted the society leaves to appeal the decisions of Canadian Courts, which had dismissed the case with costs against plaintiff. Claim has been entered for 10,000 damages in the action.

The respondent corporation urged that assignments under which the petitioner derived title were not registered in Canada. This defense had been sustained by the Canadian courts. The petitioning society submitted to the Judicial Committee, however, that if this prevented action for the protection of its rights, it was repugnant to the spirit and terms of the Berne Copyright Convention, which prescribed that copyright should not be subjected to any formalities.

France to Resume Law Practice for Film Firms

Royal W. France, for some time president of Salt's Textile Company, Inc., of 38 East 25th Street, New York City, and general manager for the Receiver of the Salt's Textile Manufacturing Company of Bridgeport, Connecticut, will resume on November 1st the practice of law, giving special attention as heretofore to motion picture films. His offices will be at 512 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

At one time Mr. France was vice-president and general manager of the Triangle Film Company. He later represented as attorney many of the leading companies in the industry, but temporarily renounced his practice to devote his entire attention to the affairs of Salt's Company. He was formerly a member of the firm of Konta, Kirchwey, France and Michael.

Harold Shumate Editorial Supervisor for Gotham

Harold Shumate, author of many scenarios for various producing companies, has been appointed by Sam Sax, president of Gotham Productions, to the newly created position of editorial production supervisor for Gotham. Mr. Shumate will assume his new duties without having any of the cares and details relative to financial and other strictly business matters. The appointment is an endeavor on the part of Gotham to remove the business end of picture making from the artistic side of production.

The new production supervisor will confine himself strictly to the screen product, its adaptation, screen treatment, continuity, shooting, editing and titling. Carrol Sax will continue as production manager handling the business details.

Five New Films Granted N. Y. Charters at Albany

Tell, New York City; Baker-Ratoff Productions, Inc., $40,000, Gregory Ratoff, Philip Baker, Sidney Silvers, New York City; First Productions, Inc., capitalization not stated, Harry C. Hand, Samuel C. Wood, William M. Stevens, New York City.

Key City Reports

New York City

PREDICTIONS that other Broadway theatres would feel the effects of the Capitol's extraordinary advertising campaign on their new policy of vaudeville headliners, etc., and pictures, would seem to be justified by reports that many of the big houses were decidedly off for last week.

However, even the Capitol with its strong presentation and the favorably reported on William Haines' picture "Spring Fever," failed to hold up the high mark set the previous week. This may somewhat be explained by the theory that many of the Capitol's old timers who enjoyed the old style presentation were not sold on the new and stayed away the following week. While they represent a minority, it takes time to build up vaudeville patronage.

At the Strand, the resignation of Carl Edouarde as musical director and the engagement of Nathaniel Schilkret's Victor orchestra, is the big news of this house at the current writing—unless the report be true that the hammers and chisels are about to begin a remodeling tattoo inside. "When a Man Loves" was the picture that only averaged fair business, the fact that many saw it while doing an extended run, partly accounting for the fall.

There are plenty of comedies on Broadway these days and perhaps that partly explains why the Paramount fell behind with "Tell It to Sweeney." However, other Publix houses, the Criterion and Rialto did exceedingly well with "Wings" and "Jesse James," respectively. "Firemen, Save My Child," another comedy at the Rivoli, will probably end its run this week to make room for another picture.

The Roxy again kept up its average with "East Side, West Side," but showmanchip tells the story of the consistent high gross at this house. The swing of the Roxy presentation pulls the public's purse strings.

"Les Miserables," with its run at the Central, has given some of the wise ones around New York a jolt. They failed to take into consideration the popularity of the Victor Hugo novel. "Uncle Tom" will follow the latter part of next week.

"The Irresistible Lover" and "The Garden of Allah, at the Colony and Embassy theatres, registered fair business. At the Gaiety "The King of Kings" continues to be the oldest Broadway show. "The Student Prince" is doing well enough for the present at the Astor.

At Warners, "The Jazz Singer" is still packing them in. The Jewish trade is strong on this one. Two other specials, "The Patent Leather Kid" and "Sunrise," are still going strongly—the Mussolini Movietone helping with Italian trade at the latter.

Chicago

BUSINESS was again reported spotty in Chicago territory, and although a general improvement was noted with the advent of the fall, many of the smaller and medium sized houses did not play to normal receipts.

An anniversary week celebration was the occasion for the strong bill at the Chicago, which played to big houses, the program including "A Gentleman of Paris" on the screen, Spitalny's big orchestral creation, "Martha," Jules Buffano's stage orchestra, and specialties. At the Roosevelt "The Rough Riders" completed the first week of its extended run to fair crowds, while "The Magic Flame" drew well in its second week at McVickers'. The usual big business was done at the Oriental, which offered Paul Ash and his gang in "Spain" as the stage feature and "Spring Fever" on the screen. "What Price Glory" plus Movietone continued to do good business at the Monroe, where it is nearing the end of its run. "The Reno Divorce" and Vitaphone were the Orpheum offerings and continued to play to fair business.

At the Uptown Benny Kreuger and his band with "Hula" and the Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures as a screen extra accounted for a big week, the fight pictures figuring strongly in the result. "Slightly Used" and Meroff's band headed the screen and stage bills at the Granada, which did normal business for the week. Fair attendance was pulled by the Sheridan bill, which included "The Angel of Broadway" on the screen and Verne Buck's orchestra on the stage. "Slightly Used" on the screen and Kaley, plus the personal appearance of the Loomis Twins, and Vitaphone at the Marbro resulted in average receipts.

The Tivoli on the southside had "The Big Parade" as its major screen attraction and an elaborate stage show, and did more than average business. At the Avalon the bill which included "College" on the screen, Buddy Fisher and his band in "Campus Capers," Vitaphone and specialties, proved a good box office bill. The Capitol, with "Swim, Girl, Swim," Del and his merry-makers and Vitaphone did average business.

Cleveland

THE picture business here was spotty last week. Wherever there was an unusual picture or an especially interesting vaudeville act, business went sky high. Just an average good program got away with just average business.

"What Price Glory" scored a great success at Keith's Palace where it played six performances daily as against the usual policy of four performances a day. "The Magic Flame" went over splendidly at the Stillman and is held for a second week. "Rough Riders," which was well exploited and heavily advertised, also did a lot of business last week for the Cameo, and is being held a second week. "Body and Soul" was judged just an average picture, but the State theatre drew capacity crowds owing to the engagement of Graham McNamee as the headliner. "Shanghai Bound" did average business at the Allen, where it was surrounded by elaborate novelty numbers. "Ben Hur" was only moderately successful at the Park, where it played its initial popular priced neighborhood run in the city. The Circle reported only fair business with "Hard Boiled Haggerty" as the feature attraction, and Vitaphone acts as the special added attraction. Reade's Hippodrome played to average good houses with "A Man's Past" as the feature attraction the first half of the week and "Good as Gold," with Buck Jones the last half of the week. "The Chinese Parrot" attracted better than average business at Keith's East 105th street. The Little Theatre of the Movies did only fairly well during the second week of "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari.". Neighborhood houses continue to report business as only fair, and up to what it was last year at this time.

Legitimate competition was keen last week.

Boston

SNAPPY, cool weather, with an occasional shower, provided ideal conditions for another big week for the Boston theatres. The season is now in full swing and box office stories are proving highly satisfactory.

Next week will bring to Boston the first road show of the season, Universal's "Les Miserables," which opens October 31 at the Colonial Theatre for a three weeks' run.

"Shanghai Bound" was last week's screen offering at the Metropolitan, playing to heavy business throughout the week. Southern melodies predominated in the stage presentation. In response to popular demand, a return showing of "Camille" was given Sunday.

"What Price Glory" was the feature at Loew's State, playing to capacity houses all week at popular prices. It established road show records in Boston and now, as a feature, it has come very near establishing a new record for the State.

"The Big Parade," another road show which had long runs in Boston, appears again as a feature at the Exeter and the Capitol, playing to big houses at both.

"Underworld" is the feature at the Scollay Square Olympia and next week moves to the Capitol.

"Two Girls Wanted" is the feature at the Keith-Albee Boston Theatre, where it is shown for the first time in New England, receiving very favorable comment and heavy patronage.

Other features for the week reporting good grosses are "The Blood Ship" at the University and the Fenway, "The Gingham Girl" at the Fenway, "The Drop Kick" at the Washington Street Olympia, "Cruise of the Helion" and "Publicity Madness" at the twin houses, Modern and Beacon, "Twelve Miles Out" at the Lancaster and "Mockery" at the Bowdoin Square.

Seattle

THE past week in the Pacific Northwest territory was one of average business only, being marked by only one attraction that was stronger than ordinary. This attraction was "The Big Parade" at the United Artists Theatre, playing its first week at general prices following the road showing more than a year ago. The film broke practically every house record at the United Artists during its first week, grossing close to $17,500 in a house that is doing good business when it grosses several thousand less than that. A second week began very strong, also.

At the Fifth Avenue Theatre, "After Midnight" pleased the scores of Norma Shearer admirers, and a Fanchon-Marco stage show entitled the "Blues Idea" was satisfactory. Hermie King, former Seattle orchestra leader in burlesque circles, made his bow as musical director and master of ceremonies, following the departure of Eddie Peabody. [illegible] had a very tough [illegible] his hands, following Peabody, but seemingly was quite popular with his opening week's specialties.

The Blue Mouse Theatre deviated from the usual Warner Brothers program and featured "The Blood Ship" as the first of several independent pictures that they will feature during the coming season. The picture played to very satisfactory business, aided materially by a pleasing group of Vitaphone acts. Business was very good for the week.

"Metropolis" at the Columbia Theatre played to good houses for a week, but was not strong enough in box office appeal to last more than the first seven days. From a production standpoint it was highly praised, but the story was not particularly enjoyed by the audiences. Francesco Longo was featured in a handsomely staged and beautifully presented piano specialty that was very well received.

The Liberty Theatre offered "The Life of Riley" as its screen attraction, but the picture did only a fair business. Despite reduced prices, this house seems to have lost its hold on the public, and business has been far below normal for several months.

At Pantages, "The Joy Girl" was considered a pleasing program picture that appealed to the average audience. A good program of vaudeville put the show across to pleasing business.

The Orpheum featured "The Angel of Broadway" and this was far below the calibre of film that local audiences enjoy. The vaudeville program was mediocre, also. Business at this brand new house has been noticeably slipping since the opening, six weeks ago, and the calibre of film and stage offerings must be improved if the house is to do satisfactory gross.

The Embassy Theatre this week dropped its stage attractions and entered upon a policy of two first run pictures each week, apparently as a result of only mediocre business. Prices of 25c at all times will remain as before.

The Dempsey-Tunney pictures, after cleaning up at the Winter Garden a few weeks ago, were brought back again this week, and in conjunction with a program of short subjects and comedies, again attracted capacity houses. Neighborhood business was just average.

Detroit

EXHIBITORS here experienced a good past week with the advent of clear and cool weather.

Two outstanding films, "Seventh Heaven" and "The Way of All Flesh," top the extended run list. Extremely favorable comment from public and press here has been pronnounced on each. The former, playing in the Fox-Washington with Movietone and popular prices, did remarkable business, while Emil Jannings brought exceedingly heavy trade to the Adams.

Pictures presented in vaudeville houses were Ricardo Cortez' "By Whose Hand?", which drew nicely at the Oriental; "13th Juror" doing average in the State; and "A Harp in Hock" making good money in the two K-A theatres.

"The Fair Co-Ed," with Marion Davies, was another feature booked for heavy returns. The turnout on this one was mostly from high schools and large enough to require a hold-over. Esther Ralston, with "Figures Don't Lie," also proved a good drawing card, augmented by a stage attraction. The Colonial was above par showing "Shanghaied," with Patsy Ruth Miller and Ralph Ince.

Baltimore

BUSINESS for moving picture theatres is beginning to get back to normal since the ending of the Fair of the Iron Horse of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Halethorpe, Md. The strengthening of the attendance at matinees was noticeable during the week beginning Monday, October 17.

The best business in town for that week was done at the Stanley, where "Underworld" played to excellent houses matinees and evenings throughout the week and even had a fine house on the night of a terrific downpour. A stage act was on the same bill.

Following a close second the Stanley's business was Loew's Valencia, where "Beau Geste" was shown for the first time at popular prices here, it having been shown as a road attraction at Ford's, a legitimate house, some months ago. Big attendance resulted at the Valencia.

Although "Spring Fever" at Loew's Century was considered an excellent attraction, with Rita Owin, Burns and Kissen and the eight Tiller Girls on the same bill, the attendance was only fair for the week, but this might be attributed to the pulling power of "Underworld" at the 4,000 seated Stanley.

While the matinee attendance at Whitehurst's Garden with Tom Mix in "Tumbling River," and five acts of vaudeville, was good the nights were a bit off, only a fair business being done. However, at Keith's Hippodrome, "The Clown," with Dorothy Revier and five acts of vaudeville on the bill, a consistently good business was done throughout the week.

Also at Warners' Metropolitan "Slightly Used" and Vitaphone attractions proved a good drawing card and pulled them in very good.

"Passion" in its reissued form was given a week's engagement at Whitehurst's New Theatre, but business proved only fair, even with the Pola Negri-Emil Jannings combination.

Business at the Rivoli is gradually picking up and a fairly good week was had by that playhouse with "The Drop Kick" and John and Bill Mitchell, banjoists, also on the bill.

"The Red Kimono" went over only fairly well at the Plaza for two additional days for men only, with Social Hygiene lectures at the Plaza.

Kansas City

A STRONG lineup of pictures was greeted by an equally strong increase in box office receipts in Kansas City this week. Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton in "Now We're in the Air," at the Royal, packed them in to such an extent that it is believed the picture will run not less than three weeks.

At the Newman, Adolphe Menjou in "A Gentleman of Paris" played to large crowds all week, while the same can be said of Bert Lytell and Lois Wilson in "Alias the Lone Wolf" at the Liberty. "American Beauty," with Billie Dove, at the Mainstreet, also did a good week's business, as did "The Magic Flame" at the Globe.

No unusual exploitation stunts were used in conjunction with any of the pictures, but cool weather created a theatre spirit among theatre patrons and the exhibitors "cashed in."

Central Pennsylvania

IT was effectively demonstrated that it requires more than continuous, drenching rains to keep Harrisburg fans away from the pictures if high-class attractions are offered. There was scarcely an hour in the first five business days of the week when the rain was not descending in torrents, but none of the leading theatres suffered anything like a serious slump in box office returns.

"Ben Hur" was the feature at Loew's Regent, presented at popular prices for the first time in the city, although it had previously been shown at $1.50 top. The business was good throughout and the patrons well pleased. At the Colonial the public got a big kick out of the mystery play, "The Cat and the Canary," and the receipts were more than average. "The Way of All Flesh," with Emil Jannings, was the main morsel on the Victoria's menu, and quite satisfactory business was done there also.

A Paramount play, "Stark Love," was shown the last half of the week at the State, and, along with a clever vaudeville bill, attracted good crowds. Bebe Daniels, in "The College Flirt," was offered at the Rialto, one of the largest neighborhood houses, which went under new ownership the first of the month, the present owner being Isaac Marcus. Appropriate to the presence of the football season, the attraction at the Grand late in the week was Red Grange in "One Minute to Play," and "Red" had a big following.

As a counter attraction to the movies, the stock company shows being offered at the Majestic for a thirty-week period, which began October 1, by the Morgan Wallace Players, are reported to be doing well financially, although the movie theatre managers declare they can note no adverse effect on their business.

Tampa

TAMPA enjoyed (?) the first touch of winter this week, but it did not help show business at all. Tampans like warmth and chilly nights, especially the early ones, are spent alongside the old fireplace. So, the Tampa, which is a year old and is celebrating its first "Anniversary Week" with two excellent programs, did only average business. "The Drop Kick" was the feature of the first half and "Rose of the Golden West" the last half.

The Victory had a satisfactory week with "The Big Parade." It failed to prove the big draw that was expected and the receipts ran a litle less than the previous week with "Ben Hur."

The Strand had three good shows and the business was good. The features of the three programs were "The Gingham Girl," "Paid to Love" and "The Isle of Forgotten Women."

The Franklin kept up their average with their three changes, "Shootin' Irons," "Chain Lightning" and "Underworld." The latter was a second run.

Atlanta

ATLANTA theatres on the whole suffered last week primarily due to keen competition, each offering a good program.

The box-office card proved to be Dolores Costello in "The College Widow," playing at the Capitol. Miss Costello has a strong following in this city.

The Erlanger showed "King of Kings," against "What Price Glory," at Loew's Grand. Neither of these pictures did the business expected or that was due them. "What Price Glory" played to fairly good houses, but it did not display the drawing power accredited to it, the main cause being offered in its competition with another road-show. Both pictures received praise, especially "King of Kings."

George Bancroft and Chester Conklin in their Irish comedy, "Tell It to Sweeney," gathered an average house for Keith's Georgia. This team brought some good laughs.

"Now We're in the Air," at the Howard, offered a comedy team also. They succeeded in receiving good applause.

The Metropolitan played to an average house with "Fools of Fashion," featuring Mae Busch and Marceline Day. On the stage, Alli Axiom, crystal gazer, brought a good crowd.

The Rialto divided an average week between "By Whose Hand?", with Ricardo Cortez and Eugenia Gilbert, and "Not for Publication," with Ralph Ince. Both of these pictures were favorably received.

"Heart of the Yukon" and "Overland Stage" brought a better week than the average for the Tudor.

Des Moines

LAST week "Ben Hur" did a wonderful business at the Des Moines Theatre and was most enthusiastically received. Lockouts every night and a very good average for all shows. This week "Breakfast at Sunrise," with Constance Talmadge, is showing at the Des Moines and does not seem to be pulling very well. Publicity through her divorce does not seem to have done the star any good here. At the Capitol last week the picture attraction was "Shanghai Bound," a good picture for entertainment and it drew as well as the stage show bill. The picture attraction this week was also good with "Rose of the Golden West," which was heartily applauded and met with apparent approval. At the Strand, of the two pictures billed last week "The Blood Ship" perhaps averaged better than "Figures Don't Lie," though the audience seems a little tired of ship pictures. This week the "Tell It to Sweeney" comedy did well and "Body and Soul," with Lionel Barrymore, did a pretty good average. The weather has been most favorable the last two weeks.

Milwaukee

DOWN town theatres report business a little better this week than last, yet not up to what was expected. The Food Show at the Auditorium, which drew thousands daily, is said to have had an appreciable effect on business in the theatres. "American Beauty" was the popular attraction at the Wisconsin and played to good houses throughout the week. "The Way of All Flesh," with many of its scenes laid in Milwaukee, attracted a large number of Milwaukeeans and the Alhambra enjoyed unusually good business as a result. "The Missing Link" played only through Thursday at the Garden, where it attracted fair business. "The Life of Riley" at the Strand did good business all week. Patronage at the Merrill, where "Loves of Carmen" was featured, was fair.

Neighborhood houses felt the attraction of the Food Show even more than did the down town houses. The Uptown, Tower and Oriental showing "Chang" were fairly well attended. "Hula" made a strong bid for good business at the Savoy and Colonial. The Milwaukee found business good with "Hard Boiled Haggerty." A new policy has been announced for the Tower, Modjeska and Uptown theatres. Three acts of "big time" vaudeville from Loew's will be introduced with each change of program beginning October 23. Admission of 40c will remain the same. The Golden Hour is offered from 5:45 to 6:45 daily except Sunday at an admission charge of 30c.

Salt Like City

DOWNTOWN theatre business has averaged fairly good this week, although the weather conditions have been such as would encourage the crowds to seek their recreation out of doors.

Exploitation has been quite heavy, especially in connection with the personal appearance here of Mrs. Wallace Reed at the American and her picture, "The Satin Woman," which is reported to have done a good business.

The feature picture at the Capitol was Clara Bow in "Hula" and capacity houses were the rule. The Fanchon and Marco stage presentation was also a big drawing card at this house.

The screen adaptation of Gene Stratton Porter's widely read novel, "The Harvester," at the Gem Theatre here packed the house to overflowing, with the result that the box office had to be closed several times. This picture was also heavily exploited.

Richard Dix in "Shanghai Bound" was well received at the Paramount Empress and a fairly good business was enjoyed.

"The Poor Nut," with Jack Mulhall and Charlie Murray, topped the vaudeville bill offered at the Victory Theatre and the box office results were reported to have been very good.

The Pantages Theatre film offering for the past week was Reginald Denny in "Out All Night." Two big headliners on the stage were announced as being special attractions at this house and the usual crowded houses were the result.

John Gilbert in "Twelve Miles Out" drew good crowds at the Rialto, considering the fact that this was a second run, having been shown in this city not long ago at the Paramount Empress.

Atlanta

(Previous Week)

ATLANTA theatres divided receipts about equally last week, although no one of them reached a record box-office.

The Howard boasts of the most popular picture, "Magic Flame," with Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman. This circus romance received favorable comments from all local critics.

"The Chinese Parrot," with Marion Nixon and Hobart Bosworth, drew a good crowd to the Capitol, also, receiving commendatory mention in all newspapers.

Marceline Day and Ramon Navarro in "The Road to Romance," playing at Loew's Grand, did a good business.

The Metropolitan played to an average attendance with "The Drop Kick," featuring Richard Barthelmess.

"First Night" the first part of the week and "Arizona Bound" the latter half did fairly well at the Rialto.

The Tudor had a slack week with "The Slaver" the first part and "Mojave Kid" the latter part.

The New Alamo was doing a nice business until Thursday, when it suffered a fire in the projection room, destroying two first run feature pictures and one comedy. The theatre will be closed for ten days while repairs are being made.

Albany, Schenectady and Troy

APPARENTLY an adverse criticism of "Smile, Brother, Smile" did not affect the business done by the Leland theatre in Albany, last week, for the picture attracted capacity houses every night and played to good matinees, even though it did not appeal to the newspaper critic, who proceeded to rap the picture in no uncertain terms on Tuesday morning. At the Mark Ritz, "American Beauty" did very well, although it could ordinarily not be termed as a picture that possessed any great amount of drawing power. There was a surprise at the Mark Strand in "The Garden of Allah." It had been previously figured that this picture would not go over particularly big in Albany. While there were no standing lines in front of the theatre, the picture filled the house day in and day out, and generally pleased. The Clinton Square theatre, in Albany, which has been staging an exceptionally good comeback of late, continued to do capacity business last week with "Back Stage." Dorothy Gish, who is not much of a favorite in Albany, drew only fairly well with "Madame Pompadour" at Proctor's Grand. In Schenectady, the State theatre was jammed to the doors with the Dempsey-Tunney fight pictures being shown along with "Rose of the Golden West." The week was a big one for Schenectady's theatres, for "The Big Parade" was brought back to the Strand to buck the opposition showing of "What Price Glory" at the Van Curler. At the Troy theatre "Firemen, Save My Child" did nothing out of the ordinary in the way of business, while the Lincoln played "What Price Glory" to one whopper of a week that will be continued into a second week.

Minneapols

MINNEAPOLIS theatres enjoyed very good business last week, considering the strike was still on in full force and a perfect week of Indian summer weather tended to keep people out of doors.

Emil Jannings in "The Way of All Flesh" did a fine business at the Garrick and was held over for a second week. The State likewise played to fine houses, showing Richard Dix in "The Drop Kick" while interest in football was at white heat locally. Joe Cook, billed as the "funniest one-man vaudeville show in the world," appeared at the State in person, and the bill proved one of the most popular the State has had in some time. "Chang" ended its second week at the Strand and showed to fair crowds. Charlie Murray in "The Life of Riley" was the Lyric attraction, but it broke no records. Pantages gave "East Side, West Side" a lot of good advertising and found that the picture was a good drawing card. Margaret Morris' "The Magic Garden" proved a good program picture for the Hennepin-Orpheum. Business held up well at the neighborhood houses, including the Loring, Lagoon, Rialto and Lyndale, where such pictures as "Hula," "Resurrection" and "The Whirlwind of Youth" were on display.

Ottawa

EXTRAORDINARY variety and excellent calibre all around was the bill of fare for the motion picture theatre goers of Ottawa, Ontario, and Hull, Quebec, during the week of October 17, and any and all film tastes were satisfied in full measure.

"The Way of All Flesh" was voted a most excellent picture at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa. It was one of the best of many fine pictures presented recently and it pleased with a capital "P."

But the greatest crowds of the week thronged B. F. Keith's Theatre, where the film attraction was "The Country Doctor," a good old-fashioned dramatic thriller that ties 'em up in emotional knots. Marty Dupree's "Musical Follies," the vaudeville feature, also helped to draw the box-office line-up twice daily.

For out-and-out film comedy, the fans trooped to the Centre Theatre to see "The Gay Retreat," which is as funny as a war burlesque can be. Manager Don Stapleton sat behind a stack of greenbacks all week.

The ultra-serious was to be found at the Russell Theatre, where "The Eucharistic Congress" was presented on the screen under the auspices of Notre Dame Convent. It attracted fair attention.

For mystery and weirdness, the Laurier Theatre in Hull had them coming and going in large numbers with "The Cat and the Canary." This Universal special has been going great guns in Canada.

The action picture of the week was to be seen at the Eden Theatre, Hull, in "The Sunset Derby." This one drew the Eden regulars, but it was up against a formidable array of opposition films.

"Chicken Feed"

(Roach-Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

OUR GANG has a laughable two-reeler in "Chicken Feed." It is typical of a bunch of youngsters trying to emulate a magician after seeing his act. Farina's kid sister, Mango, is the victim of this prank, or rather the whole gang are victims when Mango turns up missing.

After witnessing the feat of the magician turning a youngster into a rabbit, they try the gag themselves and it has a disastrous ending. Mango is placed in the magic box and escapes unseen as the magic words are spoken, and there, in her place is a chicken, which, when liberated, flies over the fence and into the lap of a tramp, who proceeds to cook it and make a feast of it. And this, to all intents and purposes, is Mango. Farina, naturally, is much upset when she is offered the leg of Mango as a delicacy. However, after a final effort, Mango turns up again in the magic box to the amazement, delight and relief of the gang. This is better than any of the late releases of the Our Gang comedies.

"The Newlyweds Christmas Party"

(Universal—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS Christmas special, made a little more elaborately than the usual run of two-reelers should appeal particularly to the kiddies, but is not without its attractions for the grown-ups. There is not so much of the hilarious, boisterous comedy that dominates most of these pictures. It is toned down appropriately with enough of the humorous situations included to make it as funny as necessary, and at the same time it has an element that is fitting for the holidays.

A remarkable baby is Sunny McKeen as Snookums, a three-year-old with an apparent natural bent for acting and a personality that has rarely been equalled by a youngster on the screen. He is as cute as they come as host at the Christmas party at which he dispenses gifts to the motley and uncouth array of youngsters he picks off the streets and invites to his home for the occasion. This is a nifty little story and a very appropriate one that should be as appealing in the best houses as well as the smaller ones.

"The Masked Menace"

(Pathe Serial—Ten Episodes)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

CLARENCE BUDDINGTON KELLAND'S Saturday Evening Post story, "Still Face" has been converted into a serial, which gives promise, from the revelations of the first three chapters, of more than the usual amount of villainy, romance and excitement.

It is apparent that Larry Kent and Jean Arthur, who head the cast, are in for a deal of exciting adventure before the villain is turned up and the $200,000 in stolen bonds are returned to the girl, from whose father they were stolen ten years previously when he was slain by an adopted son.

The first chapter, entitled, "Against Odds," reveals the cold blooded murder of the girl's father and the theft of the remaining bonds by the adopted son. And so Faith Norton is left an orphan and practically impoverished, while the murderer makes his getaway.

The scene then is suddenly and mysteriously switched to the home of the wealthy Dodd family, which is trying to determine the future of the grown up son, whose leaning is toward mechanics, but whose father would make of him a banker. The son wins and starts out in the world to make his fortune. His first application is at the home of grandma Newton and the orphaned Faith Newton. The plucky grandma is about to reopen the abandoned mill in an effort to recoup the family fortune. The task of refitting the mill and getting it under way is given to young Keats L. S. Dodd.

Simultaneously with the arrival of young Dodd there appears in the village a mysterious character who is immediately known as "Still Face" because his expression never changes. And then the action really starts. Three mysterious prowlers are seen nightly about the Newton home. Young Dodd is immediately involved in an adventure in which he and his assailant are precipitated into the rushing waters of the mill stream. He also becomes involved in a fierce battle with the three prowlers and is bettering them when he is stabbed from behind by an unknown assailant.

There is every indication that things are going to steam up and become even more lively as the plot becomes more involved, if possible. At any rate, there will be plenty of thrills. The cast, in addition to Larry Kent and Jean Arthur, includes Thomas Holding, Laura Alberta, William Norton Bailey and John F. Hamilton. The Kelland story was directed by Arch Heath.

"A Fool and His Honey"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

QUITE a good story and one with more than the usual amount of color is this two-reeler of the Van Bibber series. It is more pretentious than the usual run of these short comedies. There are pretty girls in abundance and they cavort in and out of a beautiful swimming pool in lively fashion.

The story is built around the old newspaper circulation gag of contestants endeavoring to identify a roving representative from pictures printed in the paper. If identified, the question must be asked him; "Are you my loved one?" It so happens that Tyler Brooke, as Van Bibber visits a fortune teller at just that time and she bestows upon him a talisman that is expected to make any girl fall in love with him. He has been endeavoring without results to make Duane Thompson do just that.

Van Bibber closely resembles the man sought in the newspaper contest and he is pursued here, there and everywhere by about a hundred fair maidens, who are endeavoring to learn if he is their loved one. It's a lively two-reeler that would be better if the chase did not continue quite so long.

"Her Blue Black Eyes"

(Fox-Imperial—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

FOX seems to be putting some real effort behind its short comedies. The stories as a rule are well conceived and executed. They would be even better if they were toned down a bit in their comedy and such desperate attempts were not made to overcrowd them with humorous situations and gags.

Here is a story of a bullet proof vest, invented by the girl's father. It is a complete success, but it falls into the hands of the villain, who departs with it on the first steamer. The girl, Maria Casajuana, and her boy friend, Eddie Clayton, give chase and it is a lively chase to all parts of the steamer participated in by everyone aboard. There are a few real humorous comedy situations and gags, but there are too many of them crowded in and there is too much repetition of action. However, in all the hilarity the vest is recovered, the villain, Otto Fries, is humiliated and all ends happily.

"Captain Kidd's Kittens"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is a story that anyone under or over ten years of age will appreciate. It will bring back reminiscences of kid days to the grown-ups and is a lark that the youngsters will like because it is so true to nature. The kids beat it from school when the teacher's back is turned after she has drawn for them a Noah's ark and told them the story.

They conceive the idea of building an ark and supplying it with various and sundry animals, including an odoriferous pole-cat. Dogs of the neighborhood are disguised as lions, bears, etc., and all goes well until the pole cat breaks up the party and the animals escape through the city streets, thereby causing much consternation, if not alarm. Some splendid comedy is worked through the story and the kid cast does its work well.

"Argentina—The Rich"

(Fox Variety—One Reel)

BUT for pictures of this type few in America would have much of an idea of the large cities of other countries. Argentina, with its population of two million, is shown here and it is described as Paris' only rival in the Western world. There are some beautiful shots of Buenos Aires, the capital. There are others showing the lovely parks and the wealth of architectural splendors. A motor launch trip past El Tigre, the gay and fashionable water resort, reveals some wonderful scenery. It is a picture that is both entertaining and instructive. —CHESTER J. SMITH.

"Many Wings"—"Beside the Still Water"

(Educational—One Reel)

THE feathered folk are closely scrutinized in the first part of this Bruce Outdoor Sketch. To be sure, not all of the air denizens are met with here, but there are any number of gulls, pelicans and other sea-birds. They are photographed at rest on their rocks, in the niches of cliffs, on sandbars and low rocks just above the water, and flying with wings outspread. At all times they make a pleasing picture. The flocks of flying birds at times are so thick that, as a title mentions, they are like descending flakes of snow. Mr. Bruce has made use of the beautiful Pacific backgrounds for his bird pictures. With his innate artistic sense of pictorial values he has gotten intimate shots of all sorts of birds. There is one lovely shot in particular: a sandbar covered with birds, with water between them and the camera, and beyond them the surf with its tossing breakers.

The second part of the Sketch is made up of scenes of timber, meadows and soft flowing streams. The cameraman was looking for nature in a placid mood. The scenes here are all quiet and peaceful, and give an idea of stillness. The shots are unfolded in a lantern slide fashion, one scene fading into another with only three titles interspersed. The camera can take in the beauties of a scene and impart them a thousand times more easily than can the pen prompted by the human eye. We hope that audiences seeing scenics of this quality do not take them as a matter of course. Though thousands of beautiful spots have been filmed time and time again, we do not think a person can become satiated with them. Nature is too grand and sublime for that.

A distinctive number.—RAYMOND GANLY.

Jake the Plumber

A Leaky Tale of the Jews and Irish

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is another of the Irish-Jewish comedies, only in this one the Irish are largely eliminated. It is dedicated to the plumbers, as were some other photoplays of this company dedicated to the police, firemen and others. Just why an almost entirely Jewish picture should be dedicated to plumbers is as hard to understand as is some of the alleged comedy to appreciate. It is a picture full of leaks that a good plumber could probably improve upon.

Jess Devorska is Jake the apprentice to Fogarty, the Irish plumber, and his stipend is $12 a week, on which he must support his widowed mother and on which also he contemplated marriage to Sarah Levine. Fogarty, the Irish element remains in the story just long enough to fire Jake for asking a raise.

But Jake gets a break in luck just when he needs it most. The wife of a wealthy horseman faints in her car and Jake rescues her, for which he and his sweetheart are invited to the races the day of the big race. Jake is tipped off to bet all of the money he has accumulated from his $12 a week salary on the prospective winner and thereby establish himself financially for life. The jockey for this big steeplechase is found drugged just as the bugle is sounded for sadding. And then Jake shows his versatility. He has never ridden a horse, but is sure he can win on this one. He is given the mount and the horse finishes first, but apparently riderless. But no, Jake has slipped from the saddle, but is bound to the off-side of the horse and is therefor adjudged winner.

The Cast: Jess Devorska, Sharon Lynn, Rosa Rosanova, Ann Brodie, Bud Jamison, Carol Halloway, William T. Tooker, Dolores Brinkman.

THEME: Comedy in which a plumber's apprentice saves the life of a wealthy horseman's wife, for which he gets a tip on the steeplechase, rides the horse himself when the jockey is drugged, and wins the race and the girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The steeplechase. The comedy. The romance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The photoplay is dedicated to the plumbers.

DRAWING POWER: May go fairly well in cheaper houses.

Length, 5,186 feet. Released Oct. 16, 1927.

Broadway After Midnight

Underworld Picture Well Done

(Reviewed by E. G. Johnston)

AFTER the pronounced success of a certain picture of the underworld it was inevitable that others of this type would follow. It is the way of the picture business. This one, the first of a series to be produced by Sherman Krellberg and Bud Barsky under the trade name Krelbar, is an earnest effort on the part of its producers to portray the shady side of life in a city when Mr. Average Citizen is in bed. And they have succeeded very well; so well, in fact, that it is a bit gruesome in spots—'though only by suggestion. Priscilla Bonner heads an all-star cast, and for her work in a dual role, is entitled to praise. Matthew Betz, late of "The Patent Leather Kid," easily carries off the honors with his remarkably fine characterization of an underworld chieftain who finally becomes fatally enmeshed in his own intricate schemes.

What happens to a foolish little society girl who strays into the hands of one of the underworld chief's hirelings is part of the story. She shoots her betrayer. Queenie Morgan, a night club entertainer who has been forced into a marriage with the gang leader in order to shield her brother, by her strange resemblance to the other girl is made to take her place with a view of obtaining money from a wealthy parent. Then, the latter is done away with. In time, efforts of detectives trace the double crime to Queenie in her new environment, where a romance has developed with one of the upper circle. In court, a jury is about to bring in a verdict of guilty when her maid rushes in and spills the proverbial underworld "beans."

The Cast: Priscilla Bonner, Cullen Landis, Gareth Hughes, Matthew Betz, Ernest Milliard, Paul Weigel, Barbara Tennant, William Turner and Hank Mann. Directed by Fred Windermere.

THEME: Crook melodrama.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Good work of cast, cabaret shots and court room scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up well known names of cast and story.

DRAWING POWER: Present interest in pictures of this type predicts its popularity.

Produced and distributed by Krelbar Pictures Co.

Length, 6,199 feet. Released Nov. 1, 1927.

Pretty Clothes

A Stereotyped Story of a Misjudged Girl

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is little wonder that this type of story is so often repeated on the screen. With its sentimentality, its love interests, its wrongly judged heroine and is sincere, straightforward hero, who is in love with her, it has all of the ingredients to make it appealing. Further to the credit of this one it might be said it is done better than usual with Jobyna Ralston and Johnny Walker heading a good cast.

Miss Ralston has a most sympathetic role as the young girl of a poor family who gets a touch of night life when she is courted by Johnny Walker, as the son of a wealthy father. She craves pretty clothes and accepts them as a loan from a supposed friend of Johnny's, who, however, has been engaged by his father to show her up in a poor light. Johnny misjudges her when he is shown the bill for her clothes charged to his friend.

She feels her disgrace and is too ashamed to return home, so she wanders aimlessly about, living in a single room by herself until she learns that her mother is dying. There at the bedside of the dying mother the young couple are reconciled and everything is satisfactorily explained. It is almost sure-fire picture material if it has not been overdone.

The Cast: Jobyna Ralston, Gertrude Astor, Johnny Walker, Lloyd Whitlock, Charles Clary, Jack Mower, Lydia Knott.

THEME: Drama in which daughter of poor family falls in love with son of wealthy father. She accepts clothes as a loan from her lover's friend, is misjudged, but eventually they become reconciled and all ends happily.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The cabaret scenes. The fashion show. The romance. The reconciliation of the lovers at the bedside of the dying mother.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tie up fashion show with local shops. The cabaret life in New York. The all-around good cast.

DRAWING POWER: Should go well in almost any house.

Produced and distributed by Sterling Pictures.

Length 5,652 feet. Released Oct. 15, 1927.

A Reno Divorce

A Tale of Renovated Loves

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS story would be better titled, if, as the press sheet suggests, it were called, "Reno-vated Lives." It is a cleanup of a lot of love tangles, all of which follow the Reno divorce sequences, with which the picture opens.

Of course, like most of these stories there is little logical about it, but it does have enough quips and turns of the unexpected order to fairly hold the interest from start to finish. When it is all over one wonders, "Well, what of it?" but the fact remains that it has been interesting.

Neither May McAvoy nor Ralph Graves, who plays opposite her, is a partieipant in the Reno divorce, but each is sought by one of the divorced pair, Miss McAvoy by Robert Hopper, an admirable young man in spots, and Graves by Hedda Hopper, a none too alluring vamp.

Were it not for the fact that an odd turn was injected here and there it would be just another motion picture, but these unexpected happenings lift it a bit above the ordinary. Ralph Graves, who wrote the story, also directed it, so he knew just what he wanted from his cast and he succeeds in getting it. Nearly all of the roles are well enacted.

The Cast: May McAvoy, Ralph Graves, Hedda Hopper, Robert Hopper, William Demarest, Anders Randolf, Edwards Davis. Director, Ralph Graves.

THEME: Drama in which friend of divorced couple falls in love with disinherited and struggling artist, who is also loved by the divorcee. There are many complications, which, when unravelled, bring a happy conclusion to the story.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The romance and the settings. The gambling party. The swimming pool sequence.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The title. The rich display of gowns. The wonderfully artistic settings and the good cast.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Warner Bros.

Length 5,492 feet. Released Oct. 22, 1927.

Soda Water Cowboy

Wally Wales As An Embryo Deputy

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

HERE'S a tale of an erstwhile soda water clerk who, fired from his job, took Horace Greeley's advice and hiked West to the wide open spaces. Wally's weakness for actionful Western stories cost him his hum-drum job, but in the West he believes he can satisfy his desires for up-and-at-'em combat with villains who have frail heroines in their toils. And sure enough, not before long he has vanquished several desperados bent on stealing a pretty girl's car. In reward for this Galahad performance, the youthful Wales is made a deputy sheriff.

Of a different tinge are many aspects of the story. The hero is ofttimes boobyish with his love-smitten antics. The girl in the case is a fortune teller instead of the customary ranch-owner. Time and time again the heavies have things their own way, and it seems only through "dumb luck" that Wally ever captured them at all. In the to-be-expected manner, however, the villains are finally subdued and Wally and the fortune teller unite in osculations.

Wales makes his boyish cock-sure role plausible. Beryl Roberts decorates the cast as heroine very prettily. Her eccentric father in the picture, J. P. Lockney, contributes most of the comedy. Though a somewhat different Western, it is of ordinary calibre.

The Cast: Wally Wales, Beryl Roberts, J. P. Lockney, Charles Whitaker, Al Taylor. Director, Richard Thorpe.

THEME: Jobless soda clerk bums his way West and gets mixed up in a projected robbery. He saves the girl and is made deputy sheriff with further opportunities for heroism. After the villains have outwitted him for a time, he subdues them and wins the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Freight-car scenes. Wally's capturing of villain. Romance between him and the girl. Wally's muffing of chances to shine as deputy and his eventual comeback.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Your regular methods of exploitation apply here.

DRAWING POWER: Appropriate for second-run and neighborhood showings.

Produced by Lester F. Scott., Jr. Distributed by Pathe.
Length, 4,546 feet. Released, September, 1927.

East Side, West Side

Rather Conventional But it Satisfies

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS film adaptation of a best seller has been done adequately enough, all things considered. It contains a wealth of incident, some suspensive situations, adequate atmosphere and a creditable display of acting. The action runs through a course of melodramatic sprouts which take in several sections of Manhattan—and there is certainly enough doing in the way of holding one's interest. Allan Dwan, the director, may have become conventional in fashioning a few hokum episodes, but he has injected enough spirit and color to make the picture thoroughly satisfying.

The central figure is an Irish youngster reared on the lower East Side by a Yiddish family. It develops that he becomes a prize-fighter. Since George O'Brien has the role he more than humanizes it and makes it plausible. The story guides him through several hectic adventures in which the good old heart interest plays an important factor. The youth's real father enters the action to provide the pathos.

The picture has sharp contrasts and occasionally a scene will project itself which is far from realistic insofar as the conduct and deportment of the characters are concerned. But it moves at a good pace and shows a variety of backgrounds, which, coupled with the character development, shapes it up as first rate fare.

The Cast: George O'Brien, iVrginia Valli, J. Farrell MacDonald, Dore Davidson, June Collyer, John Miltern, Holmes Herbert, Frank Dodge, John Dooley, Edward Garvey, Gordon McRae, John Kearney. Director, Allan Dwan.

THEME: Drama of youth reared in lower East Side who, after suffering rubuffs, develops his character and wins.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Shipboard scene. Miniatures. Atmosphere of East Side. Subway cave-in. Fine performances by O'Brien and Virginia Valli. Atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tie up with book-stores, etc. Feature O'Brien as star of "Sunrise." Use atmosphere. Feature with melodies of New York.

DRAWING POWER: Title should attract. Also cast. O. K. for any type of house.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by Fox Films.
Length, seven reels. Released, October, 1927.

Two Arabian Knights

Broad Comedy Here and Sure to Please 'Em

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ANOTHER take-off on army life is exposed through celluloid again—and make no mistake its there with the comedy and high jinks. The yarn is truly a hilarious one which strikes out on a funny key and maintains its mirth all of the way. Those who saw the stage version of "What Price Glory" will remember Louis Wolheim who played Capt. Flagg. Well, Louis bobs up here with a try at the films again after appearing years ago in some up-and-at-'em melodrama. And he contributes a real humorous sketch as one of the doughboys imprisoned in a German prison camp. The other soldier is played by William Boyd—a role conceived for the sake of contrast.

The adventures take the boys into all sorts of difficulties. They even bob up in an Arabian harem. Starting out as sergeant and buck private respectively they become buddies—and then the fun begins. They escape from the camp, get to Constantinople and eventually find themselves aboard a ship bound for Arabia. Once on Arabian soil their didoes continue apace until they kidnap a cutie, veil and all.

It's all good fooling and clowning on the part of Wolheim, Boyd and the others of a competent cast. Louis sees to the humor and Bill to the romance. Between them and Mary Astor they've kept it going at a smart pace. The subtitles are nifty and to the point. In all a good number—and sure to please.

The Cast: William Boyd, Mary Astor, Louis Wolheim, Michael Vavitch, Ian Keith, De Witt Jennings, Boris Karloff. Director, Lewis Milestone.

THEME: Comedy of two doughboys who escape from German prison camp and get into all sorts of adventures.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Comedy. Scenes in camp. Conflict between sergeant and private. Arabian episodes. Love interest. Subtitles.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease title. Feature Wolheim with stills, etc. Play up Boyd and Miss Astor. Bill as comedy of doughboys. Tie up with Legion posts, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Produced and distributed by United Artists.
Length, seven reels. Released, October, 1927.

The Fair Co-Ed

A Sprightly Picture With Star in Her Element

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS excursion into romance and adventure—and what have you—on the campus is calculated to be accepted everywhere as a tip-toppy number. Well staged, acted with spirit and abandon by Marion Davies, whose flair for comedy was never given better expression, productive of real mirth spontaneously achieved by incident which carries ideas well conceived—and, best of all, conducting itself with youthful verve and enthusiasm—the piece takes on real character which stamps it as one of the better documents.

The central idea itself is no great shakes, but the manner in which it is embroidered with deftly humorous touches makes it bright and amusing. The chief character is a resourceful girl who matriculates at dear old Bingham, and who must pout and indulge in temperament before she is willing to die for her alma mater. The incident is laughable when the collegiates get around the flivver ban by resorting to all kinds of locomotion to reach the campus. The college flavor is abundant here.

Miss Davies develops a real character study of the basketball player who refuses to play for Bingham until the coach kisses her in the manner to which she is accustomed. The finish finds her being forgiven by the student body. It's exaggerated in places, but it rings true most of the time. Book it and brighten the minds of your constituents.

The Cast: Marion Davies, John Mack Brown, Jane Winton, Thelma Hill, Lilliane Leighton, Gene Stone. Director, Sam Wood.

THEME: Light comedy of campus life—with star basketball player of girls' team as central figure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Antics of star. Fits of temperament. Basketball game. Campus incident. Romance. Collegiate atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Tease title and go after school and college patronage. Make appeal to younger set. Play up star as talented comedienne.

DRAWING POWER: Title, star and spirit of picture will attract them. For any house.

Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
Length, seven reels. Released, October, 1927.

New York & New Jersey

EVERYONE who attended the opening of the new Fortway theatre last Friday evening at Fort Hamilton avenue and 68th Street, Brooklyn, voted that house to be one of the finest neighborhood motion picture theatres every built. Many comments were heard that it should occupy a downtown site.

The Fortway is another of the atmospheric type theatres to invade Brooklyn neighborhoods, Universal's John Eberson-designed theatre on New Utrecht avenue being the other. Praise from the film trade and patrons predict that houses of this design will grow in popularity in this section. The Fortway seats approximately 2,400 and is of stadium type.

The inaugural performance was marked by the attendance of large delegations of exhibitors and exchange men, not to mention all the neighborhood politicians who always take advantage of these dedicatory ceremonies to sneak in a little personal ballyhoo.

The Fortway is owned and operated by the Fortway Amusement Corp., Samuel Lesselbaum, president. Donald Flamm is another active member of the organization.

The Stanley-Fabian theatre circuit has added another house to its ever-increasing chain by the acquisition of Henry P. Nelson's Capitol theatre, Elizabeth, N. J. Mr. Nelson is Secretary of the New Jersey M. P. T. O.

Rumors last week to the effect that George Cohen of Poughkeepsie and Newburgh had invaded the New Jersey Oranges by taking over the theatre holdings of Louis Rosenthal remain unconfirmed up to this writing, although further gossip would indicate that the deal was successfully negotiated. It has been reported in the past that the Rosenthal theatre properties were on the market.

Having recently broken ground for a large, new theatre between 8th and 9th street in the South Brooklyn section, it is said that Loew, Inc., is experiencing some difficulty in obtaining a clear permit on account of some neighborhood restrictions. However, it is believed that matters will be smoothed out in the near future.

We were only last week remarking on the success of Eddie Canter's management of the Alhambra theatre, Brooklyn, when this week word comes that Mr. Canter is seriously ill in the Lebanon hospital. All his friends extend their sympathy.

It is reported that Henry Grossman has sold his interest in the New United theatre to his partner, Moreci.

The Montmartre theatre, a small house of the New York Cameo type in the downtown shopping district of Brooklyn, is reported to have been taken over this week by the B. S. Moss circuit.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Seider and Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Kelly returned last Saturday from a week's motor trip in Canada.

The following changes of theatre management have been made in the A. H. Schwartz theatre organization of Brooklyn:

W. L. Edgell, formerly in charge of the Rialto is now manager of the Farragut theatre. A. Z. Freedman, former manager of the Washington theatre and a newcomer to the Schwartz circuit, is assistant-manager at the Farragut.

S. Wormser, a former Schwartz manager and a brother of Irving Wormser, has returned to take charge of the Rialto theatre, Flatbush.

A theatre site at Merrick road and Jamaica avenue, Jamaica, L. I., said to have been abandoned by Publix as one of their de luxe neighborhood projects, is the scene of much activity, steam shovels, etc., these days. It is reported that Loew Theatres has a house under way there. You can "make your own book" on this one.

Another theatre site where excavating is taking place these days is the corner of Eastern Parkway and St. Johns Place, Brooklyn, where it is said that the B. S. Moss circuit is putting up a fine, new theatre, part of this company's large building program for 1927-28.

A few blocks down St. Johns Place toward Bedford Avenue, Kingston Avenue to be exact, Keith's Riviera still remains closed for reasons peculiar to the motion picture trade. It is said that this house is on the market.

The S. & A. theatre, 125th Street and Broadway, Harlem, according to report, will operate only Saturdays and Sundays for the present.

Manager Blum, of the Harry Harris West End theatre, has lately resigned his position as manager of that house.

Louis Barbash is in charge of Schwartz and Smith's new Elton theatre on New Utrecht Avenue, Brooklyn, and we venture to predict a hard tussle for Mr. Barbash with the strong competition of the recently opened big Universal theatre but a few blocks away. The Elton is owned by the Elton Amusement Co.

Manager McCarty, of the Heights Amusement Company, theatre operators of the Brooklyn Heights section, is now supervising bookings, etc., for the Gold, Heights and Boro Hall theatres.

The Whitehall theatre, a house with the distinction of having one of the most unique locations in New York City, Battery Place, was recently opened by Harry Harris, theatre circuit operator. Before being acquired by the Harris circuit, the Whitehall was the property of Clarence Cohen and Maxwell Pratt, both the latter being responsible for the construction of this house.

Loew's Plaza Theatre, a new theatre located at Roosevelt and Alburtis Avenues, Corona, L. I., will be formally opened the evening of November 17, with N. T. G. and his radio celebrities "in person" in addition to the combination feature picture and vaudeville program. The addition of the Plaza Theatre gives the Loew chain more than 6 theatres in the Queens area.
